GOVERNMENT HOLDS BIG CORPORATIONS MUST YIELD TO LAW

Position of Department of Justice Told By Associated Press.

Steel Trust Is Receiving Close Attention From Officials.

Dissolution Would Present Many Complicated Problems.

Bretton Woods, N. H., Sept. 22.—Attorney General Wickersham this afternoon authorized the following statement:

"No arrangements for the dissolution of the Steel trust have been made, or so far as I am aware, proposed to the department of justice."

Washington, Sept. 22.—Recent reports to the effect that the attorneys for large combinations of corporations and their principals also were hoping for some general understanding with the government authorities concerning the application of the anti-trust law, and that some of them had gone to the attorney-general to ascertain what action, if any, may be necessary to make them stand right in the eyes of the government, was the subject of much discussion here today.

The Associated Press is in a position to state the following attitude of the department of justice:

"The position of the attorney-general, as frequently stated by him, is that since the decisions of the supreme court in the oil and tobacco cases, to quote the language employed by him in his speech at Battle Creek, Mich., the area of uncertainty in the law has been greatly reduced and the meaning of the statute in its application to great monopolistic operations made clear.

Action is Necessary.

"This makes it necessary for those combinations to resolve themselves into a number of distinct, separate entities, no one of which shall be in

BOARDERS DIE IN BURNING HOUSE

Youngstown, Ohio, Sept. 22.—At least four persons were burned to death and more than a dozen others were seriously injured in a fire here early today which for a time threatened to destroy a large part of the town.

The blaze followed the bursting of an eight-inch gas main near a Polish boarding house, which, filling quickly with gas, caught fire and was burned to the ground in a few minutes. The police believe the bodies of additional victims will be found in the ruins. The dead were Polish workingmen.

TAFT HALTS AT PEORIA

President Is Guest of Knights of Columbus in That City.

Refers to Canadian Election With Words of Regret.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 22.—A cloudless sky greeted President William H. Taft, who arrived here at 6:30 o'clock this morning on his special train from Kalamazoo. The Knights of Columbus, whose guest he is, had arranged a busy day for him.

Leaving the car at 8 o'clock this morning, the president was escorted to the Creve Coeur club, where he was tendered a breakfast by Rev. Edmund M. Dunne, bishop of the diocese of Peoria, at which about forty priests of the diocese and members of the Knights of Columbus were present.

Leaving the club house at 10 o'clock, the presidential party was given an automobile ride through the downtown district and prominent residence district, bringing up at the Country club at noon, where a luncheon was tendered by the Republican state central committee.

Met Party Workers.

All Republican congressmen, state officers, Republican members of the legislature and the chairman and secretary of Republican county committees in Central Illinois were invited, and more than 200 accepted.

At 3 o'clock the president was taken to the clubhouse of the Knights of Columbus where a reception was tendered him, cards having been issued to 500 prominent citizens.

From 4:30 to 6 o'clock he will rest at the home of Mrs. W. A. Herron, a relative of his wife, and at 6:30 o'clock he will be the guest of honor and deliver an address on "Columbus and the Philippines," at the annual banquet of the Knights of Columbus. He will leave at midnight for St. Louis.

Eager for Canadian News.

President Taft got up early today and scanned the papers eagerly for more complete returns from the Canadian election than were available last night. The certain defeat of the government and reciprocity was plain, but

IS INVESTIGATING STEEL CORPORATION

FREDERICK W. LEHMANN,
Solicitor General of the United States.

WITNESSES NOTIFIED

Prosecution Ready to Start Testimony in Dumas Case Monday.

Expected That Jury Will Be Completed By Saturday Afternoon.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—With Coroner Ibertson serving a special venire for twenty jurymen to be examined for jurors in the Dumas arson case, returnable in district court tomorrow at 9 o'clock, and with no other open court matters being taken up in connection with the famous case, there is a certain amount of quietness today, but discussion of the case is rife and there is much speculation as what the state will introduce at the trial. The Cass Lake mayor is not in Bemidji today, and both Judge SEpooner and Freeman Plane of counsel for Dumas say they have nothing to say relative to the case or any angle of it. E. E. McDonald of this city, associated with Mr. James in the state's prosecution of Dumas, says that the state hopes that

SAYS SHE HAD TO KILL "PROTECTOR"

Louisiana Woman Accuses Student Whom She Shot.

Opelousas, La., Sept. 22.—To protect her honor, Mrs. J. P. McCrea says she shot and killed Allen Garland, a Tulane college student, while the young man was at her home. Mrs. McCrea is in jail.

Garland often had been called upon by Mr. McCrea to spend the night at his home to protect his wife and children when he was away for the night.

Mr. McCrea is a division superintendent on the Frisco railway. Garland's family is one of the most influential in this part of the state.

TERRIFIC STORM SWEEPS ITALY

Great Loss of Life and Much Damage in Vesuvian District.

Naples, Sept. 22.—A terrific storm swept the Vesuvian district today, causing loss of life and great damage to property. Twenty persons are known to have been killed, while the fate of whole families is in doubt.

COMPANIES IN CONGO WORRY OVER GERMANY.

Paris, Sept. 22.—The companies doing business in the French Congo have sent collective inquiries to the ministry of the colonies as to what indemnity the government would offer them in the event the territories within which they were operating were transferred to Germany as an outcome of the Moroccan negotiations.

The minister of the colonies, M. Lebrun, replying, stated that Germany would respect all concessionary rights and would carry out the engagements which had been made with France.

DEEP REGRET OVER DEFEAT OF LAURIER

"Good for Canada" Says A. D. Thomson—Higher Flour Prices.

In the defeat of Sir Wilfred Laurier, premier of Canada, and his policies, carrying with it the rejection of the reciprocity agreement with the United States, Duluth is deeply disappointed.

That is shown by the expressions of thousands of Duluth people, who this morning discussed the results of the Canadian election with a feeling akin to that which is generated by the defeat of a favorite candidate or a favorite issue on this side of the border.

The interest taken by Duluth people in the Canadian election was exceeded only by that taken in a presidential election in the United States. The disappointment in the defeat of Laurier and the reciprocity agreement is keen.

Duluth would probably have shared more generously in the results of the reciprocity agreement, had it been ratified by the Canadian people, than any other community in the United States. With a direct railroad line completed to the grain fields of Western Canada, this port would have been the gateway through which a great volume of travel would pass on its way to the markets of the world. The board of trade would have extended its scope to include the Canadian fields and the volume of business cleared through Duluth would consequently have been greater. The agreement would have given great im-

HOLD RITES FOR E. H. MADISON

Score of Congressmen Attend Services at Dodge City, Kan.

Dodge City, Kan., Sept. 22—With a score of senators and representatives appointed by the national government present, and a wide representation of prominent Kansans attending, the funeral of Representative Edmond H. Madison was held here today. All business houses in the city were closed.

Seven hundred school children in white stood at the entrance, bareheaded, as the procession entered the church. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Thompson of Topeka, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church here and a life-long friend of Mr. Madison.

LIBERALS AND RECIPROCITY ARE CRUSHED AT POLLS IN CANADA

EXCITEMENT IN MARKETS

Wheat Has Sharp Bulge, Due to Defeat of Reciprocity.

Stocks Slump Rapidly But Recover Almost as Quickly.

The wheat markets were scenes of excitement at the opening this morning, due to the defeat of reciprocity in the Canadian elections. Shorts ran to cover with a rush and the market was filled with buying orders. September wheat opened 5 cents higher at $1.07 on the Duluth board and had another advance of 2½c. Then it fell off to $1.08 but had another bulge to $1.10¼ and ruled strong to the close. Wild times were reported on the Minneapolis board and prices went soaring, while there was quite a bulge at Chicago, though not so great as in the Duluth and Minneapolis markets. At Kansas City wheat jumped up 3 cents at the opening with wild trading, following a gradual subsidence. While the advance in the New York produce exchange was not as pronounced as in Northwestern markets, wheat had an excited opening, the dominating factor being the defeat of reciprocity. Shorts were active buyers. Undoing of straddles was also a factor of the advance. Sentiment was very bullish on the belief that there will be a shortage of spring wheat for milling purposes owing to damage by drouth and black rust during our growing season. Buying was checked by the semi-demoralized condition of the stock market and poor export demand.

CHICAGO PEDDLER SHOOTS HIS WIFE

Jealous Man Then Fires Two Bullets Into His Own Breast.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Following a two months' separation, Albert Stackney, alias "Shorty Al," a peddler, today shot his wife, Mrs. Etta Stackney, through the right lung, and after being chased by neighbors, who heard the shot, fired two bullets into his left breast. Both wounded were taken to the hospital, where it is believed they will die. Jealousy is believed to be the motive for the shooting.

FRAMER OF TRADE AGREEMENT BEATEN

W. S. FIELDING,
Canadian Minister of Finance, Whose Name Appears on the Reciprocity Agreement With That of Secretary Knox, and Who Was Defeated in Thursday's Election.

SOLVER OF BIG LABOR PROBLEMS VOTED OUT

W. L. MACKENZIE KING,
Minister of Labor for Canada, Whose Work Is Said to Have Saved Over $3,500,000 to the Dominion Through the Operation of the Lemieux Act, But Who Went Down With His Chief in Thursday's Election.

WILL BECOME THE PREMIER OF CANADA

R. L. BORDEN,
Conservative Leader, Who Won a Tremendous Victory at the Polls Thursday, Making His Strongest Fight Against Laurier's Plan for Reciprocity With the United States.

FORMER DULUTHIAN DEFEATED IN QUEBEC

JACQUES BUREAU,
Solicitor-General of Canada.

Mr. Bureau, who was beaten in reelection by a Nationalist in Three Rivers, Que., practiced law in Duluth a number of years ago in partnership with Judge J. E. Davies. Having been left a small fortune by the death of a relative, Mr. Bureau returned to his old home in Quebec and was twice elected to parliament, finally being assigned the post of solicitor-general.

BORDEN IS TO BE THE PREMIER

Conservatives Are Given a Majority of Forty-Nine at Ottawa.

Ontario Gives Most Stinging Blow of All to Laurier.

Government's Best Showing Is Made in the West.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Canada awakened today confronted by a startling new situation, developed from the fact that reciprocity with the United States has been rejected, that the Laurier government has been defeated, and that R. L. Borden will shortly be called upon to form a conservative ministry.

That the changes enacted during the last twenty-four hours by the registration of the will of the electorate are radical is shown by the overwhelming majority whereby the voters turned down the agreement which Laurier had made with the United States for the mutual removal of duties on food and other natural products, by the defeat of seven cabinet ministers out of thirteen who went to the polls and by the political landslide which will retire to private life Sir Wilfrid Laurier, acknowledged to be one of the biggest figures in the British empire.

Out of nine Canadian provinces, only Quebec, Laurier's native place, came anywhere near remaining faithful to him, and Quebec did not do any too well.

Ontario, the greatest of the provinces, dealt Laurier a terrible blow, going almost solidly against him, and the same may be said also of Manitoba and British Columbia. Saskatchewan and Alberta, two great wheat raising provinces, gave a mild support to the cause of reciprocity.

The result by provinces, as expressed

HEAVY EARTHQUAKE SHOCK RECORDED

Vibrations of Unusual Intensity Shown By the Seismograph.

Washington, Sept. 22.—An earth shock of unusual intensity was recorded shortly after midnight by the instruments at Georgetown university. The disturbance began at 12:17 o'clock, ending at 12:51. At 12:27 o'clock the greatest agitation was recorded, the registration being 28 millimeters. Usually two or three millimeters are registered. No estimate of the distance of the earthquake from Washington was made by the observers.

JUST SUITS JOHN BULL

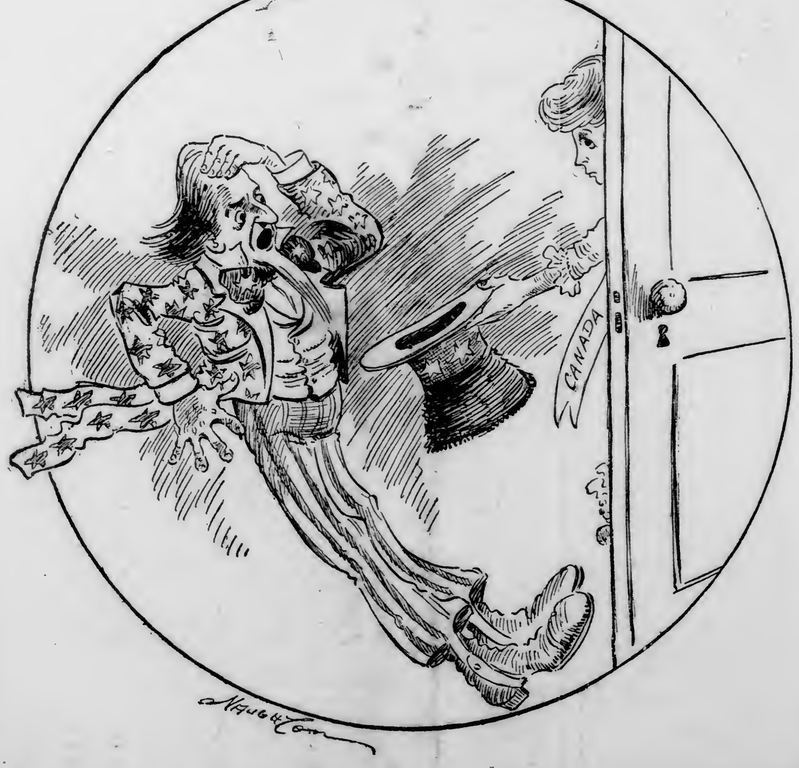
Canadian Election Result Is Approved—Comment By the Press.

Canadian Opposition Papers Say That Traitors Are Rebuked.

London, Sept. 22.—The overwhelming defeat of Premier Laurier and the Liberal government's policy of reciprocity with the United States, at the polls in Canada yesterday, came as a surprise to England.



It had been expected that the Liberal majority would be decreased, but even the strongest opponents of reciprocity had not so much as suggested such a majority against the Canadian-American agreement as the Conservative leader, Mr. Borden, obtained.

The result generally is welcomed here, as Englishmen had felt that the trade arrangement presaged closer political relations between the neighbors and a consequent loosening of the imperial ties.

There was a slight relapse in American securities on the stock exchange this morning, following the news of the Liberal defeat, but prices soon re-

CHAMP CLARK BLAMES TAFT

Says President's Eagerness Had Much Influence in Canada.

Also Suggests American and English "Corruption Funds."

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 22.—When Champ Clark, speaker of the national house of representatives, arrived today to be the guest of the Tennessee state fair, he was asked if his supposed humorous remarks about annexation some time ago had not aided in the defeat of the reciprocity proposition by Canada yesterday.

Mr. Clark wrote the following statement:

"My remarks about annexation did not do half as much to defeat reciprocity in Canada as did President Taft's speech, in which he insisted on hurrying up agreeing to reciprocity in this country before Great Britain could establish her imperial policy of a tariff with preferential rates for the colonies.

"He and I were both quoted by the anti-reciprocity crowd of Canada, he more than I, but the chances are that the quotations from his speeches and mine did not have half so much to do with defeating reciprocity as did the corruption funds sent from both this country and Great Britain into Canada.

"CHAMP CLARK."

Taft Greatly Disappointed.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 22.—President Taft heard the returns from the Canadian elections here last night while attending a banquet tendered him by the citizens of the city.

"I am greatly disappointed," he said. Further than this Mr. Taft declined to discuss the subject.

After he has analyzed the complete

LA FOLLETTE TELLS HIS STORY

Autobiography Says Circumstances Made Him "a Pioneer."

New York, Sept. 22.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin has the introductory chapter of his autobiography in the American Magazine, about to appear. In it he relates his entry into politics, his first contest for a congressional seat, and outlines the progressive movement, of which he writes:

"The essence of the progressive movement, as I see it, lies in its struggle to uphold the fundamental principles of representative government. It expresses the hopes and desires of millions of common men and women who are willing to fight for the ideals, to take defeat if necessary, and still go on fighting.

Calls Himself Pioneer.

"Fortunes of birth, temperament and political environment have thrown me into this struggle, have made me in some degree a pioneer in the progressive movement."

Senator La Follette sketches his early political struggles and pictures the political parties and tendencies of the time.

Party ties and alignment, he declares, are vanishing with the glories of the old parties, and he writes:

"It is a sign of a robust political health in these days that every young man must have his conclusive reasons for voting the Republican or the Democratic ticket; men must think for themselves—and in that fact lies the great hope for the future for the nation."

EXCITMENT IN MARKETS

selling orders in the common stock of the United States Steel corporation at the opening of the stock market this morning broke the price of that security over 4 points. The selling was the result of continued fears that the reports from Washington that the Steel corporation could not continue in its present form and would have to dissolve were true. The London market gave forecast that the heavy selling of Steel stocks which was inaugurated yesterday in this market would be resumed on a heavy scale again today. Steel common was down about 4 points in London, and when the gong sounded on the exchange here there was a rush to sell Steel. The first transaction was a sale of 45,000 shares from 54 to 55½. The stock closed last night at 58½. The transaction was one of the largest in recent years and caused the Steel common to sell at the lowest point since 1909. Steel securities still continued to be pressed upon the market and the common stock subsequently fell to 53½.

There was fairly heavy selling in Steel preferred, 200 shares being sold at 103½, a loss of 2½ points from the closing of last night. Within a half hour after the market had opened 200,000 shares of Steel common had been thrown on the market.

The slump in Steel had its effect throughout the general list, and there were declines of from 1 to 4 points in industrial and railroad stocks. It was noted, however, that the decline which the market had had within the last six weeks had given it much strength to withstand the unexpected liquidation in Steel securities.

It seemed to be the general belief in Wall Street that the Steel corporation had received intimation from the Federal government that it could not continue in its present form. Another factor in the decline of the stocks of the Steel corporation was the continued reports of a diminishing business in steel products. The defeat of reciprocity added to the weakness of the market.

After the violent break in prices, there was a decided change of front, and United States Steel, both common and preferred, made up its losses, while almost all the rest of the list rallied above yesterday's close. The violence of the rally was largely due to a rant of the bears, who began to bid against the bulls for stocks to cover their short contracts. There were recessions later, and Steel felt the weight of further liquidation.

TAFT HALTS AT PEORIA

the president had nothing to say before he left his private car to take up the day's program. He made his first reference of the day to the Canadian elections when he spoke briefly to the workers at a local agricultural implement plant.

"I am sorry," said the president, "to hear that in Canada they did not care to have closer commercial relations with us."

Coming down from Kalamazoo last night, the president's special hit up a gait that a railroad man aboard put at close to sixty miles an hour. One stretch of seventy miles south of Niles, Mich., was covered in eighty minutes.

Talked in Three Towns.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 22.—President Taft brought to a close his four-day swing through Michigan last night and headed for the West. His last day in Michigan found the president speaking in Grand Rapids, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo. The Grand Rapids address was one of the president's set speeches on the tariff and hit vetoes of the wool, cotton and farmers' free list bills, and in Battle Creek he talked of Canadian reciprocity and laid the annexation bogey, and wound up the day here with a speech on peace and arbitration.

In every town visited there were the same crowds eager to see the president. The speech in Grand Rapids was delivered in a drizzling rain from a grand stand in Campau square, but several thousand people listened attentively in spite of the discomfort.

MINNETONKA "SUMMER CAPITAL SITE" IS SOLD.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Taft has lost his happy summer home. At least, he's lost it at Lake Minnetonka. The F. B. Wells estate on Bald Hill, which 'Tonka residents proprosed giving the president if he would come there to live, has been sold. It will be cut up into lots and small residences built thereon.

PLACE FLOWERS ON GRAVE OF GOVERNOR JOHNSON.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. John A. Johnson, wife of the late governor, placed flowers on his grave at St. Peter yesterday, the second anniversary of his death. Col. Paul Doty, Col. David Wallblom, W. L. Wylie and Col. E. Murphy of the Twin Cities also went to the grave with flowers.

There was no observance of the anniversary at the capitol.

AFFECTIONS ALIENATED

Mrs. Julia Himes Wants $10,000 for Loss of Her Husband.

Claims That Mrs. Nellie Chapman Enticed Him From Home.

Mrs. Julia Himes is suing Mrs. Nellie Chapman for $10,000 for the alienation of her husband's affections. The case is going on before Judge Dibell of the district court.

Mrs. Himes claims that she married Frank J. Himes in 1907 and that while she was absent from Duluth during the month of June, 1910, Mrs. Chapman enticed her husband to her home at West Duluth.

There the couple have been living from that time, it is claimed. Mrs. Chapman claims, however, that Himes is but a boarder at her home.

The plaintiff claims that for a long time past her husband has refused to either live with her or support her. She has been working in a local restaurant as a cook so as to support herself, it is said.

Mrs. Chapman's home is in West Duluth and a large number of her neighbors were in the courtroom this morning to hear the evidence in the case. Many of them are being used as witnesses for either one side or the other.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Himes was on the stand and told how, when she went on a visit outside the city, her husband was weaned away from his home by Mrs. Chapman.

This morning Mrs. Chapman was on the stand She admitted that she had fitted out Mr. Himes with a suit of clothes which had belonged to her dead husband. She stated, however, that Himes purchased the clothes from her.

She said that she had loaned Himes money at different times but that it had all been paid back. At the present time, she says, he owes her for three weeks' board.

A. E. McManus represents the plaintiff and C. O. Baldwin represents the defendant in the case.

MAYOR WROTE TO WRONG MAN

Mr. Dinwiddie says that he has troubles of his own and that Mayor Cullum was undoubtedly laboring under a wrong impression when the mayor wrote to him on the subject of dance halls.

In a communication sent to Mayor Cullum this morning Mr. Dinwiddie disclaims any connection with the Duluth Humane society and states that yesterday's communication has been turned over to Henry Taylor, secretary of the Humane society.

The letter follows:

"Hon. M. B. Cullum,
Mayor City of Duluth,
City Hall.

"Dear Sir:

Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 22.—"Daredevil" Castellane, a Curtiss aviator, fell to instant death at the Mansfield, Pa., fair today. He had started on an exhibition flight, and when three-quarters of a mile from the ground his machine careened, turned turtle and fell on a hillside. Castellane was found buried beneath the wreckage of his engine and plane. His wife witnessed the fall.

Chicago and New York Men Will Hunt Along Border.

O. H. Hassel and A. H. Phelps of Chicago and William K. Stebbins of New York are in Duluth today en route for the Vermilion territory and the Canadian border, where they will spend a few weeks hunting and canoeing.

Mr. Hassel is one of the most prominent shoe dealers of Chicago, where the Hassel Shoe company has been doing business for the past thirty years. Mr. Phelps is interested in several business concerns of Chicago and is a director of the Riverside park, one of the biggest amusement parks of America. Mr. Stebbins is the director of several large New York and New England companies.

Mr. Hassel has been in Duluth nearly every year for the past decade, spending from four to eight weeks hunting in Northern Minnesota. He considers this region the best in the country for real live outdoor sports and enjoys particularly the canoe trips up the streams along the Canadian border.

This is Mr. Phelps' and Mr. Stebbins' first visit in this part of the country and Mr. Hassel claims that he is "breaking them in."

New additional salespeople, added selling space, a rush trip to Chicago to supply the vacant spots left by the fast selling of the past few days—That's the story of the Millinery Section tonight.

The reason is not far to seek. The town is talking about our hats, every woman telling her friends, and there is no refusing importunate requests for new and different hats. And every hat IS different. That's what women like about them. No danger of seeing a hat like yours at church or on the street, worn by another woman. One hat to one woman, that's the rule.

Saturday we will feature New Tailored Hats, fresh from our milliners' hands, at $7.50 to $15.

Also New Misses' Hats of corduroy, velvet, scratch felt and velour. A visit will repay you.

The New Corsets

Women give much care to the selection of hats, shoes and even hosiery. How much more important is the careful selection of the Corset—the foundation on which all good dressing is built—the foundation on which rest figure-fashion, grace, ease and health. The designing of the present day models is an art. The producing of the extreme lengths that shall be durable and at the same time comfortable can only be done by a designer of unqualified ability.

The La Helene, Redfern and Modart Corsets are made by such designers who are acknowledged by all as the highest corset authority. For several seasons we have been calling your attention to the value of these corsets. We have models suited to all women, tall, short or slender.

Now is the time when every woman must buy a new corset if she is to have her clothes fit properly. These models run from $5 up. There is no model to equal the Rengo Belt as a garment for large women, for there is no corset particularly made for stout women that is so well cut. Other corsets may reduce the figure but they do not shape it into fashionable lines. They have the low, easy bust, close fitting, moderately long skirt. Sold from $2.50 to $5.

There are several new models in the S. & B. Special, Warner and American Lady. These are all in less expensive garments bearing similar lines of the better models—$1.00 up to $3.50.

PARK BOARD BOUND TO HAVE SWIMMING POOL.

The Superior board of park commissioners has recommended that the construction of the swimming pool in Billings park be rushed, and that $1,000 be appropriated for this purpose for the next year. Work to some extent has been done on this, as $163 of the $250 already levied for the swimming pool, has been spent.

The park board reports that during the past year many shade trees have been planted and much shrubbery has been added. During the year $10,597.46 was spent on the parks of which $4,033.91 was expended on Billings park.

MURDERER MAY BE ONE WANTED HERE.

It is the opinion of Sheriff McKinnon that the murderer of a farmer and his wife in Anoka county, may be Daggert, the slayer of Supervisor Hefsteadt, who escaped early last summer, and of whom no trace has since been found. The description furnished by Sheriff Jack Carey of Anoka county compares quite accurately with that of Daggert.

DOUGLAS COUNTY WILL HAVE FAIR AFTER ALL.

Douglas county will have a fair, after all, although it is not to be of such an order as at first planned. It is to be an agricultural and industrial exhibition, and will be held in the old Blaine high school gymnasium.

Efforts on the part of those in charge to secure a place to stage the fair proved futile until last evening Mayor Crumpton and F. E. Spring, president of the Superior Commercial club, evolved the scheme of having the show at the gym. The plan is considered an excellent one by those interested.

The only part that will be missed is the stock and cattle exhibition, but as Douglas county is capable of producing a big agricultural and industrial display, the show will be well worth while.

DAUGHTER ACCUSES FATHER OF ARSON.

At the preliminary hearing of the arson charges against W. J. Stephens, in the Superior municipal court before Judge Parker yesterday, Mrs. May Sutor, his own daughter, furnished the most damaging testimony that served to have her father bound over to the grand jury of the superior court. She told how on the morning of Sept. 13, her father attempted to set fire to the Arlington hotel, by lighting a blaze in the store room opposite her room. Other witnesses were Charles Good, deputy state fire marshal, George Eigel and F. Boussard.

YOUNG MEN HELD FOR BURGLARY.

Two young men, giving their names as James Kennedy, 19 years old, and Charles Wenzell, 23 years old, were arrested yesterday on a Superior-bound train from Iron River, by local police, charged with burglarizing a store at Iron River. Patrolman Schlicker boarded the train at Itasca, and soon had the men under arrest. The youths had some of the stolen goods in their possession. They were taken to Iron River last evening.

WEEPING TREES.

"There have been altogether too many weeping trees planted in this country," declares a writer in Suburban Life. "Most of them unfortunately have been of the freak type.

"The weeping trees can be divided into two general classes, those which are upright in growth and have naturally pendulous branches and those which really are prostrate plants, but which are grafted on standard stocks several feet above the ground, the long, wollowy branches hanging downward to the ground. The former class are as a rule plants worth having when planted in their proper place, but the latter are usually deformed freaks which will spoil any garden picture.

"Of those with naturally pendulous branches the weeping birch is the best. It grows from sixty to seventy feet high and makes a perfectly upright growth, but the long pendulous branches give the tree a decided weeping character, which, however, is not developed until the tree has attained several years of growth.

"Next in importance is the weeping, or as it is sometimes called the Napoleon willow. This is the fastest growing weeping tree. It attains a height of about forty feet, and is familiar because of its frequent planting in cemeteries.

"It is not necessary to have a damp place for this tree to grow in, although one commonly thinks of the willows as being plants which inhabit damp ground. It will grow in almost any soil that is not a desert. The weeping willow has proved a successful tree in seaside planting where good soil is to be had.

"The weeping beech when well grown as a specimen tree makes a beautiful and somewhat curious tree for the lawn. It will attain a height of fifty or sixty feet. The branches grow upright and then droop.

"A tree which always delights the children because of its canopylike head, which makes a splendid place for them to play under, is the Camperdown elm. This is one of the trees grafted on a standard stock, about eight feet high, but the branches, instead of drooping down immediately, extend outward. Sometimes the Camperdown elm reaches a diameter of thirty feet. It is a rank grower, the limbs making a somewhat zigzag growth of several feet in a single season. The branches are so close that the large dark green glossy leaves make a complete canopy through which the sun does not penetrate.

"It should be planted as an isolated specimen, and as a rule it is better to plant it in a somewhat inconspicuous place yet convenient for the children to use as a playhouse. It will succeed in almost any locality, but like the other elms it prefers plenty of moisture.

"The best tall canopy tree is the weeping ash, which will grow ultimately fifty feet high. It is a rapid grower and must be given plenty of space. All that has been said about the Camperdown elm as an arbor tree will apply to this tree, but of course on a much larger scale.

"The Japanese pagoda tree is very picturesque. It does not grow to a very great height, at least I have never seen specimens which were very high, but this may be because it is not commonly cultivated in this country and what few specimens there are have not had a chance to attain a great height. In the summer time when the tree is covered with foliage the crown presents a series of short curves, overlapping one another, the general outline being conical. The most popular flowering weeping tree is the Japanese weeping, rose flowered cherry, a small tree with drooping crooked branches."

MANY VISIT TWO HARBORS

About 150 Duluth People Go to Lake County Fair.

Special Train Over Iron Range Road Carries Representative Crowd.

About 150 Duluthians are this afternoon extending the glad hand to the people of Two Harbors, seeing the Lake county fair, being surprised by the quality of products shown and getting an insight into the extent of the agricultural development in the county on the north shore.

Visitors to the fair left the Union depot at 1:30 this afternoon on a special train over the Duluth & Iron Range railroad. Many were agricultural experts or near-experts anxious to see what the county to the northeast is doing to add to the wealth of this section of the state. As the natural market and clearing place for the products of all of Northeastern Minnesota, Duluth is naturally interested in the development of St. Louis and all the neighboring counties, and Lake county is coming to the front fast.

Reports from Two Harbors are to the effect that Lake county has a fair this year that is an eye-opener. Settlers are fast developing the resources of the county and that they are favored by soil and climatic conditions is shown by the excellence of the products on display. The fair has been developing yearly and this year it has reached a point never before attained.

Two Harbors people have been anxious to entertain a large crowd of Duluth people and to show the agricultural achievements of Lake county. Their invitation to visit the fair has been accepted and the crowd which went to the north shore town this afternoon is a representative one.

LIBERALS AND RECIPROCITY ARE CRUSHED AT POLLS

| Province. | Liberals. | Conservatives. |
|---|---|---|
| Ontario | 15 | 70 |
| Quebec | 35 | 28 |
| Nova Scotia | 10 | 8 |
| New Brunswick | 8 | 5 |
| Prince Edward I. | 2 | 2 |
| Manitoba | 2 | 8 |
| Saskatchewan | 7 | 3 |
| Alberta | 5 | 2 |
| British Columbia | 0 | 7 |
| Totals | 84 | 133 |

Opposition majority, 49.

The magnitude of the landslide appears to have stunned the Liberals, who have held office for fifteen consecutive years, and who firmly believed that they were destined to remain in power for many years to come.

On both sides sympathy is being expressed for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. His clean and gallant fight in behalf of reciprocity is recognized by opponents as well as supporters as one of the most notable campaigns ever undertaken in Canada. That his efforts were not crowned with success is a matter of inexplicable amazement to many people in the Dominion.

Borden's Majority 200.

In Halifax, R. L. Borden, the leader of the Conservatives, was elected by 200 majority, but his running mate, A. R. Crosby, was defeated by Dr. E. Blackador with a majority of 100.

"There is no opportunity tonight for more than the briefest statement. In rejecting reciprocity, Canada has simply affirmed her adherence to a policy of national development which she has pursued for many years. The government without mandate from the people undertook to reverse that policy, and upon submitting their action to the people, were defeated.

"The verdict was in no wise dictated by any spirit of unfriendliness to the great neighboring republic. No such spirit exists. It is my conception that friendly relations can best be maintained if each country preserves complete and entire control over its own tariff and enters into no entangling agreements which might impair that control.

"ROBERT LAIRD BORDEN."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking to a group of friends, said:

"I gladly lay down the premiership, a burden which I have carried for fifteen years. We believed that in making the reciprocity arrangement we had done something which would be greatly to the benefit of the people of Canada. The electors have declared otherwise, and I bow to their decision. I regret that we have been unable to carry reciprocity, which I still believe would have promoted the material advancement of Canada and would have promoted the growing friendship between the United States and Great Britain. However, the country has spoken. We must bow to the inevitable, and I cheerfully do so."

"Canada is free from the menace which hung over her. Our fair dominion is saved for Canadians and the British empire. The sun went down last night, and so did Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"I have also to extend my congratulations to you electors of Winnipeg on the magnificent part you have played in this election in giving Alexander Haggart a majority of over 4,000.

"J. H. Ashdown, who was willing to lead us on the way to Washington, has gone to his home on Broadway. Not only has Ashdown gone to his resting place, but he will never be senator, because R. L. Borden will be premier and R. L. Borden will not make any man a senator who would surrender his country to a foreign nation."

Earl Grey May Wait.

It is not unlikely that the departure of the present governor-general, Earl Grey, which was fixed for Oct. 8, may now be deferred for a few days, and if this is done the new governor-general, the Duke of Connaught, will also postpone the date of his sailing from England, as it is the invariable custom for the returning and the incoming governor-generals to pass each other upon the ocean.

Earl Grey is familiar with Canadian affairs and could more conveniently participate in the details of calling and installing a new government.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in Quebec today. Mr. Borden is in Halifax. Both will leave shortly for Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid to close up the affairs of his government and to tender his resignation as prime minister, and Mr. Borden to accept the call of the governor general to form a new ministry and to consult with party leaders as to the appointment of his advisers. Parliament is to be summoned as soon as the election writs are in and the usual formalities which follow an election are completed.

Curiosity Over Ministry.

There is much curiosity as to the identity of the men whom Mr. Borden will invite to portfolios under the new government. Public opinion is agreed that the Hon. George E. Foster, former Conservative minister of finance, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, and Robert Rogers, minister of public works for Manitoba, will secure places.

As for the reciprocity agreement, it is not likely to be heard of again soon in the Canadian house. Any measure of this kind must be introduced from the government side, and it is not likely that Mr. Borden and his followers will make any move in the matter.

There is considerable interest manifested in the view which the people of the United States will take of the overwhelming rejection of reciprocity. The editorial comments of the American press and the statements of prominent public men, will be read with great interest in all parts of Canada.

"Criminals Cast Out."

"As the result of yesterday's vote upon the issue which he recommended and pressed upon the country, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has just one thing to do. He must go to the governor general, offer his resignation as prime minister and advise that Mr. Borden be sent for to form a cabinet. The Liberal government is more than defeated. It is destroyed.

"There has not been such a condemnation of a governmental party since 1878. To it all sections contributed. The criminals who tried set the East against the West, and the country against the city, were cast out in the West as well as in the East, by the country constituencies as well as by those of the city, by the workers as well as by those who employ workers."

Laurier Will Retire.

Although re-elected in two constituencies in Quebec, the defeat of the Liberal party also means the retirement from public life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who for nearly two decades has directed the destinies of the Dominion. Several times during the bitter campaign that preceded the election, the venerable premier said that he never would consent to lead a minority in opposition to a Conservative government.

While Sir Wilfrid was safe in two counties, the Conservatives made a great harvest of ministerial heads. Thirteen members of the Laurier cabinet sought re-election and seven of them were defeated.

Fielding Is Beaten.

Minister of Finance Fielding and Minister of Customs Paterson, who made the reciprocity bargain with the United States, failed to win their elections; Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia; Mackenzie King, minister of labor; Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture; George P. Graham, minister of railways, and William Templeman, minister of inland revenue, also went down to defeat. The province of Quebec rejected one minister, British Columbia one, Nova Scotia two, and Ontario three.

The ministers who survive the landslide are William Pugsley of New Brunswick, minister of public works; Charles Murphy of Ontario, secretary of state, Frank Oliver of Alberta, minister of the interior; Premier Laurier; Rudolphe Lemieux, minister of marine and Fr. H. S. Beland, postmaster general in the province of Quebec.

A. B. Aylesworth, minister of justice did not seek re-election, as he had decided to retire from public life, and Sir Richard Cartwright, minister of trade and commerce, who is a member of the Canadian senate, was not required to go before the electors.

Jacques Bureau, solicitor general, who is regarded as a semi-member of the administration, was also defeated.

Liberals Badly Disorganized.

The result of the election works so complete a disorganization of the Liberals that the Conservatives probably will remain in office for many years before their authority can be seriously challenged. The former Conservative government held office for eighteen years and the Laurier government, which has just been turned out, followed with fifteen years of power.

The verdict is looked upon as triumph for the party of protection and a victory for the manufacturers of Canada, who openly and avowedly were opposed to the government because they feared the removal of duties upon natural products would be followed by an attack upon the protection which Canadian manufacturers have enjoyed for many years.

Among those who may find places as ministers in the new administration are: H. B. Ames of St. Antoine; Judge Doherty of Montreal; George Perley of Argenteuil, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick; George E. Foster, who had been with the former Conservative government; Thomas Crothers of West Elgin; W. S. Middleboro of East Grey; A. S. Goodeve of British Columbia; and Robert Rogers, now minister of public works in the Manitoba provincial government.

Dr. Thomas Sproule of East Grey is not unlikely to be chosen as speaker of the incoming house of commons.

Beaten by Youngsters.

Among the most disappointed men over the result is Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia, who has been a minister of the crown ever since the Laurier government took office. He has suffered the humiliation of having been defeated by a 21-year-old college student. He also loses the chance of going to London as Canadian high commissioner to Lord Strathcona for which place he was mentioned prominently.

Hon. Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture, is in somewhat similar plight. He was defeated by a young lawyer, who barely has passed his majority.

Faces Large Affair.

Several large affairs will require the immediate attention of the Borden government. Although reciprocity dies a natural death, the Conservatives are likely within a short time to give their attention to the revision of the Canadian tariff, which Mr. Borden favors, and with the tenders for the construction of ten vessels for the Canadian navy, a project which he has condemned and which has been denounced by the French Nationalists of Quebec.

The new premier also will have to deal with tenders for an $8,000,0000 harbor work and dry dock at St. John, to form the outlet for the national trans-continental railway to be completed within a few years, which Mr. Borden and his Conservative followers have denounced as an improvident undertaking. Projects for the contruction of a Georgian Bay canal, the enlargement of the Welland canal and the deepening of the St. Lawrence route are other legacies from the Laurier government.

Mr. Borden promised if elected to increase government ownership of public utilities, such as railroads, telegraph and telephones, aid the West in the establishment of terminal elevators under government supervision, promote construction of the Hudson Bay railroad to Dolph, terminals on Hudson bay, and see that a fleet is put on the route between Hudson ports and Europe to carry out, during summer and fall, the wheat and cattle to the West.

Best Showing in West.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 22.—The forces in favor of reciprocity made the best showing in the West yesterday. The Liberals have won eighteen seats and the Conservatives nine, according to early returns this morning.

In Manitoba the Liberals won Provencher, Lisgar, Selkirk and Dauphin. In Saskatchewan, Qu'Appelle, Saskatoon, Regina, Moosejaw, Saltcoats, Battleford, Assiniboine, Humboldt and Mackenzie. In Alberta the Liberals won Medicine Hat, MacLeod, Redder, Edmonton, Victoria and Strathcona.

The Conservatives won in Manitoba, Winnipeg, Brandon, Portage, Marquette, Souris and MacDonald; in Saskatchewan, Prince Albert, and in Alberta, Calgary.

All three chief counsels for the Canadian Pacific railway in three provinces—Atkins in Brandon, McKay in Saskatchewan and Bennett in Calgary, were elected.

HARD ON HUSBANDS.

Los Angeles Times: "I, for one, am in favor of the bill to abolish the use of algrettes and paradise plumes in ladies' hats. I favor this bill not only for moral reasons, but for financial ones as well."

The speaker was Col. Lionel C. Harris, the well-known ornithologist of Memphis. He resumed:

"The cost of these algrettes and paradise plumes is a dreadful thing for any husband to contemplate. I saw yesterday a Virot hat covered with algrettes that was ticketed $200. And that reminds me—

"A lady novelist wrote to a publisher last month:

"'Please send a check in advance of royalties. I want to buy a new hat for a June wedding.'

"The accommodating publisher sent the lady a check for $50. She acknowledged it indignantly.

"'I said,' she wrote, 'that I wanted a hat, not a veil.'"

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—EMPRESS Vaudeville.
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

The reappearance of Grace Van Studdiford in this city at the Lyceum theater on Saturday, Sept. 30, for matinee and night in the "Paradise of Mahomet," is being looked forward to by all lovers of good things as the big musical and society event of the present theatrical season. Apparently, the lapse of two years since Miss Van Studdiford thrilled our theater-goers by her splendid singing in "The Golden Butterfly" has only tended to endear her the more to them. No other American singer possesses a more attractive personality or a greater vocal accomplishment than Miss Van Studdiford. It is said that her voice has gained marvelously in strength during the past few years, but not at the loss of its purity and beauty, as is so often the case when prima donnas strive for greater power. "The Paradise of Mahomet" will be produced here just as it was at the Herald square theater in New York last season.

"There is no royal road to grace," said Miss Mabel Ford of the Four Fords, who are appearing at the Orpheum this week in a very attractive dancing act.

"Any woman may acquire grace of movement, I believe, but there are few to whom it comes naturally. Grace is simply perfect control of the muscles. Any person whose muscles respond promptly and accurately to the brain impulse is graceful, and this response can only come from practice. Some people acquire grace much more rapidly than others, but any person who is not suffering from some deformity, may acquire it.

"My sister and I have been studying dancing ever since we were children. Our parents were dancers before us, and we began to dance almost as soon as we began to walk. A person may learn ordinary dancing steps without acquiring grace, but for such dances as the Grecian, grace is an absolute necessity. Awkwardness in such a dance as the one we do, would make it ludicrous. We worked for three years on that dance before we dared to do it in public. We still have a lot to learn about Grecian dancing, but this is the fifth year we have been studying it, and by next year we hope to do it exclusively and abandon the hard shoe dancing. But any person who thinks they can learn Grecian or any other kind of dancing by a correspondence course, or in a few months' lessons, is most horribly mistaken."

The popularity of the Sullivan & Considine shows is being clearly demonstrated by the large crowds which visit the Lyceum at each performance to witness this brand of vaudeville. While the Empress is closed for extensive repairs, Sullivan & Considine vaudeville is being presented at the Lyceum but it really doesn't seem to make much difference at which end of town these popular bills are presented, large attendance is the watchword. The bill this week is of exceptional strength and includes some excellent features. Swat Milligan, a baseball playlet, is the feature act and judging from the manner in which the audience receives the skit, one would imagine that every man, woman and child in the city was baseball mad. Another pleasing feature of this week's bill is the La Basque quartet. This quartet is composed of some noted French and Italian grand opera singers and the combination is one of the strongest in vaudeville. Their program is evenly balanced and they are making a hit this week. The three Bannons are presenting a club juggling act that is about the finest in its line. The Falcons open the show with a clever comedy acrobatic act and Dunbar & Turn follow them with a singing and dancing turn which is above the average. Vaudeville will be presented at the Lyceum for the balance of this week and all of next week closing Friday night, Sept. 29. The Empress will reopen for the winter season Saturday, Sept. 30.

AUTo STOLEN FROM GARAGE

V. L. Booth's Car Believed to Have Been Taken By Joy Riders.

Thieves last night entered the garage of V. L. Booth at 707 East Third street, and stole his automobile.

The garage was found broken open this morning, and the car was missing. It was a Ford machine of the 1911 model, and bore the state license number of 14,037 and the city license number of 623. It is believed that the car was taken by some "joy riders" who have probably left it standing on some suburban or country road.

MAN ROBBED AND THROWN INTO BAY

Andrew Measka Pulled Out of Water By Dock Watchman.

Andrew Measka told the police last night that he had been robbed by three unknown men at the foot of Fifth avenue west and then thrown into the bay. He claimed to have lost about $15.

Measka was pulled out of the bay by the watchman of the Clow & Nicholson Transportation company when the latter heard his cries for help. The man asserted that he had become separated from his partner and had gone down to the Fifth avenue dock to watch for him at the ferry.

REPORTED BESSEMER ORE HAS BEEN STRUCK.

Ironton, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Operating in section 4, 46-29, northwest of Ironton, the Cuyuna-Duluth Iron company, newly organized, is reported to have struck Bessemer iron ore in the first hole sunk on its properties. At a depth of fifty feet the rich deposit was struck and the drill is said to be in seventy-five feet of ore by this time. The Cuyuna Mille Lacs Iron company is getting the lumber and material on the ground in section 3, 46-29 preparatory to sinking a shaft. Their land here has been well drilled and it is said the company has sunk fourteen holes.

Skunk Routs Household.

Bloomsburg, Pa., Sept. 22.—A skunk took possession of the cellar of Charles Gearinger recently, and for several days frustrated every effort to dislodge it. Finally Gearinger summoned up sufficient courage to kill it. The members of the family are still aware of the fact that it was their unbidden guest.

CHOICE DISTRICT MOVING EAST, SAYS ASSESSOR

Office Force Busy Preparing for Complete City Revaluation.

Blue Prints Show Improvements and Tepography of All Property.

Duluth's elite residence section has moved to the section east of Twentieth avenue east and up into what is known as the Normal school district, according to J. Allyn Scott, city treasurer.

Mr. Scott makes this assertion as a result of the investigation which he has been making of Duluth real estate preparatory to the real estate assessment next May, when values throughout the city will be equalized.

"Strange as it may seem, property between Fourteenth and Nineteenth or Twentieth avenues east, roughly speaking, is worth less today than it was some years ago and will have to be put on the books at reduced figures," said the assessor in speaking of the matter. "The finer residences have moved eastwards. Property in the former residence district, as a consequence, has depreciated, while that further east has had a corresponding increase. It may not sound reasonable, but the fact remains that a man would rather pay more for a lot on Fifth, Sixth or Seventh street in the present residence district, than for one on First or Second street in the former residence section. Lots can be purchased and are selling for less today in the latter district than formerly, and we will have to be governed accordingly in making the assessment. We cannot go contrary to the actual conditions."

After Equality.

Generally speaking, the lots in what the assessor terms the former residence section are the only ones which will get a reduction. But it is not the object of the assessor to increase the total valuation any more than it is to reduce it. He is endeavoring to equalize values throughout the city. In some places he will have to cut the present figures and in some places he will be obliged to make additions. But it is believed that after the totals of the entire city are available after the assessment has been completed next May they will be greater than those at present on the books. With the possible exception of the section between Fourteenth and Twentieth avenues east the tendency of the local real estate market has been upwards. Prices have not been inflated by any booms, but there has been a steady, substantial increase in actual values. Increases will be noted in the vicinity of the steel plant, West Duluth, the West end, the East end and Lakeside.

Every Lot Shown.

To aid him in his work the assessor has prepared blue prints showing every lot in the district between Eighth avenue west and Eighth avenue east below the upper side of Fourth street. They have been cross-sectioned and the values noted. Statistics in the office of the assessor explain the character of each lot and the nature of the improvements on it. When the time for making the assessment comes around the assessor's office will be prepared to handle it in an efficient, competent manner. If any one comes into the office to make a complaint, the officials will have the statistics on hand to tell the complainant the exact reason for his assessment. A property owner will not be able to make a "kick" that he is assessed twice as much as the person next to him, "stick." For there will be a reason, and the authorities will have it right at their elbows ready for use. All lots in one block are not worth the same, as some of them may be in a gulch or on a cliff, and the records will show it.

The map will show the exact value of every lot in the city. Assessor Scott stated that the present blue print will be completed within a comparatively short time, and it is probable that it will be placed in the Commercial club. He explained that it will cost about $1 each to get out duplicate blue prints, and that he would be glad to get out 50 or 100 of them to be placed in various public places in the city if the council will authorize the necessary expenditure. At $1 each this would be comparatively light, and it is not believed that any objection would be made to it if the assessor were to make the request. They would be useful in many ways. Later, when other preliminary work has been finished, the assessor will get out figures showing the difference in the revised valuation and the valuations which have been in force the last few years.

LOOKING FOR THE OIL POOL

Operators Search for the Gaines Field Supply in Pennsylvania.

Wellsboro, Pa., Sept. 22.—Practically unknown to the outside world until a few days ago, when their first trial well came in, a small producer, men under the charter name of the Pennsylvania Oil Land Development company have been at work for a month or more in the vicinity of the hamlet of Watrous in the old Gaines oil field in search of the elusive reservoir of premium golden petroleum from which, by seepage, the thirty wells drilled in the little field a dozen years ago are still flowing indifferently under the coaxing of pumps. Now that the secret of the new movement is out, it carries with it an interesting story.

More than $100,000 has been spent in that little Gaines field during ten years in a vain search for the pool or reservoir that is presumed to be somewhere in the neighborhood; men have gone bankrupt because they put their last penny in a wild-cat hole in the expectation of finding the lead. Fortune tellers have been consulted in the hope of disclosing where the lucky well should be drilled; spiritual mediums have been taken over the field and have gone into seances upon it and pointed out localities where oil was presumed to be in plenty; old men with witchy looking divining rods have traveled over the barren hillocks and along under the willows that hem Pine creek in search of the spot that might twist with its lodestone—but all to no avail, for aside from the thirty wells that were found to be small producers when drilled a dozen years ago, and from which the South Penn Oil company and A. S. Attwell have been reaping an amber flow of wealth ever since, all the wildcatting has gone to naught.

But somehow nobody seemed to think of prospecting right among the producing wells. Yet that's what this new company has done. Instead of drilling a lot of new test wells it will prod the drill deeper in the old holes, even at the risk of losing what oil is coming out of them. A driller was able to determine, through the aid of one of the deeper old wells and a compass, from which direction the oil seepage comes, thus demonstrating in what direction the drilling must be done in order to find the pool from which sufficient pressure is obtained to force some oil through the rock strata.

IS IZZY "EASY," IS HE? NO.

Israel Mark, Now Irving Marshall, By Court's Grace.

New York, Sept. 22.—Israel Mark of 91 West Eighteenth street, Bayonne, N. J., is known to friends as Izzy and his wife as Mrs. Issy. But unfriendly neighbors talked loudly about Mr. Easy Mark. She resented that. Promptly the children took up the cry and saluted the young couple as the "Easy Marks."

Unable to endure the annoyance longer, Israel got County Judge Carey in Jersey City to permit him to change his name. So now the couple will be Mr. and Mrs. Irving Marshall, names so combining literature and law that Izzy—beg pardon, Irving—hopes all scoffers will be silenced.

ARE MOSTLY FOR WILSON

Minnesota Democrats Likely to Send an Instructed Delegation.

Very Little Harmon Sentiment Outside of the Twin Cities.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—That most Minnesota Democrats are for Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey for president was the statement made yesterday by a member of the Johnson administration, whose business takes him around the state considerably. He believes that unless there are new developments the state convention will select a Wilson delegation to the national convention.

"The Bryan men are against Harmon, and for Wilson because they believe he is the leading candidate at this time," he said. "Then there are a lot of Democrats who are not followers of Bryan, but who are for Wilson anyway. They consider him progressive without being radical, and they think he is a man who does things and who is reliable.

Eighth May Instruct for Wilson.

"I saw several Democrats from Duluth recently and they said they propose to instruct the Eighth district delegates for Wilson. I hear similar sentiments in other parts of the state, though perhaps not so definite as to the instructions. Outside of the Twin Cities I find very little Harmon sentiment. There were a few Harmon Democrats in the Third district, but I believe they have given it up.

"Next to Wilson I think Champ Clark has as many friends as any one, but so far there has been no activity to indicate that he is a candidate. If he were he would have a strong following. Folk has many friends, but as they do not believe he can be nominated they are generally for Wilson."

Much Faith in Bryan's View.

While there has been little surface activity among the Democrats it is probable the view expressed by this man is not far from correct. There is still a respectable number of Democrats in this state who even if they would not vote for Bryan have great faith in what he says, and they have taken his word for it that Harmon will not do as a presidential candidate. They look upon Wilson as one of several candidates of the progressive type, and just at present he appears to them the most available man. Others again who think Harmon is a good man fear Bryan has branded him so he is out of the running.

There are still six months or more within which this sentiment may be changed. H. L. Nichols, head of the Harmon organization, is expected in St. Paul today and he may start something that will strengthen Harmon's cause. So far Harmon has the best organized and most active campaign bureau, and organization goes a long way toward winning nominations n conventions.

Leaders Are Non-Committal.

So far very few of the leaders of the party have committed themselves on the presidential candidates. Most of them will mention several men that might be good candidates. It is evident they are keeping their ears to the ground and waiting until they can pick a candidate who looks like a winner. If the party leaders and delegates finally pick a candidate who should be nominated and elected they will of course share well in the federal patronage, which is now distributed to the Republican senators and congressmen of this state. Therefore, even if things shape up so there is no fight over the candidate, there may be a warm fight to determine the control of the organization in this state.

HE WANTS REAL BIG CORONATION

King of Siam Would Like Foreign Princes to Attend.

Bangkok, Siam, Sept. 22.—Preparations are now under way for the coronation of King Maha Vajiravudh, who succeeded to the throne of Siam on the death of his father on Oct. 23, 1910. The date has been tentatively fixed for New Year's day next year, which will be Maha's 31st birthday, but the date may be altered by his majesty.

Prince Valdemar, son of Prince Henry of Prussia, is making a trip to the East on the first motor steamer of the East Asiatic company, which is scheduled to arrive at Bangkok on Dec. 14. Maha may alter the date of his coronation to suit the Prussian prince, whose attendance he would like at the ceremony. Maha hopes to obtain the presence of an English prince, and Grand Duke Michael, brother of the czar, has been invited.

Maha means to have the festivities conducted on a most complete scale. Nothing is to be left undone for the comfort of visitors. With this view the king has appointed four committees of distinguished men. They have charge of the city and are to be responsible for having everything as it should be.

The sanitary department has been ordered to get all roads and bridges in order. The privy purse department is to see that all royal buildings are repaired, painted and decorated. The educational department is to prepare all the schools and the school children. The household department is to supervise all arrangements for the housing and entertainment of visitors.

MYSTERY IN THE MURDER OF WIFE

Killing of Woman Puzzles Authorities of Small Texas Town.

Brownwood, Tex., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Sallie Brown, wife of George W. Brown, a well-to-do farmer, was brutally murdered Saturday night of last week while asleep on a bed on the front porch of their dwelling, and after a week of investigation the mystery remains unsolved. The murderer used an iron rod an inch in diameter and two feet in length, with which he crushed her skull. The victim lived twenty-four hours in an unconscious condition. Her husband was arrested, charged with the murder, and is in the county jail awaiting an examining trial.

On the night of the murder a Brownwood physician received a call from the Brown home, saying that Mrs. Brown had been struck on the head by a burglar. The physician found several of the neighbors there. Ivy Beeman, a farmer who lives near the Brown place, was the first man to arrive on the grewsome scene.

According to the statement of Beeman, Brown was standing beside the bed washing the blood from his wife's face. The physician saw at once that death would ensue in a few hours.

Brown told the officers he was awakened by a sound like a blow and saw a tall man standing over the bed in the act of striking his wife with a club. He said that one blow barely missed his own head as he dodged out of bed and ran for an open door, just inside of which a gun was standing. He asserted he saw the man snatch his (Brown's) trousers from the foot of the bed and run into the yard. When he returned with the gun the intruder had disappeared. Seeing his wife was badly hurt, he called a physician.

Deputy Sheriff Hard Daniels rode his horse from Brownwood to the Brown home, seven miles, in little more than fifteen minutes. He placed Brown under arrest. Other officers found an iron cudgel with which the murder was committed in a flower bed near the porch. It was smeared with blood.

Brown told the officers that his trousers had contained four silver dollars and a pocket knife. They were found some distance from the house. The money was missing, but the knife was found nearby. The investigators also found the tracks of a man leading from the porch to the spot where the trousers were found, then in a circuitous manner back to the dwelling.

The sheriff had Brown remove the suit of clothes he had been wearing since the tragedy. His underclothes were found to be spattered with blood.

Brown is reputed to be worth between $20,000 and $40,000. The couple had been married little more than a year. Brown had been married once before and has five children, while Mrs. Brown had been married three times and brought four children to her new home.

Wouldn't Wash Hubby.

Moline, Ill., Sept. 22.—When Frank Malone, a tinner, returned home from work a few evenings ago he demanded that his wife wash his face, which was covered with grime. She refused, whereupon Malone administered a beating. He was given a twenty-day jail sentence by the police magistrate.

WORLD AGAIN USING MISSOURI IRON ORE.

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 22.—With the Ozarks full of valuable deposits of hematite, which will become accessible to the commercial world as soon as three or four branch railroads, now planned, are constructed, Missouri will again, in the near future, become one of the leading iron producing states of the country.

In the year 1910 the iron producing counties of Missouri shipped out a total of 81,345 long tons of this ore, which, at $2.35 per ton, was worth $191,161, says Commissioner Austin W. Biggs in the 1911 Red Book of the bureau of labor statistics.

The above allegations constitute some advance information to prove the assertion that Missouri is still producing more iron ore than is generally supposed to be the case. At one time this state ranked very high for its annual production of hematite, but that was in the days when Iron mountain and Pilot Knob were the chief sources of supply for this state and ore sold for more per ton than it does now.

GREAT PROGRESS IN ST. CLEMENT'S PARISH

ST. CLEMENT'S CHURCH.

After spending nearly $5,000 on new decorations and altars to their recently built church, the people of St. Clement's parish are now rebuilding their old hall into a modern gymnasium for the use of the young men. A new basketball floor, with balconies for spectators, is among the features of the improvements.

The new gymnasium will be fully equipped with the latest training devices and hand-ball courts. New lockers are being installed as well as modern shower baths. The comfort of the young men is being kept constantly in mind by the men at the head of the department. Father Raymond Basil is directing the work and is greatly pleased with the results.

Among the new decorations and improvements in the church are three American made altars, although many of the parts were imported from Europe and Asia. Parts of these altars have been carved from the most costly marbles obtainable.

The center altar is made of pure marble and is guaranteed fireproof by the builders. In the panel of the altar, built in high relief, is the "Last Supper of Christ," after the famous painting of de Vinci. Above the center of the middle altar is the inscription, "I Adore Thee Devoutly, Hidden Deity."

A smaller altar is placed on each side of the center altar and they are also richly carved. The new communion railing is hand carved. All the center designs modeled after the Passion are carefully carved and no two designs are alike. There are twenty-four of these separate carvings.

The members of the parish are an enthusiastic body and are planning a number of events for the next few weeks. A church fair under the direction of Father Augustine will be held from Oct. 9 to Oct. 14. An amateur play, "The Flower of the Family," under the direction of Father Raymond, will be given about two weeks after the fair.

The young men of the parish are planning to organize a city indoor baseball league and if successful will be able to play some good games this winter, as there are four other very good teams in the city. The Cathedral high school, Jefferson and Adams A. C. teams, and the local Y. M. C. A. are the other teams that may join in the league.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

Use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and Your Gray Hair Will Quickly Vanish.

Gray hair is a mark of age, and nothing that can be said as to its beauty will offset the disadvantages of this mark of age set upon your brow.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy darkens the hair and restores it to its youthful beauty. Our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them used sage and sulphur for darkening their hair. Nothing has ever been found more effective for this purpose than these two time honored remedies, but Wyeth, a modern chemist, has combined the two with other ingredients, which makes a delightful dressing for the hair, and which not only removes every trace of dandruff but promotes the growth of the hair. It also stops the hair from falling out, and makes it beautiful.

All druggists are authorized to refund the money if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't neglect your hair and don't resort to old-time hair dyes. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist today and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' use.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

NEW PLANT FOR WEST END.

Duluth Show Case Factory Will Begin Operations on Monday.

Machinery is being removed from the old plant of the Duluth Show Case company, Lake avenue south, to the company's big new plant in the West end, which will begin operations next Monday, and add another important industry to this section of the city.

The new factory occupies part of the block front on West Superior street, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth avenues west. The company has acquired all of this block so as to have plenty of room for additions. From a small beginning a few years ago the company has reached a point where the new factory, 90 by 128 feet was required. When the new factory is in full operation it will employ about fifty men at good wages and make a considerable addition to the West end payroll.

NEW CULVERT IS COMPLETED.

The completion yesterday of the concrete culvert for Miller's creek near Twenty-fifth avenue west and the boulevard is the first step toward improving this route to the city and giving that farming locality another road for bringing their truck to the city. The cost of the culvert was $3,000 and it was built under the supervision of G. R. King, contractor.

The highway, however, is not open for traffic yet, as twelve to thirteen feet of filling is necessary before it will be ready. The county commissioners have appropriated $2,000 more for this purpose.

The object of this improvement is to secure an easier grade for an approach to the city, and this new highway will be used for the traffic formerly going over the Hermantown, Morris Thomas, and the Hutchinson roads. Work on the last named road will be completed in a month.

Farmers will have to use the old wooden bridge until the new culvert is entirely finished.

RECEIVER IS ASKED

For Montana Concern in Which Donald Grant Is Interested.

Livingston, Mont., Sept. 22.—An important civil suit has been filed in district court in which Henry M. Ryan, a well-known mining operator of Chicago, and others ask for an accounting of the affairs of the Yellowstone Portland Cement company of Jardine, Mont., as well as the appointment of a receiver for the company. The title of the action is Henry M. Ryan and others vs. the Yellowstone Portland Cement company, Donald Grant and others.

The company was formed by Mr. Ryan after the discovery of a fine deposit of white cement near Jardine. This is the only known big bed of white cement in the world. The railroad contractor, Donald Grant of Fairbault, Minn., was interested in the company in transportation and in the sale of some of the stock. He put his son, Samuel Grant, in as manager.

In the complaint it is stated that young Grant is incompetent to manage the affairs of the company. It is further asserted that no satisfactory accounts were kept.

An accounting, the appointment of a mechanical engineer and the appointment of a receiver are asked.

SILENT AS TO CHOLERA

Bad Policy of Suppressing Facts in Italy Is Bearing Fruit.

Deliberate Misrepresentation Now Keeping the "Paying Guest" Away.

The Marquess Incontri, a young and aspiring member of the chamber of deputies, has given notice of the following interpellation to be addressed on the re-opening of parliament to the minister of the interior:

"To be informed as to the reasons for which silence has been maintained on the true state of public health throughout the kingdom, silence which gives warrant to the grave apprehension entertained in foreign countries and which concurrently with official communications not in harmony with the truth prevents the people in their ignorance from putting in practice the elementary rules, hygenic and prophylactic, indicated by circumstances."

This announcement gives voice to the dissatisfaction shared by Italians at the reticence of the government during the prevalence of a disease which has already assumed an epidemic character, thus leaving to municipal or communal initiative what ought to be official procedure emenating from headquarters. The interpellation cannot be made till November next, when the chamber meets, but it may in the meantime have the effect of bringing home to the government the duty of frankness or, to put it plainly, of that moral courage which was so culpably wanting last year when the public were kept in the dark as to the presence of cholera on the Adriatic seaboard and were only appraised of the danger when the disease had already affected a landing at the ports of the Two Sicilies. Much has been made as a motive for this reticence of the dread of scaring away the foreign visitor or "paying guest," and the association for promoting the influx of that source of revenue has been blamed for inspiring the government with its "policy of silence." But such, I am credibly informed, is not the fact, any more than it is a fact that the interests of the exhibition still open in the capital, and not too largely frequented, are similarly responsible.

Official Supineness.

The late summer and the early autumn are not the season when the foreign visitors are expected, and the silence in question, this year as last year, may in truth be set down to the traditional supineness of Latin officialdom when confronted with such visitations. To such lengths has that ill inspired tradition gone that it was recently announced by the telegraphic agency under government control that at Leghorn, for example, not a single case of cholera had occurred when, according to the Marquess Incontri, who is in close touch with that seaport, "the disease had for weeks been numbering victims daily," when (still according to that authority) "in all the centres of Tuscany, great and small, the presence of cholera was a theme of general conversation," when in fact villas and palatial residences were being abandoned as early as the first days of July! Another significant fact is vouched for by the Tuscan deputy. A recent official circular requires every householder to report any cholera case within twenty-four hours of its occurrence, at the same time charging the medical man not to pronounce or to write the terrible word! The inevitable consequence of all this is the imbroglio in which Italy has been involved with other powers, whose suspicions of her sanitary state have deepened into something like conviction of the sinister reality, causing trouble for her at their ports, with suspension of all business, commercial and other, notably in the Argentine and the United States. Her rivals, moveover, in catering for the "paying guest" have been only too eager to utilize this "atmosphere of doubt and dread"—hotel-keeping Switzerland, for example, flaunting announcements in its bureaus that 'subscriptions are gratefully acknowledged here for the cholera stricken Italian centers," while at the same time assuring the arrivals that the fruit and vegetables supplied at the table do not come from Italy.

In the towns where cholera has effected a foothold the authorities, in the absence of direct government intervention, are left to their own, not always well inspired, initiative, having to act in isolation, not in harmony with the neighboring centers, some of them having to depend on the medico-military service only, which has not always the means or the material for efficacious action. A notable exception to this haphazard procedure is afforded by Leghorn, where the disease has been so prevalent and the panic so great that 30,000 of the population—all in fact who had the means—abondoned the city, but where the municipality and those of the citizens who remained exerted themselves nobly, substituting at their own expense pure water from without for the notoriously defective supply hitherto available, till the government has at length intervened with the subsidy of 15,000 francs in aid of their operations. This subsidy, none too liberal, has been supplemented by the minister of marine, who in addition to the "acqua potabile" imported from Massa and the Maremma has embarked at Naples from the pure source of the Serino 250 tons of water. Such and similar measures have already reduced the mortality at Leghorn considerably, with the result that the fugitives are beginning to return. Genoa too and the neighboring towns are showing the government an example of what non-official energy can do, although the local conditions in some of these are of the worst imaginable. At Sori, for example, the water supply has been so bad that during the drought it has to be drawn from a well the water of which poisoned no fewer than twenty of those who drank it, and as anmy as fifteen died.

Lessons Soon Forgotten.

The truth is that it is only on occasions of epidemics like this that the majority of Italian communities awake to the insanitary conditions under which they are content to live, while the lessons then inculcated, though taken to heart at the time, are soon forgotten on the disappearance of the visitant. Poverty too comes in to embarass the authorities and often to frustrate their action. At Florence, happily immune from the epidemic, a quantity of fruit was impounded by sanitary order and carted away to a retired spot in the Caseine the Bois de Boulogne of the City of Flowers). But the moment the coast was clear a number of fruit venders picked up the more "plausible" looking of the peaches, apricots or apples, washed them in the Arno close by and disposed of them again! The incident shows with what adverse forces the public hygiene of Italy has to struggle and explains how ineffective is the fight she makes in such disastrous visitations as the present.

RICH BUT PENNILESS.

Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 22.—Thomas C. Sheldon, who left his home in the east six years ago and never communicated with his relatives, learned that for two years he had been wandering about the country, at times penniless, when in reality he was worth half a million dollars. Sheldon was informed of his good fortune by a Chicago attorney, with whom he made a chance acquaintance on the beach.

"It gives me a pain to think that I have been working my head off selling 'ham-ands' when I was worth so much money," said he.

Sheldon will leave for Detroit in a few days, where the estate which was left by an aunt awaits him.

GAVE BLOOD TO SAVE FIANCEE

Sacrifice Vain and He Was Too Weak to Attend Funeral.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—While the body of Miss Mary Gerlach was being buried in Frederick, Md., Charles Jesse Evans, her fiance, who for three hours lay on an operating table in the German hospital here while his blood flowed into the girl's veins in a brave but futile effort to save her life, was at his home at Fern Rock too weak to attend the funeral.

On the Saturday before Labor day Miss Gerlach went to Atlantic City for a short vacation. The following day she was taken sick and had to return home. Her condition became serious and she was removed to the hospital. On Tuesday morning the physicians found she could not live through the day.

Mr. Evans was telephoned to and asked if he would immediately submit to transfusion. Evans rushed from his house, stopped a passing motor car and told his tale. The owner willingly aided in the effort to save the girl's life and speeded to the hospital.

At 4:30 o'clock he was on an operating table alongside his sweetheart, who was in a semi-conscious condition. For three hours the blood flowed from him into the girl and as the healthy fluid entered her veins she seemed to rally.

At 7:30 o'clock the operation was ended, and Mr. Evans by that time was almost as weak as the girl. It was believed that he had saved Miss Gerlach's life, but at midnight she suddenly became worse and died.

Mr. Evans did not know of the failure of his effort until morning, and then the shock prostrated him.

ABSURD, SAYS CAVALIERI.

No Divorce for So Small a Sum as $70,000.

New York, Sept. 22.—A Paris cablegram to the World says: Lina Cavalieri, in her beautiful home in the Avenue Messine, said to a World correspondent:

"I think this story of Sidney Harris coming to Paris to offer me $70,000 to get a French divorce or allow my husband to get a divorce in Nevada is perfectly ridiculous.

"Why should I divorce or give up for such a small sum the legal rights to share my husband's estate? If he wants a divorce that's his business. Then let him resort to the courts and follow legal procedure to find who is wrong and what my rights are.

"Harris is a good friend of mine. I would be glad to see him, but as for resigning my rights to my husband's estate, that's another thing."

TO COLLEGE ON FOOT.

Salina, Kan., Sept. 22.—With a box of sardines and some crackers to stay his hunger in emergencies, Vance Hewitt, 16 years old, left here on foot for Hastings, Neb., 200 miles away, where he will attend school.

Young Hewitt intends to walk the entire distance, having trained two months in preparation for the trip. He carried a blanket and will sleep on the prairie wherever he happens to be when night overtakes him.

CROSS, SICK, FEVERISH CHILDREN NEED GENTLE, THOROUGH CASCARETS.

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle, though thorough, physic—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already sick stomach—it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—though cleanses the little one's system, sweetens the stomach and puts the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this gentle, thorough laxative which costs only 10 cents per box.

Pupils of Franklin School Hold a Fair of Their Own.

Garden Truck and Flowers Show Results of Season's Work.

Today and Monday are agricultural days at the Franklin school, Fifth avenue east and Seventh street. Every school room is filled with some of the finest garden truck ever raised in Northern Minnesota, while flowers of all descriptions, common to this section of the country, are on display.

The exhibition will open at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and a general invitation is extended to all who wish to come, to view the work that was done by the young school children. The exhibition will again be opened on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The garden truck and flowers were raised by the school children themselves. This scheme of interesting the pupils in homecrofting was started at this school by Principal F. M. Burrall about four years ago, at which time only about 5 per cent of the pupils entered the contest. Interest in the gardening has increased every year, until this year fully 90 per cent of the pupils are contestants for the honors.

Most of the produce was raised from seeds purchased from the school. The seeds come in packages which sell for 1 cent, and owing to the low price, all the pupils are afforded an opportunity to enter. The seeds have turned out well, and to the great satisfaction of all, producing as good truck as any purchased from seed stores. About thirty-nine pounds in all were used.

Blue ribbons are to be awarded to the successful contestants in each room, by a committee appointed by Principal Burrall.

HARMON BOOMER IN THE NORTHWEST

Lieut.-Governor of Ohio Visits St. Paul and Goes to Fargo.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Lieut.-Governor H. L. Nichols of Ohio is on a scouting trip in the West in the interests of Governor Harmon for the presidency. The right hand bower of the Democratic leader spent all day yesterday here in consultation with the local leaders, and today is on the way to Fargo to meet the editor of the Fargo Democrat, who recently came out editorially in favor of the Ohioan for the presidency. Lieut.-Governor Nichols is enthusiastic over the prospects of his chief. He declares that Harmon can carry Ohio over President Taft, and points to his 100,000 majority in the last election. Mr. Nichols says he hopes to arrange a speaking date for Governor Harmon in Minnesota about Nov. 15.

"The New England states, those of the Middle West and the Southern states will be solid for him," Mr. Nichols said. "No candidate is more qualified to make a successful fight against President Taft than he. He can carry Ohio and a number of other Republican strongholds. When Governor Harmon was running for governor in 1910, Theodore Roosevelt came into Ohio in an effort to defeat him. In Lucas and Cuyahoga counties, where Roosevelt spoke, Harmon showed a net gain of 9,000. I wired Roosevelt these figures and invited him to come back."

Mr. Nichols met "Cardinal" Dick O'Connor, the St. Paul Democratic boss, in Chicago, before coming here. Some comment has been aroused from the fact that Mr. Nichols interviewed a number of local Democratic politicians before calling on Fred B. Lynch, national committeeman. It has been understood that Lynch will take a Woodrow Wilson slant. This may account for Nichols avoiding him.

DANE WILL FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

Proposes to Use Aeroplane Run By Wireless Power.

New York, Sept. 22.—The conquest of the Atlantic, the most ambitious exploit yet undertaken by an aviator, is contemplated by a Danish airman who describes his plans in a letter published today in the Nord Lyzt, a Danish newspaper published in Brooklyn. This aviator writes that he has enlisted the necessary financial aid and made arrangements to fly next spring from Copenhagen to New York, resting only at London and Queenstown, and upon ships stationed at intervals across the North Sea and the Atlantic ocean.

At the aviator's request, his name is withheld at this time. He says he will use a biplane of American manufacture, and expects to fly at the rate of about fifty-six miles an hour.

Run by Wireless.

The steamers stationed at intervals across the Atlantic will be equipped with landing stages and apparatus for generating wireless current, which will supplement gasoline as a motive power for his engines. By the same means he expects to communicate with his auxiliary ships by wireless telegraphy.

In case of accident, the Danish airman believes that he can notify the nearest ship of his plight, and then, by means of pontoons with which the biplane will be equipped, keep afloat until rescued. The precise date for starting the flight has not been settled.

FAVORITE MASCOT OF THE NAVY IS DEAD.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 22.—Billy, the mascot of the battleship Louisiana, the comedian of the fleet, is dead. Billy made President Taft laugh heartily when he made a trip to Panama some time ago. The sailors loved Billy, and to his memory they have dedicated a space in their lockers and chests, on which appears this epitaph:

"Gone, but not forgotten; born at Norfolk, Va., April 10, 1903; died at sea Sept. 6, 1911.

"Billy was recruited and enlisted at Norfolk on April 28, 1909, and served his country faithfully for more than two years. He was one of the most renowned mascots in the history of the navy. He was well known to the rulers and crowned heads of Europe, had been admired by the president of the United States, the czar of Russia, the emperor of Germany, king of Denmark and king of Sweden.

"His shaggy coat had been caressed by the fairest hands of the United States and Europe. Billy was a good shipmate and a sailor of the old school. He died after a short illness after an overindulgence in Portland cement and insulation tape. He was buried at sea Sept. 6, 1911. Requiescat in pace."

Billy was a goat.

PETERSON AGAIN IN FERGUS FALLS

Missing Administrator of Estates Returns to Explain Matters.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Sept. 22.—John C. Peterson, who disappeared about the first of September, was located in St. Paul Tuesday, and returned to this city voluntarily. He has been a professional administrator, and has handled nearly all of the estates in the Pelican valley the past fifteen years. He has also been dealing heavily in wheat and stocks and has carried large accounts with local bucket shops.

He should have turned over $5,000 to the heirs of the Lars Nelson estate the first of this month, and when he did not do so and disappeared, the entire Pelican Rapids country became alarmed. He had drawn all his money from the banks, but his friends insisted he had securities and would make everything right as soon as he could be found.

Warrant Issued for Him.

Late Tuesday night a warrant was sworn out for his arrest, and a deputy sheriff and his son went to St. Paul in search of him. They did not find it necessary to serve the warrant, as he was perfectly willing to come back, and seemed surprised that the heirs should have been worried. He says he has $3,000 loaned to the Peavey company and $2,000 to the Welch Commission company, but is unable to realize on either claim at present.

All of his property was attached by bondsmen and creditors Wednesday, and the case promises to become the worst financial mixup in the history of the county. Peterson enjoyed the implicit trust of everybody, and is said to have administered 200 estates. He not only acted in Otter Tail county, but handled several estates in Becker county.

NEGRO IS BLOWN UP, BUT DOESN'T CARE.

Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 22.—Although buildings rocked and a great hole was torn in the pavement, Clark Wilson, a negro, did not lose his equanimity when a basket of dynamite he was carrying exploded.

Wilson was smoking a cigarette which accidentally fell into the basket. When the smoke cleared away the negro was smiling and trying to extinguish the flames that were burning his clothing. He refused medical treatment, insisting that he was not injured.

SENSATIONAL SUIT IS FILED

Wife of Chicago Labor Leader Seeks Separate Maintenance.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Martin B. Madden, well known Chicago labor leader, has been defendant in a suit for separate maintenance filed in the circuit court by his wife, Florence B. Madden, who makes charges of a sensational character against her husband.

Mrs. Madden alleges that her husband left her because she refused to allow their home to be used as a "meeting place and resort of thugs and gunmen, and a depot for the manufacture of bombs."

In the bill Mrs. Madden states that with a salary of $26 a week as a laborer, "her husband has accumulated property worth more than $125,000 by means mysterious and unknown to her." She also alleges that Madden owns several saloons which are operated under the names of other persons.

The Maddens were married in Waukegan, Ill., in 1909.

BRYAN TALKS OF CANADA.

Says He Felt at Home There Because of Political Muss.

Portland, Me., Sept. 22.—"I have been through three campaigns, but I have never been accused of anything so bad as were the leaders up in Canada," said William Jennings Bryan last night in telling the state board of trade of his visit to Nova Scotia, from which he has just returned. Mr. Bryan said:

"I am glad to bring a word of encouragement from Canada. You will be pleased to know that I felt perfectly at home there. I never saw a place where public men are regarded so poorly as I was, except in Canada.

"When I was young," he continued, "I thought that all Democrats were good and all Republicans were bad, but as I grew older I saw so many bad Democrats and so many good Republicans that my views have broadened year after year. In the numerous defeats that I have passed through, I have been sincere in the belief that if what I advocated were right, it would triumph in the end."

Mr. Bryan left for New York last night before the results of the elections were known.

BOY SAYS HE SHOT MAN BY ACCIDENT.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 22.—Isaac Weiss, aged 16, after long questionihg last night told the police he was the slayer of a man whose body was found in a box car here Tuesday.

The shooting occurred, he declared, when he tried to take a revolver from the sleeping stranger's pocket and the weapon accidentally was discharged.

The police attempted to identify the dead man by sending fingerprints to the New York police, thinking that perhaps he had been in their hands at some time.

FOR PRACTICING WITHOUT LICENSE.

An aged man giving his name as Fra Lucius was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. He entered a plea of not guilty and his trial was set for Monday morning. He was released on $100 bail.

The complaint was made by John Mueller, a First street tailor. It is claimed that Fra Lucius sold him three bottles of medicince for his wife at $60 and then told him that he would have to make a similar purchase for himself if the remedy were to be effective in his wife's case. Lucius denies that he has been practicing medicine, but has been delivering health lectures.

NOT READY FOR FUNERAL.

Mourners on Opening Casket Find Body of Stranger.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 22.—Relatives of Peter Morgan, who was an inmate of the Schuylkill County Almshouse, several miles south of this place, were notified of his death and made preparations for his funeral.

When the undertaker received the body at Shenandoah the mourners crowded around in tears. When the casket was opened it was found the body was not that of their relative.

Indignant, the family of the dead man sent the undertaker to the almshouse to get the right body. When he reached the institution he found Magal hale and hearty. The body shipped in mistake was that of Charles Guardin. It was sent back and consigned to the anatomical board.

He has not formally announced himself.

PICTURES OF TEMPLE

Salt Lake Man Would Sell Views of Mormon Temple.

Photographed Interior From Baptismal Font to Paradise Room.

New York, Sept. 22.—Max Florence, an ex-saloon keeper and restaurant proprietor of Salt Lake City, is at the Imperial waiting for the highest bidder on a series of films containing what he says are pictures of the inside of the Mormon temple. Last night Mr. Florence crooked his finger at the hotel detective and then walked upstairs with that official and several newspaper men to give out an interview about his pictures. In spite of the presence of the detective, who sat in the room all the time, Mr. Florence said that he wasn't afraid that harm would come to him.

"With the letter which I sent to President Joseph F. Smith of the Mormon church," said Florence, "I mailed him eight enlargements of the kodak pictures which I have. These went to him as samples and were reproductions of the baptismal font in the basement of the temple and of the paradise room, which takes in the fourth and fifth floors.

"I know the building as well as the architect that planned it. My pictures take it in from the basement to the steeple. And four of them are flashlights too!"

Florence said that he had been in town twelve days and that his letter to the Mormon leader, which he sent from here, was the first intimation that the Mormons had, so far as he knew, that the pictures were in existence. On Sept. 14, he said, he received a telegram signed Joseph F. Smith and reading:

"I make no bargains with thieves or traffickers in stolen goods. I prefer to let the law deal with them."

This was in response to the letter and the eight pictures which he said he had sent a week ago Saturday by registered mail to be delivered to the addressee only. A little while after he got the telegram he said that he saw lying upon the telegraph office desk in the hotel a service message reading:

"Knight."

Wanted Message Stopped.

Knight was the manager of the Western Union office in Salt Lake City, said Florence. He couldn't understand why they wanted to keep him from getting the message.

He wired back to Joseph F. Smith that same day: "Have done nothing against law. You should consider me most confidential friend for obtaining possession." The next day an answer signed "C. H. W." came, saying: "The law regards the receiver and trafficker in stolen goods on a par with the thieves. This on my personal responsibility."

Florence says he didn't recognize the initials and asked the Western Union for the name of the sender, but the answer came that he was unknown and had left no address.

From a personal friend in Salt Lake City Florence said that he received a message yesterday which he quoted in part.

"Get pictures copyrighted as soon as possible. Be careful what you say. Criminal prosecution threatened. See postcard men and magazine people." Another from Denver was more puzzling and he refused to make it explicit. It ran: "Article in Denver Post exposes story by Joseph. Uses bad language. Advise to be careful about the goods and ourselves, as plot will be formed."

"I'm being careful, all right," said Florence. "I have my stuff in four different vaults in town. I've got the pictures. They are in my possession."

"Did you take them yourself?" he was asked.

"No, another man took them. Somebody else went in and got them, but my money did it. They haven't been exposed to any one so far. I had a man guarded developing them, and I passed them to him one at a time. That was done a long way from Salt Lake City. The enlargements were made here, but no one knew what they were."

Wants Big Price.

"What would you sell them for?"

"Well, I'd burn them up rather than part with them for $100,000," he answered. "It took many months to make them. If you could get one picture a day you were doing well. They had to be flashlights in some of the darker places."

He said alit in one instance the man who had taken the pictures set the camera upon two chairs and then walked off and got into focus himself. The man's picture is in this reproduction, he said. He was asked to show some of them, but he laughed and said that he would if any of his interviewers would pay his price.

"I told a magazine man this afternoon," he said, "that I'd jump off the Brooklyn bridge if they weren't the originals."

"But how would you be prevented from making copies?" some one wanted to know.

"I can make copies, millions of them, if I want to," he replied. "But I'm going to deal squarely."

"And the church or any other buyer would have to take your word for it that they were getting all the pictures in existence?"

"Yes, but I have made the agreement to the church that I will give the originals and that no copies shall be made if they will meet my price. I'll sell them to Jew, gentile or Mormon."

"Why do you take it for granted that you can get your price?" he was asked.

"Why, 90 per cent of the Mormons never saw what I've got on those pictures, said Florence. "I could take them to Salt Lake City if I wouldn't be mobbed and sell tickets for $5 apiece to the people who had been paying 10 cents for picture shows. Every year tourists come to Salt Lake City and look up at the walls of the temple and say, 'Oh, I'd give $1,000 to see the inside of that place.'"

Not a Mormon.

"Are you a Mormon yourself?" he was asked.

"No," he said shortly.

"Was the man who took them a Mormon?"

"That I won't say," he answered.

Florence said that with the pictures would go complete information about the records of the church bearing upon the pictures. He said that he had this information from a perfectly reliable source.

"There is nothing objectionable in any of this information," he added, "and there is nothing on any of the films that any city authority would not be willing to have exhibited. The story of the marriages can be refined."

He said that none of his records had anything to do with the plural marriages which had been condemned.

Speaking of the building itself Florence said that was five stories high and that the two stories at the top were all in one and comprised the paradise room which was very elaborate in its fittings. He said that unless one knew what he was seeing the pictures would seem much like many other interiors. The members of the church "in action," as he expressed it, were not contained in any of them.

"What will you do with the pictures if you can't find a bidder?" he was asked.

"Well, it's a great satisfaction just to finger them over once in a while," he said with a smile. Florence is a bulky, stoop-shouldered man of past middle age. He talks with a slight accent that might be German. His hair is iron gray and his eyes are as active as his restless hands.

Married in Launch.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 22.—Unable because of the youth of the prospective bride to obtain a marriage license, Fred Sidler and Olga V. Payne, both of Los Angeles, took passage with a minister on board the power launch Comet out upon the ocean. When beyond the three-mile limit the minister performed the marriage ceremony. The skipper of the launch, the only witness, allowed the boat to drift during the rite while he held his lantern so that the preacher could read from his book.

PROPHESIES THE WEATHER

Says Anybody Can Be Weather Sharp Who Knows How.

Storms Are Caused By Disturbance of the Earth's Equilibrium.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 22.—Prophesying the weather conditions with wonderful accuracy months in advance, loving his neighbors and all mankind and throwing in kindly words of advice about crops, etc., taking long walks about the country, and now and then doing a hard day's work, old, Uncle Horace Johnson of Middle Haddam, Conn., is rounding out his 88th year.

Uncle Horace lives with his daughters in the main street of a little village on the banks of the Connecticut river, where his ancestors have lived for many generations. He is credited with having been the first man to conceive the idea of the telephone in the Haddam shipyards, where, by tapping on the end of a long spar, it was heard by a playmate at the other end.

He is the man, who, when Willis L. Moore and his official forecasters prophesied good weather for President Taft's inauguration, said there would be a storm—and there was. For fifty years he has never gone to bed without going out to study the air currents and weather signs.

"All my family have been engaged in navigation for generations," he said. "I have been connected with it since a boy, but have always been in business, too. I have been a member of the Corn exchange in New York and I still go to New York often. But there is nobody today in South street, Maiden lane or Wall street who remembers me; I have outlived them all. But I am still watching the weather.

His First Forecast.

"The first forecast I ever made was when I was a boy of 14 on a ship with Capt. Edward M. Simpson, my brother-in-law, unloading stone for a breakwater on the south side of Long Island. I told the captain and crew we were going to have a storm. They laughed at me. I knew, because of the stifling feeling that I had. Just before the storm broke they tried to make sail, but too late; the squall struck us and sent her over on her beams ends and finally slammed her up on the beach. The captain clung to the rigging and held me from being blown overboard.

"After that I began to study storms and I came to know that the stifling feeling I had experienced was due to the fact that when two currents of air, one dense and the other rarefied, come together the heavy cold air forcs down the rarefied air below, making it rush out from under as water rushes out from under a brick thrown into a pail of water. If it was not for the cold, heavy air over us all the time we couldn't live in the rarefied air below.

"I found out many things that have to do with the weather causes. Some of my discoveries may not be believed.

"For instance, I know that the comets are necessary to us. When a comet gets big enough it draws after it in its flight through space an immense amount of foul air. After the nebula forms and the nucleus begins winding its gases into a head, precipitation or hardening takes place, solids appear, and then vegetable and animal life appear and a new world is born. There are everywhere through the universe worlds inhabited as ours is. If I could have built my observatory on Blizzard Mountain here in the township of Chatham, I could have signaled Mars and got answers, but I am an old man; I ought to have commenced twenty-five years ago.

Predicted Big Blizzard.

"Perhaps you will remember that before the great blizzard of 1888 I warned the country. I gave the word in February and it came the 12th of March."

"But how do you do it?" he was asked.

"My system is based entirely upon a knowledge of astronomy, meterology and mathematics. It is perfectly possible for me or any one else to foretell first class storms fifty years in advance or to tell that there were storms on certain days years ago.

"All the planets are governed by one central power house. All the planets are held in their place by one great central attraction in the middle of the universe—the center of creation. In order to predict the weather one must know enough about astronomy and mathematics to place a certain planet in position whereby the attractive force of the planet draws directly from the central force of gravity of the earth. This disturbs the equilibrium of the earth, lessens its hold on the atmosphere, and causes disturbances in the air that bring in moisture when the lighter air moves away. And you have a storm. To know what time a planet will be near enough to us to disturb the atmosphere, and figure out where and when it will be disturbed, is to predict weather.

The Earth's Balance.

"It seems important to me that humanity should be careful about disturbing the dead weights of the earth. Naturally the earth is perfectly balanced, swinging through its space controlled by the counter attractions of the other planets in a perfect manner. When we dig up all the coal in Pennsylvania and ship it around the earth we unbalance it. It takes centuries for it to gain its balance again. In the meantime weather develops in an unusual manner, rivers dry up and time is unhinged.

"It is a delicate undertaking to figure out just what effect the approach of a planet at a given time will have upon the attraction of gravitation of the earth and what atmospheric results will appear. But that is how I do it.

"Take tidal waves. I can tell when one is coming by knowing when and where a large planet will appear near enough to the earth to attract the water of the ocean and cause it to pile up in a given part of the sea. When the attraction ceases and it drops the water rushes out and we have a tidal wave. We feel it if the place where the waters heap up is near enough to the shore.

"I could predict the weather—all the work being done by the postoffice department—for the whole United States for about $200,000 a year."

LARGEST RESERVOIR IN THE WORLD TO BE BUILT.

Nevada City, Nev., Sept. 22.—Plans have been approved by the officials of the Pacific Gas & Electric company for building the largest artificial lake in the world in this county. The site for the immense reservoir is at Lake Spalding, now a vast body of water, and it includes that lake in the new lake that is to be. The storage capacity of the new dam is so great that figures hardly convey its immensity. The storage capacity told in figures is 2,500,000,000 cubic feet of water. The high dam that holds the water back at Lake Spalding at the present time is to be completely engulfed and the hills that tower above the lake in back of the water will be inundated when the immense dam further down the canyon is thrown across the natural narrow gorge that will permit of this immense undertaking.

This new barrier, which will double the present capacity of the former South Yuba company, will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, and will require an army of men during the time of construction.

OLD CAFE IS CLOSED.

Bohemian Paris Resort Turned Into Branch of Bank.

Paris, Sept. 22.—Bohemian Paris is losing another of its famous resorts. By the irony of fate the old Cafe Vachette on the Boul' Mich', is being turned into a branch of one of the big Paris banking establishments. Those free and easy souls who frequented the Vachette in their time, Paul Verlaine, Bibi-la-Puree and others of that ilk, were generally short of cash if full of wit.

The patrons of the establishment took great pride in the clientele and secured their continued patronage by allowing generous credit supplemented by occasional small loans. If he had to wipe his scores off the slate pretty regularly that was included in the cost of running the business. The Cafe Vachette in character stood about half way between that typical bohemian resort, the Closerie des Lilas and those literary boulevard cafes that boast of being decadent.

Its last great habitue was Jean Moreas, the young Greek poet who with his following remained true to the Vachette until his death last year. It was Moreas, the man who was never known to go to bed, who nightly coined his most amusing epigrams at the Vachette, such as his description of "Very good, but not good," when asked for his frank opinion on Anatole France's works.

CHICKEN RODE ON ENGINE.

Will Cost It a Fricassee to Pay Its Fare.

Washington, Ind., Sept. 22.—When an E. & I. passenger train pulled into the local station, persons on the platform noticed a chicken perched on the pilot. As the engine slowed down the pullet began to rustle her wings as though preparing to alight. When the engineer swung down from the cab, oil can in hand, the chicken flew off the pilot and made a rush to a restaurant across the street. Barred from entrance by a screen door, the pullet sauntered around the building and joined the flock of the restaurant proprietor in the chicken lot at the rear of the restaurant. The trainmen believe the chicken the property of some Petersburg citizen and that it went to roost on the pilot as the engine remained in that town over night. They claimed the chicken for the price of its ride.

POTATOES ARE CHEAPER

Housewives Still Have a Chance at Italian Blue Plums for Preserving.

Chickens Are Getting Cheaper —Farmers Are Bringing Them In.

Probably the greatest change that has taken place on the produce market since a week ago has been the fall in price of potatoes. These have declined about 20 cents a bushel. This is quite a slump. Rainy weather, it will be remembered, has been keeping the farmers around Duluth from getting their potatoes to market as early as they were accustomed to do. But there are plenty of potatoes on the market now. The crop of the later varieties is just beginning to mature. Last spring and summer potatoes were very high on account of the failure of the Southern crop, through want of sufficient rain. That put potatoes up and high prices for potatoes have been the rule ever since. Habit has a great deal to do with prices. It is earlier to get high prices for a product after people have become accustomed to pay high prices.

* * *

Cabbage is plentiful and is selling at a reasonable price. The Holland seed cabbage has just come upon the market. This is grown in Southern Minnesota and Wisconsin. It is a good cabbage for making sauerkraut. The wholesale price is $18 a ton.

A little cauliflower is still coming in from Fond du Lac. The Wisconsin product will soon be gone, however. Then it will have to be shipped from farther south, and will be more expensive.

Garden lettuce is all gone. Hot house lettuce is now on the market. That, of course, is higher-priced.

A few wax beans are still on the market. These are shipped from St. Paul, but will not be on the market long.

Ripe tomatoes are still coming in. The first hard frost, however, will put an end to that trade.

* * *

Housewives who wish to put up the Italian blue plums should buy them very soon, for they will not be on the market long. They are still coming in, however, from Washington and Idaho.

The eating or California pears are getting scarce and the price is going up. There is an abundance, however, of preserving pears, which come from Michigan and New York. The coming week will be a big week for preserving pears.

The California Tokay grapes, the big red ones, are now very cheap. They have recently declined in price about 50 cents a crate.

The Michigan crop of Concord grapes is nearly exhausted. It will not be long before Concords for Duluth will have to come from New York. They will be 2 or 3 cents a basket higher.

There are no more Michigan peaches, but there are plenty of Colorado and Utah peaches, which are better than the Michigans, but more expensive.

* *

The only cantaloupe now on the market is the Colorado Pink-meat. It is bringing $1.40 a crate. There is a fair demand for cantaloupe still, though the season is over for the heaviest movement.

New California package figs have just come in. These are the first of the season. A twelve-pound box sells for 90 cents.

* * *

Chese is a little stronger with the approach of fall weather. Most of the buying now is for storage.

Eggs are higher for they are getting scarcer.

Chickens are more plentiful on the market and the price is about a cent less per pound than a week ago, both for live and dressed. This is because many farmers are through with the bulk of their harvest work and have more time to bring their young roosters to town.

HEROIC YOUNG SEAMAN PRAISED

Acting Secretary of the Navy Nicholson Writes Letter.

Washington, Sept. 22.—For an exhibition of heroism under most trying circumstances, obeying orders to save a human life when he himself was suffering from severe injuries, Carlos G. Wood of Elliottville, N. Y., a 19-year-old seaman of the gunboat Paducah, was commended yesterday by Rear Admiral Nicholson, acting secretary of the navy.

The motor surf boat of the Paducah, carrying Commander Gilmore, his wife, her mother and mail up the Piscataqua river, was wrecked Sept. 4 by a gasoline explosion. All of the party were more or less injured and Seaman Wood was badly burned. Commander Gilmore, unaware of the seaman's wounds, order him to save Mrs. Gilmore, who had been thrown into the water by the explosion.

Without hesitation, Wood jumped overboard, swam to her rescue and brought her on his back to the sinking boat. The entire party was then rescued in row boats.

In a letter of praise to Seaman Wood, Admiral Nicholson says:

"Your implicit obedience of orders under such trying conditions, and your entire forgetfulness of self, deserve and receive the heartiest commendation of the department."

NOTED TRAMP STEER SHOT.

Farmer's Bullet Ends Outlaw's Eventful Runaway Career.

Weatherly, Pa., Sept. 22.—The famous steer which escaped from Butcher Obert's pen, Lehighton, a year ago, and which had been shot at a hundred times, but escaped traps set for it as well, was shot by Farmer William Dietrick in the Quakake valley while it was moving among the corn. The ox weighed 800 pounds dressed.

Since its escape it roved all over the county. It picked its living wherever it went from the field, grew as thin as a deer and as agile as an antelope.

The butcher from Lehighton, who had placed a reward for the return of the animal, was telephoned to by Dietrick as soon as the animal was shot, but told Dietrick to take one-half of the carcass for his reward and sell the other half to a butcher and send him the money.

WILL HOLD UP RESIGNATION

Judge Grosscup Delays Sending Withdrawal to President.

Says He Will Wait Until Charges Against Him Are Published.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Peter S. Grosscup, presiding judge of the United States circuit court of appeals for the northern district of Illinois, has announced that he will not send his resignation to President Taft until the threatened publication of charges and criticisms of his judicial career have been made and he has taken such action as he deems fit to vindicate himself.

The jurist declared he would invite a far-reaching investigation of his official conduct and urge the appointment of a committee of prominent men to investigate all charges that may be brought against him by responsible persons.

Says Papers Were Stolen.

That a former government secret service agent who is reported to have shadowed Judge Grosscup for two years, obtained important papers in the possession of Marshall E. Sampsell, former private secretary to the judge, and one of the receivers of the Union Traction company, by breaking into Sampsell's downtown office, was charged today by Judge Grosscup and Mr. Sampsell.

"I shall follow the course best calculated to vindicate my integrity before the public," said Judge Grosscup. "From what Mr. Sampsell told me today, somebody must have robbed his office to get certain private papers of which photographs were shown him. No one need loot my office, for I will show everything. They were trying to shar action between him and me. He received $18,000 a year as receiver, and if anyone can show he got more it will be a great surprise to me.

Clashed With Roosevelt.

"When Roosevelt was president I remonstrated with him for putting a complaint against me in the files of the department of justice, and said he had no more right to do that than I had to file a libel against him with the clerk of the court.

"Roosevelt said he must put it somewhere, and finally told me he had put it in with the nasty letters he received about himself."

Judge Grosscup declared that the public statement that the decision of the circuit court of appeals overruling the $29,240,000 fine in the Standard Oil case was known in Wall street a day before it was read in court, could not be substantiated.

Advertising has made "oaks" of many businesses that were simply acorns.

THREE MEN KILLED BY FUMES OF CHEMICALS.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Three men were fatally asphyxiated in a vat at the Grasselli Chemical works last night and two others, who attempted a rescue, are in a hospital suffering from the fumes. They probably will recover. The dead are:

JOSEPH WAPARIMSKI, 33.
JOHN MAGUEK, 36.
PAUL JOSEFEK, 31.

The men were mixing chloride of ammonia and were overcome by its fumes.

SHARK ESCAPES, TAKING ANCHOR CABLE WITH IT.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Sept. 22.—A story is told here about Charles Webber and a friend catching a big shark in Neptune harbor, off Fort Slocum, in real Wild West fashion.

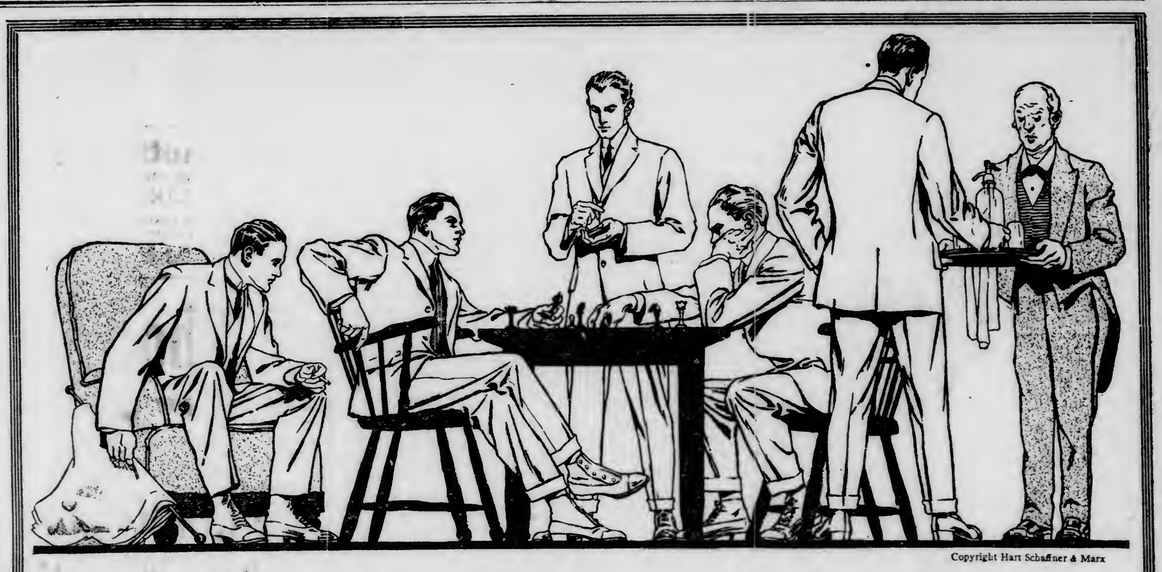
It says that the two men, who were fishing near the fort, got a seven-foot shark on their line, and Webber made a noose in the anchor cable around the line and slid it along over the shark's head. The shark towed the boat almost to Stopping Stone lighthouse, several miles away, before they got him into the boat.

While they were rowing home, the shark flopped out of the boat and disappeared, taking the line and anchor cable with him.

CANE LAY ON MT. HOOD OVER HALF A CENTURY.

Portland, Or., Sept. 22.—After lying on the wind-swept summit of Mount Hood for more than fifty years, a fir stick used by W. L. Chittenden, one of the first persons to make the ascent of the mountain, has been recovered and is held at Cloud Cap Inn.

The stick was found by a son of William M. Ladd, who returned a few days ago from an outing at the base of the mountain, in which his party with Guide Miller climbed the mountain and explored several points just below the summit. It was on this trip, Aug. 8, that Mr. Ladd and his friend, Kingman Brewster, came upon the stick, which attracted their attention because of the markings on the end.



Mr. Ladd said there was snow on the summit this year, which accounts for the fact that the stick has not been found by other climbers.

The original owner of the stick, W. L. Chittenden, who climbed the mountain in 1889, was a member of a party consisting of H. L. Pittock, George T. Myers and William Stephenson. Each man cut a bough from a fir tree near the timber line and the boughs were trimmed down to stout sticks to assist in climbing over the snow fields. On the return trip it was decided to leave the sticks as souvenirs of the climb. Each member of the party thereupon carved his name and the date on the stick and buried it in the snowdrifts.

CONSUMPTION SAID TO BE ON INCREASE IN OHIO.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Reporting that the white plague last year made vast inroads upon the ranks of Ohio's population, 7,288 lives as its toll, the Ohio Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has taken steps to draw its line of defense closer the coming year.

The toll each year has been increasing in Ohio, and Robert G. Patterson, executive secretary, reported that the deaths from tuberculosis for the year just ended was approximately one-sixth the total number of all causes.

OUCH!

Once a man, gaily attired and with a large and expensive bouquet in his hand, was observed approaching the door of a house wherein abode the lady of his heart. A few minutes later he was observed tumbling head over heels down the steps and into the street, propelled by the sturdy foot of the man of the house.

Our hero picked himself up, brushed off his clothes, shook his fist at the house, and observed: "I know what's the matter. You can't fool me. They don't want me in there!"

If President Taft ever heard that tale he must have thought of it last night when he got the returns from Canada.

For Canada, vastly agitated and heart pumping painfully with fright, rescued herself, just in the nick of time, from the gulf of annexation by turning a Liberal and pro-reciprocity majority of forty-three in the Canadian parliament to a Conservative and anti-reciprocity majority of forty-eight.

Never before in the history of the Dominion was there such a revolution. So fearful was Canada that she would be accused of licking the hand that smote her that she bit the hand that sought to pat her on the back.

Minority Leader Borden, who is about to become Prime Minister Borden, largely based his campaign on arguments very like the following, which is taken literally from one of his speeches: "Leading newspapers and statesmen of the United States are unanimous in accepting reciprocity as the entering wedge for annexation."

The acceptance of such arguments as this largely influenced the result. And then another point of view, illustrated by the remark of a Canadian in Duluth who was asked why he opposed reciprocity, appears to have been held quite largely: "I can't just explain, but it seems to me that anything the United States wants so much must be bad for Canada." Besides, the Conservative speakers said that Canada is prosperous and the United States depressed, and that reciprocity would inundate Canadian prosperity with American depression. They said that a commercial alliance with the United States was disloyalty to the British empire; and manufacturers and railroad men of Canada threatened shut-downs if reciprocity were ratified. Topping it all, though it didn't figure so largely in the net result as expected, the French of Quebec went back on Laurier.

We think Canada has made a mistake. Annexation is preposterous. So far as we can recall it was not mentioned during the debates in this country except by one or two individuals whose zeal outstripped their tact and good sense. Greater freedom of trade would have benefited both nations. No possible disloyalty to Great Britain was involved in a move to improve Canada's trade.

But Canada knows its own mind, and has the right to decide its own affairs. If it doesn't want reciprocity it is not going to get it. It cannot be forced upon a nation that won't take it.

The pity of it all is that no statesman on either side of the border will dare touch reciprocity for a long time to come, after this demonstration that it is loaded and highly explosive. It has swept out of public life Sir Wilfrid Laurier, one of the greatest and ablest statemen Canada has ever produced. On this side it has left President Taft in a position so humiliating and embarrassing that not even his bitterest political enemy will gloat over it.

It will be a great mistake if anybody on either side of the border permits this savage rejection of American overtures to interrupt the neighborly good will that has existed for many years between the two nations, and that always should exist. Many unpretty things have been said about this country in the heat of the campaign, but then everybody here realizes that it was the heat of the campaign that did it, and not the fact that anybody believes these things. We should have liked to have Canada join hands with us and terminate the absurdity of tariff restrictions upon trade between two countries that ought to trade together like two states or two provinces. But if Canada prefers to go it alone, why, good luck to her, and best wishes.

PASS THE BOURNE BILL.

One of the first things congress should do when it gets together in December is to pass the Bourne bill (S. 2873), which was introduced in the senate last June by Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., and which provides that cities of the United States shall have the same privilege from the United States mails that are enjoyed by the people of the twenty-nine countries with which this country has parcels post conventions.

As it stands now the postoffice has two rates for carrying parcels, and two systems.

If a parcel is sent from one point in the United States to another point in the United States, no matter how near together or how far apart they may be, it must contain less than four pounds or it cannot be mailed at all, and if it is mailable it costs 16 cents a pound to mail it.

But if a parcel is sent from a point in the United States to a point in almost any other civilized country in the world, or from such other country to a point in the United States, it may contain eleven pounds and it will be carried for 12 cents a pound.

The most marvelous thing in this country is the extraordinary patience of a people who submit to such rank discrimination against them and in favor of the people of other lands.

So far as the carrying of parcels is concerned, through the postoffice department the United States exhibits itself not as a government by and for the people of the United States, but as a government by the express companies for the benefit of the express companies and of the people of other lands.

Senator Bourne's bill is very simple, and contains only about a hundred words, as follows: "That from and after the passage of this act no higher postage rate shall be charged for the transmission of mail entirely within the United States or its possessions than is charged for transmission of mail partly within and partly without the United States or its possessions. The postmaster general is hereby authorized and required to establish and enforce rules and regulations which will give the people of the United States rights and privileges in the use of the United States mails as liberal as the rights and privileges the United States accords to the people of the most-favored nation."

The adoption of this measure will right a ridiculous injustice, and it will make the United States mails as useful to the American citizen as they are to citizens of other lands.

This wouldn't constitute a parcels post, and its adoption need not interrupt or delay the discussion looking to the creation of a parcels post system. It is evident from the attitude of the administration that the parcels post is not coming all at once, but that it is going to be introduced by degrees. While it is being introduced the Bourne law should be in effect, so that a parcel mailed by an American citizen from Duluth to Two Harbors would have at least as good treatment from the postoffice department as one mailed from Duluth to Budapest or from Hongkong to Duluth.

WELCOME, PASSENGER AGENTS.

Duluth is entertaining today the members of the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents, who have just finished a successful convention in St. Paul and were kind enough to top it off, as dainty dessert follows a hearty meal, by calling on this city.

It is an interesting occasion, and Duluth is honored and delighted.

Passenger agents are interested in people who go to places, and that makes their visit to Duluth peculiarly fitting, because Duluth is one of the places people go to a great deal. Besides, it is a place that people are going to go to in increasing numbers every year.

People come to Duluth for business, because it is a lively and growing place of business with a large and rapidly widening future. People come to Duluth for pleasure, because its offerings in that line are unusually varied and tempting. People come to Duluth for hunting and fishing, because it gives access to a large variety of the finest hunting and fishing places in the world. People come to Duluth for recreation, rest and recuperation because it has unparalleled facilities for all of these things. People come to Duluth in summer to seek sweet relief from heat, because Duluth's summer climate is balmy and delightful. People come to Duluth for relief from hay fever because a breath of the cool air of Lake Superior is a sovereign remedy for it. People come to Duluth, in short, to have their bodies refreshed and their souls delighted.

As passenger agents are vitally interested in a place like this, it is good that they have come here. So in a way Duluth has a selfish interest in their coming. But over and above that Duluth is glad they are here because there is nowhere on earth better company than a bunch of passenger agents, who are used to mixing with people and whose coming is always gladness and whose going is always sadness.

PLAIN SENSE ABOUT THE TARIFF.

In these days when the tariff is on every man's tongue, and when the system of tariff special privilege that has grown grossly fat on the nation's prosperity and has taken toll of the people's needs for a generation is crumbling at last, it is well for every citizen to get back to first principles and learn anew what the tariff really is and what is the real theory of protection, so that he may test the present tariff law and tariff laws to come by certain fundamental facts that are beyond dispute.

Prof. Edward Van Dyke Robinson of the University of Minnesota gave some of these facts in a paper on "Reciprocity and the Farmer," which was read in Chicago last June, but which has not yet had the attention it deserves. It has been reprinted from the Journal of Political Economy, in which it was published, and it should be read by every thoughtful citizen who can get hold of it.

With refreshing common sense and unusual clarity Prof. Robinson presents the fundamental facts about the tariff so impressively that the tariff as it is being conducted becomes a hideous mockery that would be amazingly funny if it were not so cruel and hard and oppressive. Says he, in disposing of the absurd idea that reciprocity would injure the farmer by removing the duties from agricultural products:

"In the first place, it may be well to recall that the theory of protection, as advanced by Hamilton and List, had no reference whatsoever to agricultural products. They urged the doctrine of protection to infant industries with sole reference to manufactures. This doctrine assumes that the industry to be protected is one suited to the country by nature but impeded in its development by artificial obstacles such as lack of machinery, business experience and skilled labor. From this assumption it follows that PROTECTION IS A TRANSITIONAL POLICY INTENDED TO DEVELOP THE INDUSTRY IN QUESTION TO A POINT WHERE NO PROTECTION WILL BE NEEDED. It cannot, therefore, according to this theory, be properly applied to an industry impeded, not by artificial and removable but by natural and permanent obstacles. For example, it would clearly be an abuse of the doctrine of protection to infant industries if a tax were imposed with the purpose of forcing the production of bananas in Minnesota; and this notwithstanding the fact that bananas could certainly be grown in Minnesota, under glass, if the consumer were willing and able to pay the price."

Two points are established here that every citizen should print firmly in his mind and remember in all tariff discussions: First, to entitle it to protection an infant industry must be able to show that when established it will prosper on its own merits without protection. Second, that protection must be withdrawn as soon as the protected industry is established.

In all the history of Republican tariff-making no industry has ever been called upon to show that it would pay the nation to foster it by protection; and protection never has been withdrawn from a single industry, no matter how prosperous and powerful it has become. Indeed, the stronger and more powerful the industry, the more insatiate its demands for protection, and the more alacritous the Republican party has been to meet those demands. Protection has been continued even when industries were successfully meeting competition abroad in the markets of the world, and selling their products there at prices lower than the tariff-inflated prices paid by the American consumer.

The policy of protection as applied by the Republican party falls to the ground when tested by the theories on which it was founded. Nothing but might and corruption has maintained it so long in a form in which it has taxed every man, woman and child in the land that its beneficiaries might build palaces and luxuriate in steam yachts and automobiles while their sons scattered the people's money to the birds and their daughters exchanged it for tinsel coronets of European nobility.

THE STATE PRESS AND THE EXTRA SESSION

Could Only Harm Politicians.

Breckenridge Gazette: The Duluth Herald, in many respects the greatest daily of this great Northwest, has for some time been waging a vigorous campaign for an extra session of the legislature, to be held next winter, for the purpose of raising the gross earnings tax on railroads from 4 to 5 per cent, and possibly higher. The Herald has fought its fight in the open. It has advanced good reasons for everything it has advocated, and it has stirred up a heap of trouble for Eberhart and some of his supporters, if that gentleman refuses to heed the demand for an extra session. The only harm an extra session could do would be to the politicians, and The Herald has very little respect for the average politician, and we use the word "average" advisedly.

Sentiment Getting Stronger.

Cuyuna Range Miner: The more one reads the arguments pro and con relative to railroad gross earning tax, the more one is convinced that new legislation is needed to protect the interests of the people. When The Duluth Herald just agitated the question of a special session of the legislature, Minnesota editors were pretty evenly divided in their opinions. Later developments, however, would indicate that sentiment is getting stronger every day for the extra session, much as the people dread to get that bunch of lawmakers together again. A session in the winter or early spring would probably be a successful venture. Northern Minnesota has been "the goat" over a few of those whose main idea seems to be the persecution of the common people for the betterment of the "interests" and the "combines" and the "trusts."

Who Owns Minnesota?

Gheen Record: The Duluth Herald keeps pounding away for an extra session of the legislature to decide who controls the state, the railroads or the people. We wish the cause success.

The Governor's Plain Duty.

Virginia Enterprise: The strenuous fight of The Duluth Herald to force the governor to call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of increasing the gross earnings tax on the railroads and passing a proper reapportionment bill in conformity to the promises of the last Republican campaign managers, receives the sanction of a majority of the legislative members. The Herald reproducing the written concurrence of a large number from either house. The names of Senator Boyle and Representative Knapp were among those appearing above expressions favorable to an extra session for the purpose designated. The object of The Herald, which has had the press and the plain people with it all through, is to show the governor that the legislature is also in line with the movement, making it his plain duty to call an extra session whether he fears the loss of the railroad patronage or not.

Thanks.

Gilbert Herald: The Duluth Herald's campaign for an extra session has made a few of the state's legislators tell their constituents where they stand on important questions. And it didn't add anything to Eberhart's prestige either. The Herald is certainly awake to the interests of the state and isn't afraid of any of the politicians. There are more than a few of the people in Minnesota to allow that it is the best daily in Minnesota, even if it doesn't hold by the Republican party.

Make the Legislature Work.

Ely Miner: By all means let us have an extra session of the legislature and find out where we are at on the matters of railroad taxation, reapportionment, etc. And while the legislature is at it let us get some insight into the freight rates and express business. As the lawmaking body is now paid by the year and not by the session, give them a chance to earn their salary.

Eberhart Blind and Deaf.

Buhl Advertiser: What power is it that prevents Governor Eberhart from calling an extra session of the legislature for the purpose of fairly adjusting taxes of railroads doing business (of the highwayman variety) in the state of Minnesota? The Duluth Herald, about the only big newspaper in the state that is standing by the "common" people, has proved beyond question the demand for a special session. Maybe Eberhart's eyes are becoming affected same as his hearing and he does not read The Herald. He had better hurry and consult an eye and ear specialist or the people will not see nor hear him when the time comes for them to elect a governor.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

ASK AN EASIER ONE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Will you kindly let me know through The Open Court the weight, height and breed of the biggest cow that was displayed at the Minnesota state fair this year? Thanking you in advance, I am,

Very truly yours,
A READER.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 19.

The Duluth agricultural sharps say they don't judge cows on the basis of size, and that there is probably no way of getting an answer to this question—The Editor.

CRITICISM JUST AND UNJUST.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Every once in a while I notice communications sent to the newspapers relative to alleged defects in the conduct of the city administration or the police department. Quite often I know that the "kicks" are really without good foundation, but are due to either misinformation or misunderstanding of the facts. It strikes me that before citizens rush into print to criticize a person or a department, they should at least take the trouble to make enough inquiry to ascertain the facts. I do not believe that there is an employe of the city who would not be willing and glad to assist as far as he could. Criticism is one of the best things for a city in the world, provided it is just. But wrongful complaints can do no good and are more liable to do harm, creating a false impression which it is difficult to eradicate. Frequently the individual would be benefited more by going to the official whom he considers not to be doing his full duty, or whose employes he may think are not doing all that they should, than by making a public complaint. In that way the official would get the benefit of his knowledge if he has any and be able to act much more intelligently than if subjected to a stab from the dark. If, after such conference results in nothing, and the individual is reasonably sure of his facts, the citizen should feel free to make a public complaint and tell the entire circumstances.

EX-OFFICIO.

Duluth, Sept. 22.

A Simile Prepared.

Albert Lea Tribune: The politicians are always on to their job and as they have plenty of time, while the mass of the people are busy with their private affairs getting a living, they often get their schemes through, though not as often as was the case in the past.

Of course, it is very kind of them and very nice for the people to have all matters fixed up for them, and when it happens to be framed all right is not so bad, but as a general case, there is a joker in the deal when the politicians fix the slate.

Although it is nearly a year before the Republicans of the state will meet in state convention, it is said that the state ticket has already been prepared, the occupant for each place except that of lieutenant governor having been selected. The slate framed is as follows:

Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato.
Lieutenant governor—Open.
Attorney general—Lyndon A. Smith, Montevideo.
Secretary of state — Julius A. Schmahl, Redwood Falls.
State treasurer—Walter J. Smith, Eveleth.
Railroad and warehouse commissioners—Ira G. Mills, Moorhead (long term); Charles E. Elmquist, Lindstrom (short term).
Chief justice—Charles M. Start, Rochester.
United States senator—Knute Nelson, Alexandria.
Congressman-at-large—Perhaps S. R. Van Sant, Minneapolis.

It is also said that A. D. Stephens of Crookston has been practically agreed upon for the place of lieutenant governor, though so far as known Lieutenant Governor Gordon is perfectly satisfactory to the people, but evidently not to the politicians and the special interests.

Hurrah for Cannon.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Courier-Jorunal has always viewed with pleasure the renomination of Joseph G. Cannon as Republican candidate for representative of the Eighteenth district in Illinois, and trusts that it may have that pleasure again this year.

Mr. Cannon in making his announcement waded into the ranks of insurgency with a meat ax upon his shoulder and laid about him handsomely. The field was bloody and the smaller domestic animals were swimming for knolls when he finished. Mr. Cannon said that he had been a Republican for forty years—or since the deluge or something of that kind—and that he had not progressed or insurged or "ismed" in any way whatsoever, but had been a plain, unvarnished type of straight Republican since Heck was a pup and for some time prior to the advent of the litter to which Heck belonged. He is running on his record, and upon high speed, taking grades like a thirsty man takes beer, and cutting a hole in the atmosphere that can be seen with the naked eye.

While disagreeing with Mr. Cannon that the exclusive purpose of the tariff bills passed by the Democrats was making campaign material all observers must agree that with a protectionist president in the White House there was no chance that a tariff bill revising one or more of the sacred schedules downward would live long enough to be of any service in any other way. We can sympathize with Mr. Cannon, a stanch and everlasting Republican, for feeling unkindly toward such bills and their makers upon account of the enormous amount of campaign material the bills in combination with the president's veto have made. And it is impossible not to commend the consistency of Mr. Cannon as a Republican, when he warmly commends the president's vetoes after hotly condemning the bills.

Mr. Cannon has never been a shilly-shallying type of Republican. He has always been frankly in favor of special privilege, and the devil a monk has he been even when other party leaders were sickest. He has thought and fought for forty years just as President Taft has vetoed recently. A plain, blunt man, as full of ginger and gotoitiveness at 76 as he was in '76, and a Republican from peak to keel, and from any given point in this or the nether word to breakfast, Joe Cannon stands upon his record—stand, did we say?—runs upon his record like a racing car built to carry nothing but a carso of gasoline and a fearless driver.

Time for Clear Thinking.

Des Moines Register and Leader: In a book addressed to farmers, John Lee Coulter, professor of rural economics in the University of Minnesota and expert at Washington in taking the census of agriculture, makes the following statement:

"It is true that we have a tariff wall to keep out foreign grain, but it has not helped the farmers of this country to the exent of the price of the paper on which the law is written. There is no reason to believe that this country would have imported grain of any kind during the last seventy-five years without a tariff wall. Indeed, this country exports something like $200,000,000 worth of grain and grain products during an average year. The only important way the official would get the benefit of his knowledge if he has any and be able to act much more intelligently than if subjected to a stab from the dark. If, after such conference results in nothing, and the individual is reasonably sure of his facts, the citizen should feel free to make a public complaint and tell the entire circumstances.

There can be no clear thinking on the tariff so long as people merely imagine they are receiving a benefit which a careful consideration shows they cannot possibly receive. If the farmer in fact has never had any benefit from a tariff on grains, why should he look upon himself as one of the beneficiaries and put himself in a position to be imposed upon by others who have a very direct and positive interest in high tariff rates?

The farmer of Iowa is now where he can afford to look the matter squarely in the face. The mischief is done in so far as he is concerned if Canada ratifies the pact, and that seems likely. If he has been victimized let Prof. Coulter be proved in the wrong. If he has lost nothing, then let us all get back to sound thinking on the tariff as to what it can and cannot be expected to do.

A Hay Fever Rhapsody.

I know not what it is I miss, in sooth,
Unless it is the brisk breeze of Duluth,
Unless it is that ozone-laden breeze
Which takes away the sniffing and the sneeze.

O eyes once red, with weeping not the cause!
O gasping breath that makes me puff and pause!
Where did you once again renew your youth,
But in the stiff lake breezes of Duluth?

When summer doth each year renew her prime
Under the soft skies of a warmer clime,
I seek again some cool, pine-boughed booth
Amidst the bold, bad breezes of Duluth.

—Mabel Wright.

St. Paul, Minn.

The Modern Way.

Toledo Blade: The prodigal had returned.

"Father," he said, "are you going to kill the fatted calf?"

"No," responded the old man, looking the youth over carefully. "No, I'll let you live. But I'll put you to work and train some of that fat off you."

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Harper's Bazar: The New Girl—An' may me intended visit me every Sunday afternoon, ma'am?

Mistress—Who is your intended, Delia?

The New Girl—I don't know yet, ma'am. I'm a stranger in town.

Philadelphia Record: D'Auber—Your daughter paints in the Dutch school, does she not?

Mrs. Newrich—Not much, she don't! We pay $50 a quarter to give her private lessons at home. Dutch school, indeed!

Catholic Standard and Times: "It's hard," said the sentimental landlady at the dinner table, "to think that this poor little lamb should be destroyed."

"Yes," said the smart boarder, struggling with his portion, "it is tough."

Exchange: "How very few statues there are of real women."

"Yes; it's hard to get them to look right."

"How so?"

"A woman remaining still and saying nothing doesn't seem true to life."

London Opinion: The Yank—Say, I guess on a hot day like this in the States all the horses would have bonnets on!

Bored Londoner—Ah, you see over here all the motor cars have bonnets on!

Brooklyn Life: Conductor—Did you get out and stretch your legs when we stopped at the junction?

Passenger—Well, not exactly; I went into the dining car and had them pulled.

New York Sun: Simeon Ford, the reconteur, said of vacations at a banquet in New York: "Vacation talk is in the air. Everywhere you see men wipe their wet brows, look at the thermometer and then begin to talk vacation. Two fish in the East river were overheard in conversation the other day. 'What are your plans for the summer?' the first said. 'I expect to get a weigh, as usual,' the other answered."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Husbands get women accustomed to bear any sort of trial.

A man thinks he's public spirited to let people vote for him for an office.

A lot of new cuss words ought to be invented for special use by those on trains that are late.

It seems strange to a woman that a man can get so excited at a baseball game and keep so cool at a bargain counter sale.

Unexplored America.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: That there is any portion of the American continent that thus far has has not been penetrated by whites, that is almost as little known to white men as it was on the day Columbus landed on San Salvador, is almost unbelieveable. But that there is such a portion—not so very large, as portions go — but exceedingly wild, is brought to public notice by the murder of Rev. O. E. Davis, a missionary, by natives in the interior of British Guiana, South America. If the region were in the Brazilian hinterland, along the eastward slope of the Andes, it would not seem so remarkable, but to think it is part of the northeast curve of the Southern continent makes it all the more remarkable.

The country contains 104,000 square miles and a population estimated at 300,000, an average of less than three persons to the square mile. Most of the population is assembled in Georgetown, the capital of the country, and in other ports along the coast and on the lower reaches of the Demerara, Berbice and Essequibo rivers, the principal streams of the country. Near the coast are the Carib Indians, who are comparatively friendly, while in the interior are the Tarumas and the Atoradis, crafty, warlike, blood-thirsty.

In the early Spanish days, during the hunt for El Dorado, several expeditions started through what is now British Guiana. Somewhere in the deep forests the bones of the Spaniards lie. The gold-seekers were never heard of after they disappeared up the slopes near the sea. It was believed, when Great Britain took possession about a century ago, that the country would be explored and opened to settlement, but comparatively little has been done. Explorers, taking their lives in their hands, have penetrated some distance into the interior, but beyond a certain dim, undefined line, they die.

Mr. Davis knew these facts, but his zeal caused him to endeavor to penetrate where no white man, so far as known, had ever before gone. His effort cost him his life Exactly when or where the murder was committed will probably never be learned. Also, while they have cost another life, the vast, silent forests of the interior remain as little known as on the day Mr. Davis left Georgetown.

"A Stroke of Luck."

Oh, friends, 'tis a pleasure
That goes beyond measure
When one finds a treasure
On this mundane sphere;
When one is selected
And forthwith elected
By chance and connected
With wealth that is dear.

It maketh him merry
And flatters him, very,
When circumstance wary
Is framed to his taste.
It fills him with wonder
When fortunate blunder
Hath given him plunder
In happiest haste.

That's what I concluded
When I, all deluded,
My presence intruded
The cellar in fear,
And found there provided
A ton of misguided
Coal that had decided
To wait from last year.

THAT WONDERFUL BABY.

Smart Set: "Before I was married and had a baby of my own," said Mrs. Billie, "nothing used to bore me so much as other women's babies."

"I know," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "It seemed to me that all babies were bad enough to have to look at, but were even worse to have to listen to," said Mrs. Billie.

"Quite so," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "And when they were 'shown off' it was worst of all. I used to go 'gooso flesh' when that began," said Mrs. Billie.

"Me, too," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "But then, the average baby is an awful thing. And, even though I do say it as shouldn't, my baby is not an average baby," said Mrs. Billie.

"Of course not," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "In the first place, Augustus doesn't look like an average baby, does he?" said Mrs. Billie.

"No, indeed," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "And in the second place, Augustus doesn't talk like one, either," said Mrs. Billie.

"I believe it," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "I just want you to hear the way he imitates animals," said Mrs. Billie.

"Imitates the animals?" said Mrs. Van Martyr.

"Yes, all the animals," said Mrs. Billie.

"Good gracious!" said Mrs. Van Martyr.

"It is wonderful," said Mrs. Billie. "It must be," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "Just listen to this," said Mrs. Billie. "Augustus, how does the bow-wow go?"

"Blah! Blah!" said Augustus.

"See!" said Mrs. Billie. "He knows!"

"Wonderful!" said Mrs. Van Martyr. "Augustus," said Mrs. Billie, "how does the pussy cat go?"

"Blah! Blah!" said Augustus.

"See!" said Mrs. Billie. "That's right!"

"Wonderful!" said Mrs. Van Martyr. "Augustus," said Mrs. Billie, "how does the poll parrot go?"

"Blah! Blah!" said Augustus.

"See," said Mrs. Billie, "he never makes a mistake!"

"Wonderful!" said Mrs. Van Martyr. "And now the hardest of all," said Mrs. Billie. "Augustus, how does the choo-choo car go?"

"Blah! Blah!" said Augustus.

"See!" said Mrs. Billie. "Isn't it marvelous?"

"It certainly is," said Mrs. Van Martyr. "But the choo-choo car reminds me that I have to catch a train. I must go. I am not surprised that you are proud of your child, as I have said, he is—er—wonderful. Good-by, dear."

"Goodby," said Mrs. Billie.

"Goodby, Augustus," said Mrs. Van Martyr.

"Say goodby to the lady, Augustus," said Mrs. Billie.

"Blah! Blah!" said Augustus.

A Chastened Trust.

New York World: The price of sugar has risen to 7¼ cents a pound. Three months ago it was 4¾ cents. This advance of nearly 75 per cent in the price of a household necessity affects every family.

The American Sugar Refining company—the Sugar trust—has issued a statement in explanation of this increase in price because "it deems it timely to record publicly its understanding of the advance and its own policy in connection therewith." The trust's statement is plausible and has the indorsement of Chairman Hardwick of the congressional committee which has been investigating the affairs of the American Sugar Refining company. He agrees that the reasons for the increased price of sugar are the scarcity brought about by a 300,000-ton shortage in the Cuban crop, a reduction of from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 tons in the European beet-sugar crop, and speculation in London and Hamburg.

Even more satisfactory than the trust's explanation is the fact that it should have so far mended its ways as to take the trouble to explain. In one respect the trusts have been chastened. The public-be-damned policy is a thing of the past. In another respect, however, methods remain the same. The public always pays the entire increase and the trust keeps up its dividends.

GOVERNMENT HOLDS BIG CORPORATIONS MUST YIELD TO LAW

itself a combination in restraint of trade or threaten monopoly.

"How this shall be done is, of course a separate problem in each case—a problem which in the first instance those in control of the combinations and their counsel must work out.

"The law department of the government cannot undertake to act as universal counsel for the trusts.

"It is preparing to bring before the court all the combinations which appear to be in clear violation of the law.

"If the courts agree with the government's views, they will doubtless follow the precedents set by the supreme court in the tobacco case and by the United States circuit court in the third circuit in the powder case, and decree the combination to be illegal and give to it a reasonable time to reorganize in conformity with the law, under penalty of injunction or receivership if it should fail to do so."

As to Steel Trust.

So far as is known here, the attention which the department of justice has been directing to the United States Steel corporation consists mainly of investigations. It is not thought in official circles here that the matter has progressed to a point where it can be stated that the government is about to bring a suit for the dissolutin of the corporation.

Solicitor General Lehmann, who has been in full command of the government's investigations, repeatedly has declined to say what their status is.

In view of the government's attitude toward the International Harvester company, which is to permit the company to readjust its organization to conform with the recent interpretation of the Sherman law and thereby avoid hostile action by the department of justice, it is thought here that the Steel corporation would have a like opportunity to change any features to which the government objects, if such exist.

Situation Is Complex.

New York, Sept. 22.—That the matter of dissoluting and re-organizing the United States Steel corporation is receiving the earnest attention of the department of justice and the legal representatives of the so-called "billion-dollar trust," is reported here on excellent authority. There is ground also for the assertion that the Steel corporation is making a strenuous effort to meet the demands of the government, but by reason of the complexity of the situation, little headway has been made.

Informal conferences of prominent steel officials are held, but no news of a definite character was obtainable from these sources. Chairman E. H. Gary declined to discuss the status of affairs, and Francis Lynde Stetson, the corporation's general counsel, would neither affirm nor deny the report that negotiations looking to a voluntary dissolution are in contemplation.

Have Lost Identities.

To those who have followed the operations of the United States Steel corporation since its inception, a decade ago, the work of disintegrating a reorganization of the largest industrial combination ever organized presents a task of titanic proportions. Many of the subsidiaries have lost practically all semblance of their original selves, and it is believed almost impossible that original equities be restored.

It is said that a large part of the $500,000,000 common stock originally represented little more than bonuses, or water. On the other hand, it has been admitted by government investigators that much of this inflated value has been replaced in recent years by moneys taken out of the earnings. In fact, the report of the department of commerce and labor has practically fixed upon a value of $50 for the common shares because of the millions put into new construction, betterment, depreciation, and other items.

Legal and Trade Obstacles.

Apart from the legal obstacles which are said to beset the corporation, it is evident that trade conditions are distinctly adverse. For the last three months such new business as the company has received has been at marked price concessions. This, of course, is equally true of the many independent companies, but the latter have had a distinct advantage in the fact that their wage schedules were generally lower than those of the big corporation.

Intimations put out from various quarters during the week point clearly to a "liquidation of labor" in steel and iron, beginning perhaps with the Steel corporation. Officers of the latter company have issued no figures dealing with the extent of operations at the more important plants, but advices from Pittsburg, Chicago and Cleveland indicate that business at those centers is smaller at this time than at any period since the first quarter of the year.

The common and preferred shares in the United States Steel corporation have been subjected to a severe attack in the stock market by reason of the various rumors affecting the corporation. Dealings in the Steel stocks and allied industrials have completely overshadowed the balance of the list, which at first was only slightly affected. Later, however, the entire list yielded under the presence upon these stocks.

covered and later changes were credited to other causes.

Remind Them of Bourassa.

The Unionist and tariff reform papers receive the news with undisguised elation, while the Liberal and Radical press remind them that the victory was obtained with the assistance of Henri Bourassa, leader of the French Nationalist group of the opposition, who left Laurier because of the premier's attachment to the empire.

The Unionist Globe says that while there were some side factors in the contest, "the issue was reciprocity and the Canadian people will have none of it. They heard the voice of President Taft declaring that reciprocity meant annexation. They heard the voice of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in indignant denial, but on the whole they decided to believe the president rather than the premier. They were right in doing so. The struggle is on between imperialism, as the German papers pointed out months ago, and imperialism has won. The Canadian sees the road to which reciprocity leads. He has no wish to move the orbit of Washington."

"Makes Man Feel Proud."

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 22.—The Mail and Empire, Conservative, says today:

"The Knox-Fielding pact has received its quietus. That menace to Canada's independence, that troubler of our politics for the last eight months, has been dealt with by the sovereign people in a fashion that makes a man feel prouder than ever to be the fellow citizen of the great majority who yesterday tore into tatters the covenant of treason our ministers concluded with the president of the United States.

"Not only is the evil spirit of continentalism exorcised, but the government it possessed is cast out. This is the end of the most infamous false dealing that the ministry of a British dominion was ever guilty of. To false dealing was added despotism such as the most autocratic government in the world would hardly have attempted."

"Lost on Great Issue."

The Globe, Liberal, says:

"The government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier goes out of power on a great issue. Believing as it did that the offer of the United States to exchange natural products with Canada on a duty-free basis would prove advantageous to both countries, the government risked its life on the issue of reciprocity and lost it.

"The people of Ontario do not like their neighbors to the south. That is emphatically the decision of yesterday's election. Liberals in tens of thousands must have joined with Conservatives in city and country to show their objections to having any truck or trade with the Yankees.

"The other provinces, taken together, have a majority for Laurier and larger markets, but by an overwhelming vote Ontario has declared that she will have nothing to do with reciprocity.

"The campaign orators of the Conservative party builded better than they knew when, during the last two weeks of the campaign, they appealed to the people of this province to save Canada from the Americans. They created a wave of feeling that was not observable on the surface, but that nevertheless swept the voters from their political moorings in numbers.

"Anti-American Sentiment."

"That the wave of anti-American sentiment will speedily subside is entirely probable. It mounted too high to last. But the drift will remain, and until Ontario becomes less powerful relatively in the councils of the nation than she will be in the opening period of the Borden administration, there will be no hope of better trade relations with the people of the United States. The tariff wall will remain. The more ardent high-protectionists may even seek to raise it still higher.

"If that is to be the policy of the victors, the reign of Mr. Borden will not be long unchallenged. The West will not stand for an immoderate tariff, and reaction will speedily follow any attempt to raise a barrier against imports as high as Haman's gallows.

"It is a matter of very great regret that so many leaders of the Liberal party should be among the defeated. It will be some time before Mr. Borden can gather around him heads for his various departments who will measure up to them."

DEEP REGRET OVER DEFEAT OF LAURIER

In the face of those facts, Duluth people feel today that they have reason for deep disappointment in the results of yesterday's elections.

Thought Laurier Safe.

Everybody was interested in the results; everybody was disappointed, and nearly everybody was surprised. As far as Duluth people figure, the reciprocity agreement was safe. They did not have the intimate touch with the campaign that caused the Conservatives to make claims that were substantiated by the results. They did not know the undercurrents of sentiment that was sweeping the Canadian people to the polls to support the Conservative cause. Duluth received only the echoes that came from the surface and they were all favorable to Laurier and reciprocity. They were prepared to rejoice in a Liberal victory and the overwhelming nature of the adverse verdict was stunning.

Everybody on the street and in the offices was talking reciprocity this morning. The first greeting between business men was a comment on the results of the election. The disappointment was deepest on the Board of Trade, where the grain men sadly viewed shattered prospects and rushed it over short sales, but the comment was not confined to men in any line of business.

Judge Alfred Jaques summed the situation up in a few words.

"What did they do to Laurier?" a friend advanced when he met the judge on the street.

"What did they do to Duluth?" Mr. Jaques responded.

Mr. Washburn's View.

J. L. Washburn gave the following interview in response to an inquiry:

"I have just returned from a western trip, coming from Vanvouver over the C. P. R. The newspapers in Canada, all along the line, were full of reciprocity. What surprised me is that the Canadian people were not able to make a better estimate of the probable result of the election, for generally I found the opinion to exist that the Liberals would carry the election by a somewhat smaller majority than they now hold, whereas it appears that in fact a landslide in the other direction was due to come.

"Without any intimate acquaintance with Canadian politics, I can only give the opinion of an outside observer. I think I can see several reasons for what has happened. In the first place, a great deal was made of the annexation scare and, independent of annexation, that the reciprocity pact would bring Canada and the United States into much colser relation; that it would tend to weaken the relation of Canada with the mother country and, as one newspaper in British Columbia put it, tend to make the people Pan-American instead of Pan-Imperial. Again, the manufacturing interests of Canada threw their entire weight against the treaty and it was argued that Canada would become the dumping ground for the great manufacturing industries of the United States and its own industries be destroyed. Again I think the great trunk railway lines of Canada threw their weight against the Liberals. In British Columbia, which has always been a distinctively British colony, the sentiment was strongly against reciprocity notwithstanding that province contains nearly all the Canadian timber.

"In the agricultural regions between the mountains and Winnipeg the sentiment was in favor of reciprocity. In Winnipeg the press appeared to be divided, but reciprocity appeared to have a strong following. Western Canada, however, has a small representation in parliament, and Quebec and Ontario, of course, held the determination of the election. I read published articles in the newspapers comparing grain rates to Winnipeg and grain rates to Minneapolis over like hauls, the Canadian rates being from 40 to 60 per cent higher than the American rates, making a differential against the wheat grower whose grain is to be marketed in Winnipeg of no inconsiderable amount, and considering the vast grain fields of Western Canada, it is easy to see why that region should favor the opening of the markets on this side of the boundary.

Canada's Prosperity.

"I think, however, there is one great item that influenced the election not to be overlooked, and that is the general prosperity of Canada. The conditions in Canada appear to be better at the present time than in the United States. We may think of the Canadian territory as being far in the North, but the fact remains that Canada has vast resources just beginning to be developed; that while it has lots of worthless territory, it has immense tracts of valuable farming lands, timber lands and mineral lands that are situated in good or comparatively good climates. Conditions up there are favorable to the development of industrial and financial enterprises. Vast sums of money are pouring into the country from Europe, and the dominion is in a state of prosperous development.

"Under such conditions, it is not difficult to argue for the continuance and upbuilding within itself of a great dominion and whatever we may think about it down here, Canada bids fair to become a big rival in commercial and industrial enterprises to the United States.

"The grain crop along the line of railroad between Minneapolis and Calgary was a sight. There was considerable grain still uncut but most of it was in the shock. It had evidently been raining in some sections and they had not been able to thrash, but there is an enormous crop and it would certainly look good to us here if a lot of that grain could come to this port. It would certainly be good for the Canadian farmer and it is difficult to see how it would in any way endanger the American farmer.

"Again it must not be forgotten that the Liberals have been in power for fifteen years and the time to turn over had about arrived.

"If under the conditions existing in Canada this election means what it would appear to mean, I think we may expect a higher wall of protection between Canada and the United States than has heretofore existed and much less may we expect, for some time to come, any renewal of reciprocity negotiations."

"Good For Canada."

"Canada is to be congratulated," said A. D. Thomson, of the grain commission house of A. D. Thomson & Co., who has been strongly opposed to reciprocity all along. "Reciprocity would contain only evil for both countries. It would have engendered race feeling in Canada and split the country up into factions. In the United States the farmers, in the event of its triumph, would go to the polls in November, 1912 and insist on its abrogation, or else throw the country wide open to free trade. It is a blessing that the election resulted as it did."

Flour To Go Higher.

A. D. Goodman, manager of the Duluth Universal Milling company, said: "The price of flour will undoubtedly go higher as a result of the defeat of reciprocity. We millers were strongly in favor of reciprocity in the hope that it would bring up cheaper wheat. The triumph of reciprocity would probably have enabled us to manufacture flour at a price that would have given us a chance at the foreign markets. As it is we have mighty little export business, though Chicago has some with its winter wheat. Some men were saying that reciprocity would not affect the price of wheat in the Northwest. Just look at that board. Do not those quotations give as clear a demonstration as one could wish, that Canadian wheat would have cheapened the whole Northwest product, if the tariff were down. The defeat of reciprocity has caused wheat to soar in Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago. Winnipeg wheat, on the other hand, has had a break. I wonder how the Canadaians feel over that now. Canadian wheat raisers certainly have little reason to rejoice."

W. J. McCabe, vice president of the Duluth Board of Trade, said:

"It will probably result in development of agriculture in Montana. There are large districts there, that are not yet cultivated. That land is just south of the Alberta territory, which, according to claims of the Canadians, is the best-producing agricultural land of the Canadian Northwest. The defeat will also mean better farming by the farmers of the Northwest. We should be able to increase the production of grain to a considerable extent in our own Northwest. This territory is all tributary to the Duluth market. The defeat will probably also mean that wheat in the Northwest will be entirely above an export basis. We have not produced a surplus of spring wheat this year."

A. W. Frick, president of the Board of Trade, was out of the city and could not be interviewed.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER

RAIN

The ideal fall weather continues and everybody is happy. Of course the coal man isn't overjoyed, but he knows that he will have his innings later. Rain is predicted for tonight or tomorrow.

Rain fell a year ago today.

The sun rose at 5:55 this morning aand it will set at 6:06 this evening, giving twelve hours and eleven minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Showers fell during either Thursday or last night over Atlantic and East Gulf states, the Lower Mississippi, Ohio and St. Lawrence valleys and most of the Lake region in connection with a disturbance that has evidently moved its center to Northeastern Canada. Another depression centered over Wyoming has caused warmer weather over a large part of the West, and rains over Northern Montana, Western Manitoba, Alberta, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, Utah and Arizona. A high pressure condition overlying Alberta is attended by cooler and freezing weather in that section. The easterly movement of the Wyoming low pressure will cause rain at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Saturday:

Upper Michigan—Fair tonight, Saturday unsettled and cooler, probably followed by showers.

WITNESSES NOTIFIED

five more jurors to form the twelve necessary to try the case will be secured before the court adjourns Saturday afternoon, and that the state, believing that such will be the case, is preparing to begin the introduction of the testimony Monday forenoon.

State's Witnesses Notified.

The state's witnesses have been notified to be on hand when wanted and there will be no delay in presenting the state's side of the case, says McDonald. Relative to an affidavit accredited to Mrs. Nora Osborne, in which the Cass Lake lady involved the names of Attorneys James, McDonald and Bailey of the state's counsel, Mr. McDonald said he had no comment to make.

It is given out that State Fire Marshal Keller and his assistants will remain in Bemidji over Sunday and watch developments. That a close watch will be kept to prevent any possibility of the seven jurors already secured coming into conflict with any one who would discuss the case is evidenced by the information that a third bailiff will probably be appointed to assist John Morrison and S. C. Gregg, heretofore appointed to have charge of the jury.

CHAMP CLARK BLAMES TAFT

returns he undoubtedly will issue a statement or incorporate his views in a speech.

Few of the banquetters present knew that the president was receiving the returns from across the border, and they did not appreciate what the play of his countenance meant as the little white slips of paper containing Associated Press bulletins were passed to him across the speakers' table.

Mr. Taft proved a good loser, however, for when he rose to speak his characteristic smile had not deserated him and he spoke in a happy vein for a few minutes preceding his more serious discussion of the arbitration treaties.

La Follette Not Surprised.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin said that the result in Canada was not altogether a surprise.

"I consistently opposed reciprocity in this country," said the senator, "and do not think the result affects my argument one way or the other. Apparently the financial interests in Canada were afraid the treaty would injure them."

GET EXHIBIT FROM JAPAN

Virginia Schools Receive Evidence of Deftness of Young Nipponese.

Remarkable Display of Work of Youth of Land of Mikado.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Virginia school children are the proud possessors of a unique and beautiful exhibit of work from the schools of Japan, consisting of manual training and domestic science hand work, text books, specimens of handwriting, photographs, pencil work in drawing, color work, illustrative exercises in arithmetic, geography, language, spelling, English penmanship, commercial work, mechanical drawing, historical pictures done by pupils, courses of study, and all manner of school work known to the experienced teacher. This exhibit is now on display in the Technical high school.

Over a year ago the Virginia schools sent the exhibit on which they won the silver cup at the Minnesota state fair, to Nagoya, Japan, in which city was held the world's fair. This exhibit was there awarded a medal, and a diploma. The fair authorities kept the Virginia exhibit as per agreement, for part of a permanent exhibit, and returned to the Virginia schools specimens of the work done in the schools of Japan, which become the property of the Virginia schools and will be placed in the new school museum.

They Write Good English.

The English writing of the boys and girls of Japan is quite marvelous comparing very favorably with the best specimens of handwriting in any of the public schools of this country. In many of their note books neatly written in both English and Japanese are such sentiments from Confucius as these: "An evil life is a kind of death." "Where force prevails, right perishes." "The greatest wisdom in man consists in knowing his follies." "Happy is he who is contented." "Do as you would be done by." "He who does nothing but sit and eat will wear away a mountain of wealth." "Better go to heaven in rags, than to hell in embroidery." "God gives the milk but not the pail." "A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner."

A notable feature of the exhibit is a series of packages, thirty-two in number, tied up with tasty neatness, representing presents given in Japan on various occasions; to the bride at the wedding; when the baby is a week old colored rice seasoned with salt is used; beautiful little vases for offering "sake" to the gods; presents when there is a death in the family, and on many other occasions.

The exhibit on the whole speaks well for the training and natural ability of the Japanese children whose work compares very favorably with the work of children of like grade in this country.

FRANK BEDFORD NOT POISONED

Autopsy Shows Hibbing Hackman Died From Natural Causes.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The autopsy on the body of Frank Bedford, the hackman whose body was exhumed at the instance of his wife yesterday afternoon, showed that he unquestionably died of pneumonia and not ptomaine poisoning, as was at first reported. Deputy Coroner Pengally performed the post-mortem.

This allays the fears of Mrs. Bedford, who said she was convinced that her husband was poisoned. It also completely exonerates Charlie Lee, proprietor of the National restaurant, where the hackman is supposed to have procured the meal that caused death.

YOUNG NYE NOW SOUGHT

Son of Alice Man, Sent to Asylum, Is Accused of Theft.

Several Articles Found on Nye Alleged to Have Been Stolen.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Armed with a search warrant sworn out by Anton Newberg, officer A. P. Belanger went to the residence of Abraham Nye in Alice and upon searching the room of Gust Nye, aged 22, found besides the suit of clothing which he had gone in search of, a small arsenal, consisting of one double barreled shotgun, one single barreled shotgun, a Winchester rifle, a .44-caliber Colt's revolver and two smaller revolvers. All of the weapons were loaded.

The Hibbing police are now searching for young Nye who has decamped from his home. They have several clews to work on and it is believed that the young fellow's apprehension will occur in a short time.

Believe Articles Stolen.

It is the supposition of the police that all of the articles found in the young man's room had been stolen. One of the shotguns, according to the police, proved to be one stolen some time ago from a man for which theft, another party stands accused.

It seems that Newberg, who is a farmer residing about six miles south of Hibbing, missed a suit of clothing from his dwelling some time ago. He suspected young Nye, whom, he said, had been prowling about the place. He came to Hibbing Wednesday and swore out a search warrant naming Nye's room as the objective point.

Nye is the son of Abraham Nye who was sent to the detention ward of the St. Cloud insane asylum by Judge Gilpin of the Duluth probate court the other day.

The contracting parties are well and favorably known in Chisholm, the groom being employed on the engine force of the Oliver Mining company at the Leonard mine, while the bride has been employed at the Krause Bros. grocery for the past two years.

The Servian church was the scene of a pretty wedding today when Sam Hjdaukovich was married to Miss Saka Molcovich in the presence of an immense gathering of friends and relatives by the Rev. Steve Bozichovich, pastor of the Servian church. Following the ceremony the entire wedding party entered carriages and drove to a local studio to be photographed. The wedding festivities will take place this evening at the home of the groom.

NINE HIGHWAYS ARE ASKED FOR

Aurora, Minn., Sept. 22.—Special to The Herald.)—The protests made by the farmers attending the St. Louis County club meeting here yesterday against the delay in building roads bore fruit as the committee of six appointed at the meeting to urge road work has finished its report and decided to ask for the improvement and completion of nine highways.

At Wednesday's meeting the farmers told of their hardships and lack of roads and in all asked for the club to assist in securing nine pieces of road from the county commissioners. They attacked the commissioners and the present policy of road building in a most aggressive manner. They stated that nearly every piece of road asked for had been promised by the commissioners for from two to five years and scarcely any work at all done.

What Committee Wants.

The committee of six recommended the following:

Finishing up the Farmers' road in 56-15, on which some work has been done; to begin about one mile east of the old Vermilion highway and run between sections 10 and 15, across the section to the section line, being about five and one-half miles of construction.

Road beginning at the Embarrass pike at 60-15 and running to the Aurora-Mesaba highway, a distance of about eight miles. This has been legalized for the past four years, but no work has been done and no appropriation made.

No defense was presented. Four witnesses were presented by the state; the officer who made the arrest, the physician who attended Becina, the wounded man's brother, George, and one of the witnesses of the fracas, Mike Rakavana.

Village Plants Run Even.

The water and light commission presented figures showing the cost of light and water for village purposes indicating the plants are not run at a loss as many believed. The cost of production of electric current, including the interest on the bonds, which amounts to $1,200, is $ 1-3 cents per kilowatt. There are 26 arc lights in the village that consume 596 watts, each, per hour, 117 tungstens that consume 40 watts and 33 tungstens that consume 100 watts. The average length of time for the current year, just past, the lamps were used was 3,825 hours, which would make the total cost to the village, $4,369.22. In regard to the water furnished the village for hydrants and public buildings, it was found the total cost of production was $4,144. The commission asked that a levy be made to cover a portion of this cost and also make a levy of $2,830 to take up water and light bonds as they become due. The request was granted by the council.

Swift & Co. have a large booth where they are distributing samples and exhibiting their wares. McCurdy & Son have a booth in which a professional stove man explains the merits of their wares. A noticeable thing is the boost the management has given The Herald by making an attractive advertisement out of the articles published on the fair. The space between the two buildings is reserved for the chicken exhibits. All the space is now fully taken up, some fine specimens being on display. In the agricultural hall, the booths are filled with the finest potatoes in the state. Also carrots, turnips, cabbage, corn, and all other imaginable vegetables are lined up along the walls.

STRAY CATTLE ARE CAUSING TROUBLE

Nashwauk, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Stray cattle are causing considerable damage to vegetable gardens on the outskirts of the village. Wednesday there was considerable excitement at the home of S. B. Williams on Fourth street and Deering avenue, when a Jersey cow owned by Mrs. H. Maima, a Finn milk woman of the same neighborhood, strayed away from the barn, entering the cabbage patch owned by Williams and destroyed a considerable amount of vegetables. Williams, who was on the lookout for the stray animal, penned it in the garden and held it for two days, claiming the sum of $15 for damages. The matter was finally settled. Three well-known business men were selected and went to the spot, and after a brief consultation decided that Mrs. Maima, owner of the cow, pay the sum of $5.50 and three bushels of potatoes, which was agreed on by both parties, and the matter was settled. Several other people of the village have made similar complaints of cattle destroying their property and this last event will no doubt warn owners of cattle to keep them penned up.

Rabbit Hunter Cuts Self.

Joseph Scully, a local business man cut his hand severely while hunting rabbits near here Wednesday morning. On entering the forest north of town he encountered a large jack rabbit and chased it into the hollow of a log. He quickly stuffed one end of the log and waited at the other end with his knife, expecting to kill the rabbit when it came out. The rabbit made a quick jump and Mr. Scully quickly ran the knife blade at the open end of the log with his right hand, but accidentally cut a severe gash into the left hand.

HIBBING REGRETS DEFEAT OF PACT

Business Men Deplore That Reciprocity Is Spurned By Canadians.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A careful canvass among the business men and others interested in the fight that has been waged in two countries for reciprocity between the United States and Canada, fails to disclose anyone here who is rejoicing over the election outcome in Canada.

All feel that the defeat of the pact has worked to the injury of Northern Minnesota and there are many expressions of regret voiced.

HIBBING STORES TO CLOSE SUNDAY

If Legal Steps Contemplated Against Delinquents Have Effect.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—All of the retail stores of Hibbing will be closed next Sunday, if the plans set on foot today are successful. For some time there has been an agitation to close everything on Sunday but not all of the merchants have fallen into line.

Matters came to a head when a committee from the merchants who close their places waited on Mayor Welrick today and urged him to make all merchants close. He said he sympathized with the movement but declined to take any action against those who would not close. The merchants then decided to invoke the state law and accordingly engaged F. C. Scott, a local attorney, to proceed against any merchant who does not close up next Sunday.

The delinquents who have not closed are expected to retaliate by alleging that not all the saloons are closed on Sunday and to raise the point if there is any enforcement of the Sunday closing law the saloons better be closed first. If this point is raised it is expected there will be some lively developments.

ASKS ELY FOR $500.

The matter was referred to the finance committee and Lawyer Thomas.

ST. PETER TOOK LIFE.

Chisholm Man Drank From Carbolic Acid Bottle.

Chisholm, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Later developments in the case of Edward St. Peter, the Oliver Iron Mining company policeman, who was found dead on a settee in Louis Roth's saloon indicate that he took his life. His death was at first ascribed to heart trouble, but the finding of a partially emptied bottle of carbolic acid in the dead man's pockets, despite the absence of discolorings about the mouth in such cases, gave rise to the suicide theory, and the suspicion was confirmed after the holding of a post-mortem examination by Deputy Coroner Kirk and Dr. W. R. Schmidt.

Mr. St. Peter was about 32 years of age and resided at the Monroe location with his wife and three children, his aged mother also making her home with the family. His home surroundings are reported to have been extremely happy and his act is only accounted for by the fact that he had lost his position on the police force. He had been drinking heavily the day before his death and is also reported to have lost a considerable sum of money in a card game and the fact that he was chided by a relative for his excesses may have preyed on his mind.

A brother of the dead man who resides at St. Paul is expected here today to take charge of the body.

STATE ROAD ROUTE TO BE CONSIDERED

Grand Rapids Interested in Road Meeting to Be Held at Aitkin.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. M. Kling, a member of the good roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association, announces that there will be a meeting of the committee and others interested, the last of next week at Aitkin to determine the route of the north and south state road between Grand Rapids and the Twin Cities, and the balance of the route between Moorhead and Duluth.

The date has not been definitely decided upon, but Aitkin favors Sept. 29 as that is the last day of the Aitkin county fair. Grand Rapids people who wish to attend are hoping that the committee will name Sept. 28 instead, as the 29th conflicts with the second day of the Itasca county fair and Grand Rapids people do not want to miss that, though they would miss the first day of their fair, at which there will not be much doing.

Senator Gunn who is the head of the development association in Itasca county, states that he will use his influence to have the date set on the 28th in order that more from Itasca county can go. If this date can be secured, it is likely that the steamboat men of Aitkin will be induced to run their boat to Grand Rapids on Tuesday, the 26th, to take the Itasca county delegation down the next day. If the steamer can be secured there is no doubt that a great many can be induced to go down, as the down river trip is a delightful one.

To Build Potato Warehouse.

Henry Hughes, who is to build a potato warehouse here this fall, has let the contract to John Lofberg for the erection of a modern concrete and brick potato warehouse. The building will be located on the Great Northern right-of-way between the Tyndall warehouse and Kindred avenue, and it will be 28 by 48, with a nine-foot concrete basement with a brick superstructure, the basement to be four feet above the ground. The new warehouse will have a capacity of about 10,000 bushels. Mr. Hughes states that he plans on being prepared to handle practically all of the local potato crop and that he will pay the highest market prices at all times. Mr. Hughes is to be commended for his enterprise and it is hoped that the venture will be a success from the start.

The Itasca Mercantile company is completing some extensive changes and remodeling in its store at this place. The office which has been located in the middle of the main room has been removed to the northeast corner of the building in a part of the room formerly occupied by the hardware department.

J. S. Lofberg, the cement contractor, reports all kinds of business in his line. Aside from the school house block sidewalks and curbs, which he has just completed, Mr. Lofberg has also seven crossings under construction, he has built thirty feet of sidewalk in front of the Lieberman lot on Third street, and he has recently put in a concrete foundation under the Presbyterian church.

Aside from this concrete work several blocks of sidewalk have been built.

To know of and use a food that will feed and restore brain and nerves before slight nervous troubles end in complete nervous prostration or brain-fag is wise, for unless proper food is supplied daily it is unreasonable to expect the nervous system to answer the demands made upon it.

There is a food, Grape-Nuts, for the particular purpose of restoring weakened nerves or fagged brain to health and strength.

A business man of Baltimore, who made the trial says:

"Two years ago my health had become so seriously impaired it was impossible for me to attend to business. At the least exertion my nerves would give way and the condition of my system allowed me little or no rest or sleep at night. Stomach trouble soon followed and I could take no solid food. I tried the best tonics and medicines but they all failed.

"Finally Grape-Nuts food was recommended and after using it for 10 days I began to feel its good results and at the end of three months I was again a well man—nerves restored to their normal condition, strength renewed, and I was able to do any amount of both mental and physical work without feeling unduly fatigued.

"I know Grape-Nuts built up my brain and nerves and still keep them strong and vigorous just exactly as food builds up muscles or fat, for instance, and I am glad to have learned this valuable lesson." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG PAYROLL

Total Number Employed By Federal Government Is 513,854.

Of These 384,088 Are Under the Civil Service Rules.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The United States government has the greatest employment bureau in the world in the civil service commission.

The commission takes care of the employment of all of the 384,088 persons who work for the executive branch of the government in various ways. Of this number 222,278 hold office as a result of competitive examinations held by the commission, and their tenure is not subject to the whim of a statesman or politician.

This army of 384,088 does not include all of the persons who serve the government. This number has to do with the executive employes. In addition there are 2,115 employes in the senate and the house and 484 men and women who serve in the congressional library. Then there are 4,590 employes of the judiciary, including, judges, attorneys and marshals and their clerical assistants and messengers, referees in bankruptcy and United States commissioners.

Then the army has 80,521 officers and enlisted men; the navy 40,832. To these must be added 1,415 consuls, interpreters, secretaries and clerks in the diplomatic and consular service. The result is a grand army of federal employes numbering 513,854 persons.

This employment bureau has been running twenty-eight years, beginning under President Garfield. During his term Garfield classified or made subject to competitive examination 15,573 positions. President Cleveland in his first term added to this number 27,330. President Harrison extended the competitive civil service to 42,228 additional places. In his second term President Cleveland added 81,889 more to the number, and his successor. President McKinley, further extended the operations of the civil service law so as to include an additional 85,150.

Competitive Places.

President Roosevelt's term in the White House saw the list of classified positions swelled by 113,916 and to date President Taft has added 4,116, making the total of places made competitive by presidential order to date 124,032. The discrepancy between this figure and the 222,278 now under the classified service is due to the fact that the clerical force in all of the government departments has increased materially since first placed under the civil service.

The growth of the executive civil service has been wonderful. In 1816 there were only 6,327 employes of the government departments. The official registry shows the following table:

|---|---|
| 1816 | 6,327 |
| 1821 | 8,211 |
| 1831 | 19,823 |
| 1841 | 22,781 |
| 1851 | 33,352 |
| 1863 | 49,212 |
| 1871 | 53,917 |
| 1881 | 107,095 |
| 1891 | 166,075 |
| 1893 | 179,993 |
| 1895 | 189,366 |
| 1897 | 192,336 |
| 1899 | 208,215 |
| 1901 | 256,082 |
| 1903 | 320,766 |
| 1905 | 349,075 |
| 1907 | 306,141 |
| 1909 | 370,065 |

"The disproportionate increase in the number of government employes over the increase in population," said an official of the civil service commission, "is not at all an indication of extravagance or wasteful methods. It is rather the necessary result of governmental entrance to new fields of activity undreamed of before the civil war. The wonderful growth of the department of agriculture, which was not created until 1862, is just one explanation of the vast increase in appropriations and expenditures for clerical assistants."

Under Civil Service Rules.

This army of government clerks, minor officials and laborers coming directly under the civil service commission, and which numbers 384,088, is divided into several classes. First, and by far the most important, is that of the 222,278 employes who are in the competitive class. Of laborers and unclassified employes there are 64,892. Of excepted and non-competitive places there are 59,202, and there are 9,525 positions filled directly by the president, the postmasters and diplomats. To this number must be added 28,191 laborers, who are listed as the "digging force on the isthmus." These canal laborers are all executive employes of the United States, but no civil service test of fitness is required of them.

It is said by some statistical sharps that this army of 513,854 federal employes does not include all persons who are attached to the federal payrolls. They say that the 64,090 clerks in fourth-class postoffices are not given in the official figures of the commission, which holds that these clerks are not government employes, as they are paid by the fourth-class postmasters. Regarding them as federal employes would bring the grand total of federal servants up to 577,854.

The commission today has jurisdiction over more than half of all those who can in any way be classed as federal employes and over two-thirds of those working in the executive branch of the government. Its work is increasing daily. The commission lends its assistance to those branches of the federal service which hold independent examinations for candidates. The consular service under the state department is one instance. The persons appointed to this service gained their positions as the result of competitive examinations conducted by the commission, but the commission has no jurisdiction over their work, pay or removal, their fate resting solely in the hands of the state department officials.

"There is at present little if any tendency to regard the restrictions of the civil service rules as evils to be observed only under compulsion," said one of the officials. "There are evidences of a growing desire in all branches of the service for a faithful application of the principles of the merit system."

TAGGED TO SAN FRANCISCO.

Two Small Boys Travel Alone to Their Widowed Mother.

Springfield, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Wearing identification tags bearing letters of introduction, Wilbur and Warder Wheldon, brothers, aged 8 and 6 years respectively, started Monday for San Francisco to join their mother.

The lads will make the 2,000-mile trip alone, and where they have to change cars they will be met by a railroad official and given every attention. The tags bear their names and destination.

Their father died at Dallas, Texas, several years ago, and their mother, Mrs. Henry Wheldon, returned to this city, her former home, to live. Her health failed and she went to California, where the climate has benefited her. The children were left in charge of an aunt.

The mother has decided to locate in San Francisco, and made the arrangements for the two sons to join her.

AN HEIR; STILL WORKS.

This Carpenter, Though Wealthy, Still Plies His Trade.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 22.—R. D. Davis, who resides at the Wiltshire hotel, received word from his brother in St. Paul that he is one of the heirs to a $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 estate left by his great uncle in England. The brother writes that an uncle has just returned from England, where he verified the story of the wealth, and that it will be divided among the thirty heirs in the next six months.

Upon the strength of the good news Mr. Davis declared that he had not stopped work at his trade of carpentering, and that he would not start spending his inheritance until it arrived.

GERMANY IN NEED OF CASH

Kaiser Is Helpless Without the Support of the People.

Great Flood of Money Coming as War Clouds Lift.

New York, Sept. 22.—If there should be no conflict in arms over the Moroccan question and the peaceful conclusion of the negotiations is announced it will be followed by a revival of all kinds of business abroad, stimulated by an immense surplusage of funds which are now held in reserve by banks and capitalists in France and England.

They have been accumulating and hoarding millions of dollars in coin during the last six months, and twenty-four hours after there comes definite news of agreement between the great Powers the hoards will be seeking investment.

Germany is the only Power of the four great ones, Britain, France, Russia and Germany, that is today feeling the need of cash, and her need arises from the fact that the war clouds appeared upon her horizon when all classes of her financial and commercial affairs were at the point of fullest expansion.

There have been many charges of the existence of a money trust in the United States, and instances have been cited of its power in private negotiations and corporation matters.

It has been said that no enterprise involving the investment of $10,000,000 can be successfully financed in the United States unless it meets the approval of cetrain financiers located in New York.

Be that as it may, the world has at this time, upon the continent of Europe, an example of the pressure of cash in favor of peace.

There can be no denial of the fact that Germany would face a financial panic and later on a political revolution in case of war with France and England.

Where's the Divine Right?

After all is said and done, the Kaiser, his army and his navy are dependent upon the support, good will and faithful service of the German people, and now more than at any other period of their history the German people are dependent upon their trade with foreign nations.

Withdrawal of foreign cash loaned to German manufacturers, merchants, transportation companies and banks; stoppage of German mercantile fleets, means ruin to German commerce and industries, and poverty to the masses of the people.

France and England have the call upon cash resources of Europe, and while the velvet hand of finance is softer in touch than the mailed fist of war, it can crush as tightly and ruin as completely if it chooses to exert its power.

An international money power may exert good, as well as evil, influences, and if now the combine saves Europe from a drenching in blood, let it be given due credit for the accruing benefits to the masses of the people of that continent.

The assassination of Stolypin, prime minister of Russia, in the very presence of the Emperor Nickolas II., will have influence in the councils of state of all the courts of Europe.

It is a time for all crowned heads to stand together, and there are enough adverse influences to monarchs and monarchies at large now in Europe to take any chances of increasing their power and their number by loosing the now muzzled dogs of war.

To show the power of Britain in finances it is well to remember that the Bank of England holds today 58.10 per cent of cash reserves in her vaults as compared with her liabilities, and that the British empire produces now more than $300,000,000 in new gold every year, out of the $500,000,000 produced annually in the entire world.

Germans Must Give Labor.

As $100,000,000 is produced in the United States, about $50,000,000 in Mexico, South America and other independent countries, it will be seen that Russia, France and Germany produce very little, and have to give the labor of their people, and the products of their lands in order to obtain from the more favored countries the cash, the gold, they need to carry on their governments or the business of their respective populations.

South America produced in August nearly $16,000,000 in new gold; Australia, Canada and India add their productions to Britain's hoards and build up a very Gibraltar in British finance.

The British empire and the United States produce four fifths of all the gold now dug from the earth, and it is a wonderful strength which this possession of the sources of the yellow metal gives them among the nations of the earth.

France and England will loosen up their pursestrings as soon as peace is assured, and there will then come a strong rebound from the low levels of securities at home and abroad.

The week in the stock markets of this city has been one of gloom, the slump of the past three months followed a year of dull and comparatively small business and many brokers have been unable to make current expenses. They are hoping for the end of this depression, but many of them express themselves as fearing a weak, fluctuating and uncertain market from now until the close of the presidential campaign.

It is this dullness, taken in connection with the fact that all sections of the United States have ample supplies of cash, that prevents any tightness of money in this city now in the very midst of the moving of the crops. Chicago's importance as a financial center, the growth in resources of the banks of that city have enabled them to take care of demands for money from the West without drawing heavily upon New York institutions.

It is also very possible that the lesson taught in 1907 as to the difficulty in realizing currency from balances placed in this city has caused ready money to be kept West in larger sums than prior to that troublous October and stormy November of 1907.

Half for Germany.

It is stated here that international bankers with houses in New York have been giving a helping financial hand to Germany and have placed several millions of dollars to the credit of hard pressed firms in that country.

With cotton and wheat going out so freely to Britain and France as they have done for the past three weeks, such assistance could be afforded German houses without drawing actual cash from this city.

The transfer of cash now to our credit in Paris and London, in aid of German bankers and their clients, could readily be effected, and that such movement is in actual progress there is no doubt.

But Berlin is wise enough to understand that New York is not in position to give all the financial assistance that would be required in case of hostilities.

The efforts of the Southern cotton pool to minimize the number of bales that will be produced this year is a matter of ridicule here, and any attempt to raise prices per pound that are based upon a yield of but 12,500,000 bales and an attempt to finance the holding back of a fraction of that number from the market is sure to meet with disaster.

Private advices point conclusively to a crop of more than 14,000,000 of bales, but conditions are such that a larger crop could be sold at good round prices.

The Southern financiers will be safer in their attempts to control prices if they base their calculations upon 14,500,000 bales as the crop and give to the world the information that all of this is needed to supply the demand.

The public is entitled to correct information as to the crop conditions, and it is neither in the interest of those who produce or those who purchase to attempt to bull or bear the markets with erroneous statements.

If planters and farmers have suffered from statements of speculators who have, to achieve their own ends, overstated production and thus lowered prices they are equally liable to suffer financial loss by concealment from them of the approximately correct statistics of crop results.

If there were 15,000,000 of bales of cotton produced in the South it would bring 13 to 14 cents per pound if gradually marketed. The South is very fortunate in her crop situation this year.

MRS. TAFT DOES OWN MARKETING

Knows Just What She Wants and Always Pays Cash.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 22.—The wife of the president of the United States goes to market every morning. Other prominent women are glad to relinquish the daily routine of ordering and buying to a trained housekeeper. But Mrs. Taft every morning shortly after breakfast steps into her limousine and is whirled out on her tour of the markets.

She was so seriously ill that she was compelled to let a housekeeper take charge of the summer White House last year. But now she personally oversees the servants and all the details of the domestic routine here. In marketing she selects foods carefully and invariably pays cash.

In the shops she is very simple and inconspicuous in manner. The village tradesmen appreciate the fact that she deals with them personally.

"She is so easy to please," said one, "and so pleasant spoken." All agree she knows just what she wants.

ROMANCE IS ENDED QUICKLY BY CZAR

Grand Duke Michael Has to Give Up His Sweetheart.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—It is reported that the most beautiful face in all Russia has been hopelessly marred by command of the czar, in order that the Grand Duke Michael, the czar's only brother, might be restored to the honors which he forfeited through his infatuation for the face.

The story is replete with romance, intrigue and state craft in which the czar, the grand duke and beautiful Ekatarina, a girl of high social standing but not of the royal blood, play the principal roles. When the grand duke's infatuation with Ekatarina first became known to the czar he was very much incensed. Soon afterward Ekatarina married a rich Moscow banker, Mamontoff, and the affair with Michael passed from the indulgent brother to the province of the holy synod, chief authority of the orthodox church. Mamontoff is the richest man in Moscow, the town of Russian millionaires, where Ekatarina's parents likewise are leaders in society.

Husband Found a Letter.

Mamontoff quickly developed the jealous temperament of an Othello, and watched his wife like a Turk. Love making between Michael and Ekatarina was reduced to the exchange of burning letters, but when spies delivered one of the duke's missives to the banker, he gave an explosion of wrath that startled Moscow society.

Mamontoff was not only jealous, but brutal. Winding Ekatarina's blond tresses around his arm, he dragged her on the floor of her boudoir, demanding all letters that the grand duke had sent her before and after the marriage. When he got them, after many denials, attended by tears and protestations, he "beat her like a mujik," and threw her out of doors. The matter was taken to the czar and patched up. One night, however, Mamontoff returned unexpectedly and found the grand duke in his wife's boudoir. He assailed his imperial highness with bitter words.

Carried the Girl With Him.

Taking Ekatarina in his arms, Michael ran into the street, followed by the banker.

"I will hitch her naked to a cart, and lash her through the streets of Moscow, according to the old custom," shouted Mamontoff.

"You will do nothing of the kind," replied the grand duke, "and the holy synod will give you a divorce."

And a divorce the banker obtained. Michael then wed Ekatarina morganatically. This coming to the czar's knowledge, the girl was sent to Holy Trinity cloister. Her lovely hair, eyebrows and eyelashes were cut off, and the duke was sent to Orel.

SNEEZED HAIR OFF WOMAN.

Romaniv's Heavy Outburst Raises More Than Dust in Church.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 22.—Maxim Romaniv went into the Russian Independent church here the other morning and took his hay fever with him. He knelt right behind Mrs. Paul Dorskay, who was beside her husband. When the services were half completed Mrs. Dorskay, who had a great deal of her own blond hair and then some, sat back in the pew. Just as she did so, Romaniv felt an unusually violent attack of hay fever coming on, and before he could get his handkerchief and his hands from under his beard he sneezed.

Such a sneeze it was that it blew off half Mrs. Dorskay's coiffure, turned the congregation around and made Mr. Dorskay fighting mad. The men quarrelled in the church and went outside to settle it. The sexton ran out after them, and before they struck a blow he had arbitrated everything.

Mrs. Dorskay absolved Romaniv for his cyclonic, though unintentional, conduct, but she refused positively to redon the ringlets, and she left them lying on the church floor.

SHINE WITH EACH DRINK.

Barber Shop in Atlanta Raided and Much Liquor Found.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 22.—There have been in the history of barber shops such plans as "A shave and a shine all for a dime," "A haircut and a shine free," but it was left for a negro barber shop at 18 Ivy street to give a free shoe shine when a drink was paid for. That is, it was a Sunday blind tiger, in which Will Strong, a bootblack, sold liquor and then gave his customer a free shine.

The police had suspected the barber shop for some time and on last Sunday they made a raid and found a large lot of whisky in pint bottles. Will Strong was in charge and was running a bootblack stand. He claimed that another negro had brought the whisky into the shop without his knowing it. The recorder sent Will Strong to the chain gang for thirty days.

Look After Your Health

If Your System is Kept Toned Up You Will Escape Many Diseases That Find Easy Victims Among Pale, Debilitated People.

Enough disease germs enter the average human body every day to cause death if the healthful organism did not combat these germs and render them harmless.

Let the human system become run down, or debilitated, and this power of resistance to disease is weakened. Soon the disease germs get the upper hand, an acute sickness follows or the patient becomes a chronic invalid.

It is in the blood that the battle to maintain the health is fought. Keep the blood toned up, the bowels open and observe ordinary care as regards food and rest and you will avoid much sickness.

Debility is not a recognized disease but is a condition in which the sufferer cannot get a good night's sleep, wakes up all tired out, has no strength or ambition, is nervous, has a poor appetite, has trouble with the stomach and is subject to headaches and backaches. It is most commonly met with in people who have to work hard, are confined indoors, eat improper food or have worries and grief.

Mrs. Norris Cook, whose address is Box 100, R. F. D. No. 3, Ottawa, Kans., says: "I was generally run down from hard work. I suffered from severe headaches, which would last for three days at a time, and when they came on I would have to give up all work. There were such sharp, knife-like pains in my side that I could not take a long breath without its hurting me. I was pale and nervous and had no strength. Under the doctor's care I would feel better for a day or so and then become worse again. This was my condition for three years or until I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They gave me a good color and I gained 15 pounds in weight. The pains and headaches have left me and I am not the least bit nervous. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only thing that helped me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a general tonic and have cured such blood and nerve diseases as anaemia, rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers, sciatica, neuralgia, sick headaches, St. Vitus' dance and other troubles. They cure stomach trouble by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened digestive system. Hundreds of cures in most severe cases entitle this treatment to a thorough trial.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

"MYRTLE" HIS FAD.

Clyde A. Bays Is Married to Fourth of That Name.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 22.—Divorced yesterday from his third wife, Clyde A. Bays, aged 27, today married his fourth, Mrs. Myrtle Hoover, a pretty girl of 18.

All of the former wives of Bays were named Myrtle, and he claims if he marries a dozen times again that he will have no girl whose name is not Myrtle.

"There is a fascination in the name Myrtle for me," said Bays. "Ruth, Esther, Helen, Mav, Anna and Polly may be all right, but me for Myrtle."

Bays was first married to Miss Myrtle Lennox of Winslow, Canada, and she died a short time after the ceremony was performed. His second wife was Miss Myrtle Arney of Shelbyville, Canada, and he obtained a divorce from her. His third wife was Miss Myrtle Hill of Tell City, Ind., and he obtained a divorce from her yesterday.

"While I have been rather unfortunate in my matrimonial experiences," said Bays, "it has not been because of the names of my wives."

TYPHOID ON FREIGHTERS

Epidemic Has Been Caused By Carelessness in Getting Water.

Drinking Supply Often Taken in Through Bilge Pumps.

Carelessness in obtaining the water supply for freighters on the Great Lakes is the cause of a number of typhoid cases which have occurred among seamen this year. Sailors say that there have been several mild epidemics of the disease among seamen this year, and their statements are corroborated by the hospital records here and at other ports on the lakes.

The water supply for the freighters is taken from the lakes and ship owners and health authorities urge the greatest care in avoiding contamination. The men who take in the water, however, are not always as careful as they should be.

It is said that in some cases the pumps through which the bilge water is forced are also used for drawing the fresh water for the use of the seamen. In other cases water is taken in harbors, and rivers, where sewage and refuse from ships and cities contaminate the water.

The government authorities make every effort to prevent typhoid on the ships by educational means and they have succeeded greatly during recent years. It is said, however, that careless practices are still in effect on some of the ships and the typhoid cases which have been reported this year are the result.

THREE RALLY DAY MASS MEETINGS WILL BE HELD BY DULUTH BOYS

JULIUS NOLTE.

PALMER BEVIS.

NORMAN D. McLEOD.

In the Men and Religious Forward movement that is commanding the attention of men throughout the country, the boy is not forgotten. He is going to have a definite place on the program. Sunday, Sept. 24, is the rally day in the ninety cities in which the campaign will be conducted, and in all these cities the boys as well as the men will hold large rallies.

The committee in charge of the Duluth campaign has arranged for three boys' meetings, and it is hoped that every boy in the city will attend one of these meetings, so that he can get familiar with what this movement is, and what part he is to have in it.

The boys from the central part of the city, East end, Lakeside and Hunter's Park will meet at the boys' department, Y. M. C. A., Sixth avenue east and Third street. Judge Page Morris will be the chairman of the meeting, and Julius Nolte, C. Russell McLean and Dr. Yost will give short talks. Boys in the West end will meet at the Central Baptist church. R. R. Ferward will be the chairman, and talks will be given by Caldwell Harris, Palmer Bevis and Norman D. McLeod. The boys of West Duluth will meet at the Westminster Presbyterian church. Bert M. ## "MUTE" SAYS "DONT TELL"

Fugitive Takes Possesion of Closet in East Fourth Street Home.

Recaptured By Deputy Sheriff and Gets Sixty Days in Jail.

"Don't tell them where I am," said a "deaf mute," as he jumped into a closet of a private residence on Fourth street this morning, and slammed the door before the eyes of an astonished and frightened housewife, while Deputy Sheriff Stevens steamed up the hill in pursuit.

The prisoner, whose name was Gust Ruther, was being taken from the county jail to the municipal court, where he was to answer a charge of begging under the pretense of being deaf and dumb. Capt. Stevens also had Charles A. Plummer in charge. At Fifth avenue east and Second street, Ruther broke away. Capt. Stevens fired four shots in the air, and then leaving Plummer where he was, started in pursuit.

The prisoner ran to Fourth street and entering a residence there, tried to hide in a closet, but he was captured by the deputy a few moments later. Plummer walked on to the municipal court and gave himself up to the police.

The charge against Ruther was changed to peddling without a license when he was arraigned this morning. It was claimed that he was trying to sell some cheap jewelry. He was found guilty and fined $50 and costs or sixty days in the county jail. He was committed.

Plummer, who is charged with the embezzlement of $2,500 from the Minnesota Fruit company, waived examination and was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury. He said that he had no statement to make, but told the court when arraigned that he was going to endeavor to secure his release on bonds and "fix things up."

DRIVEN CRAZY BY HIS PATENT

Old Riverman, Living in Cloquet, Loses Mind and Is Committed.

Cloquet, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Aleck Beaulieu, an old resident of the city, was adjudged insane in probate court at Carlton, Thursday afternoon, and Friday morning was taken to Fergus Falls by Sheriff Harry McKinnon. Mr. Beaulieu became violently insane Wednesday afternoon, although for several days his actions had been cause for his friends watching him very closely.

Beaulieu was for about a dozen years foreman of the river operations at the Northwest Paper company's plant here and was considered a competent man. For some months he had been working on a patent and recently he had become so overwrought by constant anxiety over the outcome of it and his inability to bring it to perfection that his mind finally gave way. Tuesday afternoon he went into the office of the paper company and said that his patent was earning him more money than the Northwest Paper company could earn if its managers lived 1,000,000 years. He continued to tell his tale to anyone about town that would listen, and finally on Wednesday he went to the Island and began throwing money around the street, distributing about $80 along the gutters.

Becomes Very Violent.

When an attempt was made to reason with him he became so violent that it was necessary to tie his hands and feet before he could be sufficiently subdued to make it possible to take him to Carlton, to await his hearing Thursday. About two years ago Beaulieu figured in a neighborhood mixup, when the fine shrubbery in several yards in his neighborhood was cut down in the night, but at the trial nothing was proven against him.

DELIGHTED WITH NEW EXPLOSIVE

Duluth Men Watch Experiments With Smokeless Dynamite at Tower.

The city officials who went to Tower Wednesday to witness the tests of the new explosive of the National Powder company returned to the city yesterday afternoon. They had only words of praise for the performances of the explosive, which is said to have no smoke or gas after being exploded.

Thomas F. McGilvray, city engineer, stated this morning that it was one of the most remarkable exhibitions which he ever saw. He explained that two heavy charges of the explosive were set off at the bottom of a shaft over 300 feet deep. After they had been discharged he said the party immediately re-entered the shaft and were at the bottom within a few minutes. He asserted that the air was just as pure as before they left, being free of gas and smoke and that the only thing which he could smell was the burned fuse, which had been made ten feet long to enable the party to get out of the shaft in safety. The mining captain who went with the party declared that the invention will be one of the most valuable in years to facilitate mining. He claimed that when ordinary explosives are used it takes from half an hour to an hour and a half before the air is clear enough to allow of a resumption of work. Other members of the party were several mining men, and Aldermen Joseph Shartel, Curren and Jordan. The process was invented and patented by a Duluth man.

RETAIL GROCERS HOSTS AT ENJOYABLE BANQUET

Wholesalers and Other Business Men Guests at Dinner.

Congressman Miller, M. M. Gasser and G. H. Maxwell Among Speakers.

Nearly 250 enthusiastic boosters for Duluth trade conditions gathered at the St. Louis hotel last evening, enjoyed the excellent banquet provided and listened to speeches which were filled with enthusiasm for the Zenith City and Zenith City business men.

The banquet was not given especially for the wholesalers but was for men in all lines of business in the Zenith City. It was promoted and held under the auspices of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association and was a big success from every standpoint.

The grocers and wholesalers predominated but representative business men in all phases of business life were on hand to encourage the efforts of the grocers in their first big "get-together" meeting.

The get-together idea was really what prompted the banquet and meeting. It was desired that the business men of the city meet for their own advancement and from the compliments paid the grocers last night, the idea is a popular one.

"Duluth grocers are about as fine a bunch of business men as you will find anywhere in the country," said one man after the banquet last night. "They are wide-awake, progressive, enthusiastic, quick to see business possibilities that will help the entire city and last night they proved that they are by no means selfish or jealous of other lines."

These sentiments were reiterated many times during the course of the evening.

Will Send Delegates.

The grocers commended the action of the Commercial club in sending out boosters' excursions. So favorably are they impressed with the idea that on all future excursions they will send representatives to help in the good work of spreading the gospel of "Duluth, your natural market."

Congressman Clarence B. Miller was the speaker of the evening. He talked mostly on the turning down of reciprocity by the Canadian voters. He regretted the fact that the bill did not pass and told why he thought the passing of the act would have been of great mutual advantage to both the United States and Canada.

Miller said in part:

"The reports we have received tonight lead us to believe that reciprocity has been defeated. This is a calamity which will hurt the entire country. But it was not entirely a surprise to me. For some months I have been investigating the feeling of the Canadian people on the question, and throughout that broad land, wherever I traveled, I found that the press had prostituted its power to the great interests to which they are subservient. Thousands of special agents have been campaigning throughout the eastern provinces with unlimited capital and influence behind them, the great interests of both the United States and Canada have been working secretly to undermine the stamina and good sense of the provinces.

Appeal to Patriotism.

"They have shown the people a picture which they have simply looked at and not taken time to analyze. They have appealed to the patriotism of the Briton, asserting that the acceptance of reciprocity would would be a slap in the face of the mother country; that it would tend to the belittling of Great Britain, and the consequent aggrandizement of the United States. "I have been reared from boyhood in an atmosphere where to question the statement that high tariff is the only thing for America, would have been looked upon as treason. We do not forget our early training, therefore I am still a believer in high tariff. But I believe in it only as a protection for the infant industries. Where are the infant industries today? They do not exist any longer. They have grown not only to maturity but have become giants which overshadow the entire universe, and for the puny citizen to pass laws to protect them is equivalent to our attempting to put mud-guards on the axis of the earth.

Unnatural Barrier.

"A tariff wall between Canada and the United States is a barrier that the Divine Providence did not intend, and it must and will be abolished. These great countries forming the most wonderful of all twin nations, shall have within the next three years not only reciprocity but an absolutely free interchange of commodities, and they will go onward to work out the great destiny which lies before them.

"One of the great reasons for the defeat of this act today, is the lying statement spread broadcast throughout both the states and Canada, that if it had passed that wheat would fall to such a low price that both American and British farmers would be bankrupt. Consider if you can, how adroitly these men worked, how skillfully they planned their case, and how well they knew the avariciousness of the men they wished to influence. But if these farmers had used their brains, if they had thought on the matter at all, they would have realized that this was a feeble invention of unprincipled men. Wheat could not possibly have dropped more than 1 cent, all prices are fixed by the board of trade in Liverpool, based on the consumption and total supply in the world and the probable crops next season. But it would have made impossible the attempt to corner wheat which has so shocked every right-thinking person in the world."

E. L. MILLAR, Toastmaster.

M. M. GASSER.

Evolution of Grocer.

In a speech on the evolution of the grocery business, M. M. Gasser told of the difference in the methods employed now and those of a few years back.

The grocery business is mostly a package business today, he explained. One trouble with the package business is that a grocer is unable to tell how old the package goods are when he receives them.

Mr. Gasser told how the putting up of goods in package form has worked great changes in the grocery business. He did not blame the wholesalers for the small margin of profit on packages but laid it mostly to the manufacturers who control not only the size of the package but the price as well. He said that in spite of the fact that the margin of profit is very small, the manufacturer insists on being paid promptly. As a large stock has to be constantly on the shelves, this method keeps the retailer's money on the move all the time.

Small Profits.

Mr. Gasser told of instances of small profit on package and canned goods. He said that for instance one article costs 29 cents a pound, which must be sold at 35 cents a pound. He stated that on marglus such as these the retailer cannot make a living profit on the sale.

George H. Flibert, president of the Retail Grocers' association spoke at some length on local business conditions. He stated that in Duluth business conditions are better at this time than in almost any other city in the entire country. He said that he knew this from personal observation.

The speaker urged all to help make the State Grocers' convention, which will be held in Duluth in February, the best one ever held. "Make them want to come again," he said. "Inspire them with some of our enthusiasm."

He spoke of the advantakes of having those in one line of business banded together for the interests of all. He told of the work of the Duluth association, and complimented the members of the association on the earnest help they are giving him to make the association a powerful factor in the upbuilding and progress of the city.

John H. Ryan, secretary of the state association gave an address on the importance of organization. He told of the advancement in Minnesota and other states and pointed out the advantages that had come through organization.

Fred Lorenz, an organizer of Minneapolis, told of his work of organizing and told some stories that had the members hanging on the chairs. The efforts of Mr. Lorenz were most happy and his remarks were greeted with enthusiasm.

Short talks were also made by George H. Maxwell of Chicago, George M. Peterson, local secretary, James T. Williams of Minneapolis, and others. E. L. Miller was most happily cast as toastmaster and in a few appropriate remarks Simon Clark welcomed the visitors on behalf of th grocers.

CUTTING A FALL FURROW IN THE SPORTING FIELD

Roller Hockey Should Prove Exciting Sport—The Cubs Tasting Bitter Defeat--Dan Kelly's Record Explained.

(BY BRUCE.)

IF SOME of the reports of this roller hockey are true the people of this city are going to witness a game in which floor sliding and shin scraping, not to mention other little excitements that will enliven the game, predominate. For excitement and general hilarity, those who have witnessed the workouts of the various teams up at the big Auditorium, are authority for the statement that the game is a loola paloozer.

Eddie Furni was walking placidily down First street yesterday, evidently wrapped deeply in the mantle of thought. It was a shame to disturb him, as meditation is a habit that our schools seek to encourage mightily. But the opinion of Ed on the game was highly imperative, as he is considered one of our authorities on the sport of hockey in all its branches and affiliations.

"She is one game, believe me," said Mr. Furni. "You can't very well stick the end of a roller skate into the hard floor of a roller rink, as you can with the sharp end of an ice skate into the ice, and therefore these young men on the rollers occasionally find it very difficult to stop. Some of them slide for several sections of flooring before regaining an upright posture. The game is lively, don't worry about that, and is quite apt to make a big hit with the public."

Roller hockey is a game new to this part of the country and one that will be an experiment here. It has been played in Canada and there is a league down in the New England states. If the sport is as exciting as many of the reports lead one to believe, or proves to be as interesting as the game of winter hockey, it should be a success from the start and should become firmly installed as one of the regular games played in this part of the country.

FOR years and years followers of track athletics in this country have vainly wondered how Dan Kelly ever made, or was ever credited, with making 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds. If the story of the record now carried in the books duly sanctioned by the officials of the A. A. U. is true, the cat has leaped clear out of the imprisoning sack.

It is said that on the day Kelly ran the remarkable time, or was at least given credit for running the century in such wonderful time, the watches of all the timers were carefully made faster, more in the nature of a sweet and innocent little joke. These village cutups never dreamed for one idle moment that the record would be ever sent out through the country.

It was, and as the story in a Western exchange has it, the guys who did the tampering with the watches were too scared to come out and tell the truth. The record of Kelly has stood as official on the books of the A. A. U since that time, though some of the close followers of sport have vaguely and vainly wondered why it was that a sprinter credited with negotiating the century in 9 3-5 could not go out and only occasionally show a returning flash of his wonderful form by beating some plebian 10 second man.

Kelly never did make good after that record, and maybe it was that the story of how it was brought about is true. Arthur Duffy often ran the 100 yards under ten seconds, and yet for some complex and mysterious reason it has never been recognized as official. And yet any sporting writer worthy of the name will tell you that Duffy was one of the greatest sprinters this old country of ours ever produced, even though he did commit the unpardonable sin of turning professional.

* * *

FOR once since he started his career as manager of the famous Chicago Cubs, Frank Leroy Chance, the peerless leader, has apparently given up all hope of his team capturing the pennant. A Chicago story of yesterday told of the resourceful and shrewd Chance practically conceding the gonfalon to the rushing Giants.

One of the very bitterest things about the very sweetest of things, is that sometimes our highest elation is all smudged up with the mean old thought that some guy is going to yell "get the hook" at the first slip. After a man has lived on wine for a good part of his life, sparkling, rosy wine, it is sometimes said that it is very hard for him to get used to beer, to suit his needs to a restricted income. After winning four pennants, three of them in a row, one would think that it would be very hard for the Cubs to learn to sup the stale and frothy dregs of defeat.

About the only thing that has gone on forever, is the little brook, which Al Tennyson drafted into big league fame. The one horse chaise was beaten at the game, as was John L. Sullivan. Even Cy Young is showing signs of tire rust and need of a general rest. Of course you might point to Mr. Bryan's presidential aspirations, and his running, and time alone can answer. The Cubs have gone along fine, but dear old time has evidently erected a dam in their smooth running course.

But as has been said, it is doubtless hard to lose after the fat years of glorious success. If Mr. Chance feels half as badly as he looked when his club was losing to the St. Louis Cardinals, he feels just about as bad as a man who has failed to realize an ambition, can feel.

Chance made one of the mistakes, one of the few mistakes, of his managerial career when he allowed Luderus to get away from the Cubs. With the hitting of the Philly first baseman the Cubs might be in the lead today. Vic Saier hasn't evidently come up to expectations, and in the seasons to come Chicago may be confronted with the same weakness that has kept the Pirates from winning the flag several seasons, and that is the need of a fast and heady man at the first corner of the diamond.

* * *

WRESTLING in this city has for the past three seasons been conducted on a plane that has resulted in the past in putting the game into popular favor with the lovers of the sport of grappling. Gambling or betting of any kind has not been tolerated, and when you remove the temptation in many cases you have destroyed the sin. The matches have been conducted in an orderly and systematic manner, in many of the contests women making up a fair percentage of the audience.

In the past the only criticism was directed at the failure of Duluth to be represented by a wrestler who could meet the big stars of the game on an equal footing. Star wrestlers are hard to find, it might be added. Chris Person made his home here for one season and part of another. Then came Karl Lehto, despite his youth, for he is little more than a boy, one of the best wrestlers for his weight in the country. Neither of these men was as heavy as the American and European stars of the first order.

Fred Pilakoff, who intends making Duluth his home, overcomes one of the handicaps at the very start, for he is a finely modeled giant in stature. Standing over six feet in height, he is built from the ground up, presenting a fine specimen of athletic strength and symmetry. His first big match here, the one with Yankee Rogers, the champion of the six New England states, will answer the other question, fully and to the point, as to his wrestling ability.

The locals rallied in the ninth and scored a run and had a man on second when Mathewson relieved Wiltse and added another victory to the leaders' column. McGraw was confident that his lead was sufficient to win the pennant and sent in Maxwell, a Birmingham recruit, to pitch the second game, which the locals won after a hard fight, 8 to 7. ## McFARLAND TO MEET MATT WELLS

Stockyards Fighter and Englishman to Clash in Ten-Round Bout.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Billy Dixon, acting for Emil Thiery and Packy McFarland, last night signed articles with Matt Wells for a ten-round no-decision bout to take place in New York, Oct. 19.

The articles specify that the fighters shall weigh in at 125 pounds at 5 o'clock on the day of the fight, which will take place in Madison Square Garden under the management of Harry Pollock of New York.

McFarland arranged the details for this match with Wells over the long distance telephone. The articles were signed in New York.

CLARKE PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO PLAYERS

In a recent issue of the Baseball magazine, Fred Clarke, the famous leader of the Pittsburg Pirates, as well as one of the greatest fielders and hitters the game has produced, has the following to say of the great old game that he had done so much both to adorn and benefit by his splendid efforts:

"The longer I stay in baseball the prouder I am of my profession. There was a time not so many years since when a ball player was looked upon as an actor was looked upon two hundred years ago. A ball player in those days was supposed to be something of a rowdy in his life and conduct, and whether he was or not, people imagined he was.

"Now all this is changed. The national game has certainly had a wonderful growth in the past twenty years, and it has grown just as fast in moral tone. The days have long since gone by when anything which savors at all of dishonesty or disreputable conduct could justly be ascribed to baseball.

"The public have been mainly responsible for the high mental and moral plane of the men who make up the rank and file of baseball. It is now a profession, honorable in all its details, and a profession which is yearly attracting more and more men of the highest rank and skill. The number of really brainy players—men who could not only make a conspicuous success in baseball, but do perhaps equally as well in some other honorable profession, is growing rapidly."

RACE CARD IS MOVED AHEAD

Rain Causes Rearrangement of Program at Detroit Meeting.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.—Because of the postponement of yesterday's Grand Circuit races on account of rain, the program was set back one day and Thursday's entries, as previously announced, were substituted for Friday's original card.

The 2:09 trot with thirteen to start, the last event of the day, was looked upon as the classiest race of the year for horses that are eligible, while the free-for-all pace, with five fast ones entered, promised a splendid contest.

Other races to be decided were the unfinished 2:07 pace, the 2:13 pace and the 2:20 trot.

HENRY ORDEMANN CHALLENGES PILAKOFF.

George Barton, sporting editor of the Minneapolis Daily News, and the man who looks after the interests of big Henry Ordemann, one of the greatest of the American wrestlers, has issued a challenge to Pilakoff for a finish contest. Ordemann is a great favorite in this city, as he made his home here for part of a season, and as the gigantic Finn has expressed his willingness to meet all comers, the match may be made for a later date.

O'BRIEN BEING GROOMED FOR A. A. PRESIDENT

JOSEPH D. O'BRIEN,
Former Head of American Association, Who May Run Again.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 22.—Joe O'Brien, the former president of the American association, may again take the reins in 1912, according to information handed out from the inner circle. This means that T. M. Chivington, the present incumbent, will, in all probability, be deposed at the end of the present year, the same as Joe O'Brien was deposed in 1910 to make room for Chivington.

There has been an agitation against the rule of Chivington for the last three months, and it is understood that four of the clubs have already lined up against him and that they are certain the necessary fifth club will fall in line before the time for voting comes. The clubs now favoring O'Brien for the office are Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Paul and Milwaukee, and it will not be surprising to hear of the Toledo club following suit. This would leave Kansas City, Minneapolis and Louisville opposed to O'Brien, but only five votes would be necessary to elect him.

It is understood that Joe O'Brien will be a candidate for the presidency of the association, despite reports to the contrary.

CENTRAL AFTER SOME BIG GAMES

Officials Negotiating With Several Twin City Football Teams.

At the present time the high school officials are negotiating with some of the Twin City high schools with the idea of getting one big game for Duluth this season, in addition to the annual contest with Blaine, which has for several seasons been considered the big game of Central's schedule.

It may be that the strong West high school team will be brought here for a game, as this team seems likely to be the strongest of the Minneapolis high school elevens. There is also some talk of having Minneapolis Central team here.

The position of Duluth, geographically speaking, makes it more difficult to secure good games than is the case with the high schools of the Twin Cities. In the past Duluth has found that while most of the schools down there are perfectly willing to come up here for a game when guaranteed their expenses, they show some hesitation in returning the favor by bringing the Duluth team back for a game the following season.

The members of the faculty committee are most anxious to make up a good schedule this season. With that idea in view negotiations are being carried on at the present time with a number of different schools. Interest in football is very promising the present season, and with an unusually heavy expense attached to supporting the team, it is doubly desirable that some attractive games be scheduled from Duluth.

It is very probable that the high school boys will make at least one trip the present season, though that has not been decided upon as yet.

WRESTLERS ARE READY FOR BUSY MAT SEASON.

Wrestlers at the Head of the Lakes are beginning to sit up and take notice. Challenges are beginning to fly back and forth among the grapplers with a frequency that indicates a very busy season on the mat. As the wrestlers here and across the bay are growing in number each season and are also improving in science, some fast and interesting matches may be expected.

Martin Johnson, the fireman wrestler, and William Ninich, the Servian, are booked to hook up at Virginia in what should prove to be a very good match. Johnson has been working out all summer, and in addition to that always keeps in the very best of condition. Ninich is one of the best middleweight wrestlers in the country and should give his heavier opponent a great match.

Ed Alho of Cloquet, who only recently had all the better of George Whipps of Minneapolis, considered one of the very best middleweight wrestlers in the Twin Cities, may hook up with Gunnar Gronlund some time in the near future.

These two boys are among the very best wrestlers in the Northwest and both have shown wonderful improvement in the past year. The fans of Cloquet believe that there is no man of Alho's weight in this part of the country who can defeat him, while in the Copper country the lovers of wrestling say that Gunnar Gronlund can take the measure of either Sailor Jack or Young Miller.

Ole Johnson, the big Superior wrestler, who in the past showed amazing strength but little science, has been down on the farm at Marshfield, Wis. with Fred Beell, and when he returns to the Head of the Lakes will probably be very anxious to met some of the good men in these parts.

An awakened interest in wrestling here for the past three years has resulted in developing some very good men. Joe Fisher of Superior; Mauritz Harris and Fred Bahs, will probably be in the game, as well as a number of youngsters who have been working out here.

There will be several wrestling classes at the Y. M. C. A. this season and plans are being made for the holding of a big amateur wrestling tournament some time the present winter. Medals and prizes are to be given for the various classes, the tournament open only to simon pure amateurs.

SULLIVAN MAKES A GREAT RECORD

Washington, Sept. 22--William J. Sullivan of the White Sox, not John G. Kling, the former Cub, nor Red Dooin of the Phillies, is the first catcher to wear a mask and pad in 1,000 major league games.

The recent controvery over the records of Kling and Dooin and the announcement that Kling probably would be able to reach the 1,000 mark before the end of the season met Sullivan's eye the other day, and he immediately made the remark that he believed he had caught over 1,000 major league games before the end of 1910, in spite of the accident which kept him out of the game practically all last season.

Today Sullivan and some of his friends consulted the archives of a local office and from the official guides of the last thirteen years it was ascertained that the Sox catcher was correct. He had caught 1,017 games at the end of 1910, and has caught eighty-two games this year, including yesterday's. That gives him a total of 1,099.

HARRIS WILL COACH.

Former Yale Center Will Instruct Old Eli Linemen.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 22.—Buck Harris, center on the Yale football team last year, arrived yesterday from England and will spend the remainder of the season with the squad of blues as center rush coach.

With Brides he will have charge of the developing of the line, with the exception of the ends, who will be under the supervision of Brooks. Foster Sanford came up from New York to talk to the men today, but he did little active coaching.

PAPKE HEARD FROM.

Alleged Middleweight Champ Issues Sweeping Challenge to All Comers.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 22. — Billy Papke, the Illinois middleweight, writes that he will be ready in October to take on any man of his weight in the country, Johnny Thompson preferred. Billy has been resting at his home in Kewanee, Ill., but will be ready during the latter part of October to tackle any of them. He has started training and intends to be in shape when he again takes to the roped arena. A twenty-round battle between Johnny Thompson and Papke at New Orleans would be very interesting indeed and it would afford an excellent chance for the fans to judge for themselves as to who entitled to the championship in that class.

Jeffersons Working Hard.

The Jeffersons are practicing hard each evening at their grounds in the East end and promise to be in very good shape for the first game of the season, which comes next Sunday. The first football team that has represented the East end in the larger games of the city league, the Jeffersons, are out to make a great record the present season. If hard work and practice will accomplish this, the indications are very bright for the realization of this ambiton.

WILLIAMS OPTIMISTIC

Football Outlook at University of Minnesota Is Gratifying.

Powers Back in the Game—Other Candidates Are Promising.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Forty eligibles reported for the first football practice Wednesday afternoon and, under the directions of Coach Williams and Assistant Coaches "Sig" Harris and Lisle Johnson, the usual preliminary work was indulged in. Thursday light signal practice and tackling the dummy was the afternoon's program and Dr. Williams is getting a line on the men who will probably be seen in the Lawernce game Sept. 30.

Powers, who was an all-Western man in 1909, but who was ineligible last year, has been out and is in good condition. Jim Walker, the all-American tackle, is eligible but has been unable to attend the opening practices on account of afternoon classes. This difficulty is expected to be fixed however by the first of next week. Capron is still having his trouble with the eligibility committee, but before the opening game his conditions are expected to be removed. Other old men who are back and showing up strongly are Vanstrom, Randall, Johnson and McEwen. Morrell, the big 1911 center, will be out of the game this year on account of his school work.

The freshman material which appeared this year is surprising to every one. Higbee, the star fullback of St. Thomas, Stevenson of Carleton, the best of the secondary college quarters in the state, and Harrison Root, all star high school quarter last year, are three men whom the coaches are already watching and who are showing ability and experience in the game. Archie Glass of Duluth, is again playing with the scrubs and with another year's experience he will make a strong bid for a varsity position.

The Minnesota students expects a team this year which will be better than any team ever representing Minnesota. An unusual amount of good material is out including the "M" men and if this year's team is a failure there is something wrong. Dr. Williams is very optimistic, although he will say little at this stage of the game.

PRACTICE OPENS FOR CORNHUSKERS

Lincoln, Neb. Sept. 22.—The gridiron lid is off at Nebraska university. Thirty-five cornhusker candidates, with the new coach, Ewald O. Stiehm, in charge, responded to the first call for practice yesterday on Nebraska field.

Answering the initial summons were the following members of last year's varsity squad; Capt. Shonka, Owen and Ernest Frank, Hornberger, Harmon, Elliott, Anderson, Russell, Lofgren, Gibson and Freitag. Two high-class freshmen performers of a year ago, Potter and Purdy, also reported for the first workout and are reasonably certain of winning their spurs on the varsity aggregation of 1911.

Quarterback Jerry Warner, whose selection as all-Missouri valley quarter was virtually unanimous last fall, is giving the most worry. The latest information from Warner states that he has decided to stick to the fireside and the farm in Furnas county. With Warner absent, Stiehm might find the quarterback gap hard to fill. Potter is to bid for the position, but Warner's experience, field generalship and defensive playing are considered almost necessary to a successful football year.

Coach Stiehm has announced that the candidates will be permitted to engage in nothing more strenuous than preliminary workouts during the first practice week. Scrimmage sessions are to be installed early next week in order that the Cornhuskers may be in trim for their opening game against the Kearney normals on Saturday, Oct. 7.

The selection of an assistant coach to Stiehm resulted in the choice of Harvey Rathbone, a Cornhusker veteran and fullback on last year's eleven. Rathbone is to take charge of the freshmen. Several other candidates were considered, but the football committee finally decided to select a Nebraska veteran.

WILL PLAY FOOTBALL.

Grand Forks High Begins Season Play on Saturday.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Football will hold the boards in Grand Forks tomorrow when the Grand Forks high school team will play its first game with the school alumni. The schedule provides for a game with the state university Sept. 30; with Crookston at Crookston Oct. 7; Minot in Grand Forks Oct. 14; Devils Lake at Devils Lake Oct. 21; Grafton at Grafton Oct. 28, and Fargo in Grand Forks Nov. 11.

With uncertainty prevalent in the Flickertail camp, practice work for the football squad of the university of North Dakota commenced this week. The fact that only three men of last year's team are to be on the field this year makes the situation one that is far from optimistic.

There is a possibility that Gullickson will be in the game this year. He played at quarter last year but has given it out that he does not intend to play this season, although Coach Dunlap has hopes of getting him out very soon.

FINAL RACE TAKEN BY ROY KENT'S CREW.

Roy Kent's lapstreak crew won the final and deciding heat of the weekly races last evening, taking the race in easy fashion from the L'Estrange-Lathrop combination. Kent's men took the lead at the start and were never headed. Tomorrow two picked eights will hold a race and next week there will be a contest between the doubles, followed by some races among the singles.

Following is the line-up of the two crews that raced last evening:

MORRISON COUNTY FAIR AT MOTLEY WAS SUCCESS.

Staples, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Morrison county fair held the first time this year at Motley, Sept. 14, 15 and 16, was a great success in every way. The exhibits were representative in every way.

Congressman Lindbergh opened the fair with an address on conservation of farm and natural resources He also touched on the question of waste and its remedy, recommending that each person set aside a stated period in which to investigate and read concerning the matter and also concerning the issues of the day, stating that this was the duty of each American citizen.

The Morrison County Agricultural association has purchased grounds at Motley and intend to make that village the permanent place of all future fairs for the county.

QUITS BIG CHURCH FOR MISSION FIELD

Rev. A. C. Stevens of St. Paul Will Work Among Indians.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—To carry the gospel to the Indians in South Dakota, Rev. Alexander C. Stevens, for six years pastor of the First Methodist church in St. Paul, has resigned his position. Bishop Robert McIntyre has appointed Mr. Stevens general superintendent of missions in the Black Hills conference, where he will have charge of thirty-two missions.

The First Methodist is one of St. Paul's wealthiest and most fashionable churches. Rev. Mr. Stevens built it up from a small beginning to a point where the church property alone is worth nearly $100,000 and the membership numbers about 500. His salary in the new field will be just half of the $3,600 he now receives.

"I feel that I am needed elsewhere more than in St. Paul," he says by way of explanation, "and I can only follow the dictates of my conscience and my own ideas of what my duty is."

JUVENILE COURTS IN ALL COUNTIES

Are Favored By Speaker at North Dakota Baptists' Meet.

Grafton, N. D., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tonight will see the close of the annual Baptist conferences in this city.

Miss Lillian Topping of Fargo, head of the Florence Crittenton home in that city, made an address before the general conference in which she strongly urged the advisability of establishing the juvenile court in every county in the state. ## W. C. T. U. FLOURISHES IN NORTH DAKOTA

Twenty-Second Annual Convention at Jamestown Hearing of Year's Work.

Jamestown, N. D., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The progress of the Women's Christian Temperance union in North Dakota, as shown by reports of various officers submitted at the twenty-second annual convention which opened here this morning, has been very satisfactory.

The report of Mrs. B. H. Wylie, corresponding secretary dealing with the Young Peoples' branch, was particularly interesting. She declared that in that field there was great room for work. Miss Mosher, national secretary of that department, will be in the state next month for the purpose of conducting a more vigorous campaign than has been waged in the past.

During the past year there have been twenty-two new local unions organized, thirteen Young People's branches have been launched, and eleven Loyal Temperance Legions have been started.

Work of Organizers.

Discussing work of the various organizers and lecturers Mrs. Wylie pointed out that Mrs. Harriet D. Hall of Illinois had attended sixty-three meetings in the state and had organized seven local unions and two district unions. Mrs. Seth Hartzell of Kansas also did some good work during her stay of six weeks in the state, while Mrs. Almena Parker McDonald, also of Illinois, organized unions at Marmarth, Rhame, Gascoyne, Bucyrus and Shiels, the latter union being the only one formed in the Eighth judicial district. Another interesting feature was the showing made with reference to the activity of Mrs. Grace H. Dryden, a farmer woman, who organized a union at Stuart, thirty miles from a railroad in Billings county. Barton, Fingal, Sheyenne and Dunbar, are among the other points where new unions were established.

Out of eighteen districts there were ten district conventions this year, four being newly organized.

Each year the products of his farm will be exhibited at the state fair and Crow Wing county can be assured of an exhibit.

TELEPHONE BIG HELP

In Causing Less Destruction of Property By Fire.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—The telephone is one of the world's greatest agents for fire prevention, according to J. G. Peters of Washington, D. C., chief of the state co-operation department. It has done more to lessen destruction by fire than any one agent, he says.

Mr. Peters arrived in St. Paul yesterday after a trip through the timbered district of Wisconsin and called at the office of W. T. Cox, state forester in the capitol. He left last evening for Warroad, where he and Mr. Cox will meet.

"Minnesota gets $10,000 through the Weeks bill, which appropriated $200,000 from the national treasury to be spent in co-operating with states which spend money for fire protection," Mr. Peters said. "This money is to be spent in districts all the way from Maine to Oregon, and I am enthusiastic over what has been accomplished.

"I found that Wisconsin has been fortunate this summer in having but few fires, and I believe the same general conditions prevail in Minnesota."

Mr. Peters will spend a week or ten days in the north woods with Mr. Cox.

MINNESOTA INSTITUTIONS OWN SOME FINE STOCK.

"Some of our stock is registered now and some is not," Mr. Cutter said. "We have some of the best in the state, too. One cow at St. Cloud cost us $150 and we have a standing offer of $500 for her. It is the intention to eventually weed out all our unregistered stock and keep only the pure bloods."

Chops Off Sister's Finger.

Shouldn't You Know What Furs Are?

There has been so much deception in the misnaming of furs that women cannot be sure of what they are wearing unless they insist on

"GORDON FURS"

YOU wouldn't thank the merchant who sold you "rhinestones" for diamonds. Yet, it has been a time-honored trade custom to sell furs under misleading names. So clever is this deception that the most reputable merchants may be misled as to the real characters of their furs.

TOO OFTEN rabbit is dressed up and sold as "Seal;" mink is marked "Sable;" and white rabbit masquerades as "Ermine." Such are but a few instances.

"GORDON FURS" are real furs—sold under the common, familiar names of the skins. Buy Gordon Furs and you know what you get—Bear is Bear and Goat is Goat under "The Gordon Pure Fur Law."

¶ To learn the truth about furs go to the stores which sell "Gordon Furs." You may be pretty sure such stores are trying to be truthful about other goods, too.

SOCIETY APPROVES COMPLEXION BEAUTIFIER

"In seeking a dependable complexion beautifier," says Mae Martyn in the Philadelphia Record, "no preparation for whitening, beautifying and toning the complexion equals a simple, inexpensive lotion, made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½-pint of either witch hazel or hot water, then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Where witch hazel is used, the lotion dries more readily on the skin.

"This splendid lotion does not rub off or show like powder, and is very fine for removing that shiny, sallow look from the skin. It makes the skin very clear, satiny and beautiful, and is so good that a bottle of it is sure to be found on the dressing table of most society women.

"I find it splendid for the skin, as it is very beneficial, while powder clogs the pores, enlarging them, causing blackheads and rough, wrinkly complexions."

Any Woman Can Now Be Beautiful

(From New York Fashion News)

"It seems the new woman has declared her independence of rouge, powders, enamels and cosmetics alleged to overcome Father Time, and returned to simple lotions aimed to assist rather than resist Nature—and she is becoming more beautiful every day.

"The most effective aid to the complexion is easily prepared at home. Just dissolve two ounces of thelrose—the rose of youth—in one pint of warm water.

"You need not be at all afraid of this simple preparation. Apply it night and morning to the face, neck and hands. Plain complexions instantly show a change for the better. It corrects coarse and sallow skin; makes the complexion soft, fair and lovely—and thelrose goes a long way toward preventing the 'fuzziness' on the face that so annoys and embarrasses."

THE EVENING STORY

OUTWITTED

By Jane Harris.

Steaming too close to one of the numerous islands in the Malay Archipelego, the Sally's screw had come to grief on an outlying choral reef. The examination made showed that it would take a good many hours to repair the damage. Meanwhile, the only thing to be done was to lay to.

It was not the accident itself that troubled the first mate. Experience had taught him that among these islands a crippled vessel, unless heavily armed, was like a sheep amid a pack of wolves. More than one ugly story was current of the fate which had befallen trading ships so placed at the mercy of the islanders. Nor was the captain unaware of the danger.

The work of repairing the broken shaft went ahead steadily, but slowly. On deck a double watch was stationed; arms even were laid in readiness in the shelter of the bulwarks. The officers, in turn, walked the bridge at night. But it was as clear as a bell overhead, and absolute quiet prevailed until dawn.

Then the first mate, who was leaning with his arms bent on the rail of the bridge, suddenly heard a whisper just below him. It was the boatswain's mate. "The lookout says he thinks he sees something out of the shadow of the island off the starboard quarter," he said, in low tones.

The first mate turned in the direction indicated. Presently he detected two, three, and finally four spots of darker color. What they were his experience instantly told him, although his eye did not.

"Call the men up, Scott," he ordered, "and send a message to the captain. Divide along both sides of the ship. Send the engineer and his men aft. See that the men are all ready. They will close in on us on the chains on each bow. But don't fire a shot till you hear the word from the bridge. Remember its their lives against ours. If we can drive them off this time, we may be able to get togther enough to make another attack. Be lively now."

Ten minutes went by. The men forward crouched along the bulwarks, the engineers and firemen aft, every man grasping his rifle, musket, pistol, or knife, and watching with all his senses strained. But the ten minutes before the faint dip of the paddles, so soft as scarcely to be perceptable, gave evidence that the Malay islanders were at hand. Each man gripped his weapon more tightly. Then on each side of the vessel grated the bow of a canoe. From the bridge at the same instant came the command: "Fire!"

The shrieks of the savages and the splashing in the water told how effective had been the fire. A furious rain of blows from musket butts and clubbed rifles and belaying pins beat off the few who had secured a hold on the steamer's rail and were attempting to reach the deck. When the captain learned that not a man on board had got so much as a scratch, he fairly shouted for joy.

A grim smile flitted over the mate's face; but he went about his duties without a word on the subject till noon. Then he found a seat beside the captain, who presently remarked: "The engineer says he can't finish work on the shaft until tomorrow morning."

"Yes, sir."

"You really don't think there's any danger from those yellow cut-throats, do you?"

"I don't think there is," returned the mate; "I know there is."

Then his face knotted in a hard frown for a moment, but cleared as quickly; the next moment he sprang to his feet. "It might be done—it might be done," he exclaimed. He leaned toward the captain and explained the plan which had just come to him.

For two hours before sundown all the deckhands were engaged in an occupation strange on a vessel which was hundreds of miles from port. They were partly unloading the ship.

As soon as night had blotted the islands from sight the first mate went forward. Ranged along the deck were several dozen barrels of oil. A few blows from a mallet drove in the bungs. So fixed that their bung holes were hung over the sea outside the ship's rail, each barrel immediately began to discharge a good sized stream of oil into the water. As fast as a barrel was emptied a full one was put in its place.

Within an hour and forty minutes forty barrels of oil had flowed into the sea. Then the Sally steamed twenty fathoms ahead of her former position. The mate saw a fresh supply of full barrels put in position ready to be used as the first had been. Then the watch was set and all lights which would show were put out. The captain and mate took their places on deck. The men had been instructed what to do when the time came.

The stars gave just enough light to show the sea. From the bridge, the captain and his senior officer closely scanned the sea in the direction of the islands. Stealing into sight, although as yet very indistinct, both men could see half a dozen specks which as they looked grew larger. They were almost abreast of one another, seemingly, and were advancing fast. The captain had scarcely noticed the absence of the mate, who slipped from his side, which behind the first group of canoes he made out a second. Although the nearest were too far off as yet to be seen clearly, he knew that they were crammed with the murderous, yellow-skinned savages.

When they reached the edge of the expanse of olly water, the captain could see they stopped. He could not distinguish the men in the canoes, but he was sure that they had remarked about the curious condition of the sea's surface, and were examining it; but plainly they were satisfied with their inspection, for almost at once they came on again.

Presently they were within a hundred yards of the ship. There the first group waited. When the second line had come up with them the captain counted fourteen long canoes in all. They were made of large, hollowed logs and held a dozen men each. The fleet separated and swung out into wings, one making for the bow of the Sally and the other sweeping to the stern. Evidently they intended to repeat the tactics of the preceding night. Nothing happened until two of the canoes were within fifty feet of the vessel.

Then a spark appeared close to the bulwarks; another glowed from farther aft. A moment later two buckets of cotton waste saturated with oil and blazing furiously were pitched overboard. As they touched the sea, twenty feet or more from the side of the ship, a flame shot up from the water, not high, but of prodigious fierceness. Swiftly it spread over the sea in every direction but one, a low wall of fire sweeping onward from the ship. In a few seconds it had enveloped the fleet of canoes.

Then a yell of terror burst forth from the Malays. In the weird light of the burning oil their dark forms could be seen paddling frantically back toward the shore. It did not take long for the flame to exhaust the fuel for the layer of oil was very thin; but the canoes had caught fire at once, and some of them continued to burn after the water had once more become dark. Undoubtedly many of the attacking party lost their lives. One thing is certain—those who escaped were too badly frightened to attempt another attack that night. By morning ...e repairs on the screw had been completed, the anchors were weighed, and the ship proceeded on her journey.

The Kitchen

Beef Tea.

Take one pound of lean beef, one pint of cold water, one pinch of salt. All fat and skin must be removed and the meat scraped very fine. Put it in a jar with the cold water and salt and leave it for an hour or so, stirring occasionally. Then put the cover on the jar and tie down with paper, stand it in a saucepan of cold water and let it come slowly to a boil and then boil for three hours. Strain off the meat and leave the tea till cold, when the fat must be removed. Before serving, just pass a piece of kitchen paper over the beef tea in the cup in case a suspicion of fat remains.

* * *

Fish Omelet.

This is a good way of using up cold white fish of any sort. Skin and bone it, break it into small pieces and stir in enough hot melted butter to moisten it thoroughly, and season to taste. Stand the basin containing this mixture in a saucepan of boiling water. Dissolve a good-sized piece of butter in a frying pan, pour in three well-whisked eggs and place over a good heat. When set, place the pan beneath the toaster until lightly browned, pour the fish on half the surface, fold the other half over, slide the omelet on to a very hot dish and serve at once.

Sleeve Bouquets

By POLLY PADGETT.

A recent and dainty custom, introduced by the young women of the states, is the sleeve bouquet. One young lady, wearing a dainty white frock with a small cluster of violets, tied with a soft, narrow ribbon of the same shade, fastened on her sleeve, when questioned, made reply: "We must continually be having something new, and these bunches of flowers were always lying on the shoulder, for the scarves invariably slip round; so now that these fluffy feather stoles have come in, the sleeve bouquets seem to be in the right place; and, besides, it serves a double purpose, for with this long pin, expressly designed for the use, one can keep both flowers and stole in place."

The idea of sleeve decoration seems to have taken strong hold of the leaders of fashion, and engaged young ladies no longer wear large lockets containing miniatures of their fiances, but instead have the initials of the fortunate men embroidered on their sleeve.

The Household

Piccadilli.

Finely chop one-half bushel green tomatoes, two medium sized cabbages, and three quarts of onions. Remove seeds from three quarts of peppers and finely chop green portion Select a jar of sufficient size to hold all of the vegetables, cover bottom of jar with a thick layer of tomatoes; cover tomatoes with a thin layer of cabbage; cover cabbage with a sprinkling of onions and peppers. Next add a thick layer of salt. Repeat, following the same order until all is used. In the morning strain off all of the brine. To vegetables add two pounds white mustard seed, three small bags mixed spices, and brown sugar to suit the individual taste. Put in kettles on back of range, add enough cider vinegar to keep mixture from burning and cook nearly all day.

Tomato Catsup.

Wash one peck ripe tomatoes and cut in quarters. Cook in a porcelain-lined preserving kettle four hours; then rub through a sieve. Add to pulp one quart cider vinegar, three cups sugar, one-fourth cup salt, one tablespoon black pepper, one teaspoon, each, ground ginger and cloves, and one-eighth teaspoon cayenne. Return to kettle and cook until thick enough to bottle. It may take three or four hours. Watch carefully and stir occasionally to prevent burning.

Spiced Tomato Sauce.

Peel twelve medium-sized ripe tomatoes and cut in slices. Put in a preserving kettle with one green pepper, finely chopped, one onion finely chopped, two cups vinegar, three tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon salt, two teaspoons clove, two teaspoons cinnamon, two teaspoons allspice and two teaspoons grated nutmeg. Heat gradually to the boiling point and let simmer two and one-half hours.

Gherkins.

Wipe four quarts small unripe cucumbers. Put in a jar and add one cup salt, dissolved in two quarts boiling water and let stand three days. Drain cucumbers from brine, bring brine to the boiling point, pour over cucumbers, cover and again let stand three days; repeat. Drain, wipe cucumbers, and pour over one gallon boiling water in which one tablespoon alum has been dissolved. Let stand six hours, then drain from alum water. Cook cucumbers, ten minutes, a few at a time. In one-fourth the following mixture. Strain the remaining three-fourths over the cucumbers, which have been put in a stone jar. For the mixture: mix one gallon vinegar, four red peppers, two sticks cinnamon, two tablespoons allspice berries and two tablespoons cloves, bring to the boiling point and let simmer ten minutes.

Walnut Catsup.

One hundred walnuts (green) picked when about the size of an olive, pound them and press out the liquor, boil it with an ounce of cloves, one ounce of black pepper and one of allspice, half an ounce nutmeg and half an ounce of mace until it becomes a fine claret color; add a gallon of vinegar, two dozen shallots and one tablespoonful of salt; strain through a course cloth, bottle and seal.

Training a Husband

By FRANCES WILEY.

Don't loosen any of the chains by which he has been bound to you in the time of courtship. Add to them others. Nothing trains a husband so much—or puts him so readily in the way to be amenable to training—as a continuing interest in him.

To train a man in economy, for instance, you must impress upon him that you regard him as a man who would not be so foolish as to be otherwise than economical. I have known wives to break their husbands of the most extravagant habits by tactfully impressing on them that they felt certain they would not indulge in them.

The woman who tries to train a husband to too much giving will find that she does not get the best of the bargain. The woman who trains him to expect her to make all the sacrifices will do the same. One of the best trainings that a husband can get is a training to the recognition that marriage is a competition between him and his wife to see which can do the most for the other.

WOMEN WHO HATE MARRIAGE

By FRANCES WILEY.

Matrimony is discredited not only among many men, but it is becoming discredited, impossible as this may seem, among many women. The cold and obstinate celibates, whom nothing could drag before the white frontal of the altar, have now a pendant in a class of rough and stubborn single women who detest men and hate marriage.

And not all of these are ugly, not all of them are unfortunate, not all of them are poor, as men maliciously would have us believe. So ahead of the resigned army of old maids who have not willingly enlisted in this corps, but have entered it automatically, goes the light brigade of those of their own free will, with ardor and dash, have made the great renunciation and are repeating it every day.

What shall we say of this most singular and exceptional phenomenon; we whose hearts are full of tender compassion for the old maid whom love deserted? What shall we say in the face of the old maid who of her own volition has deserted love and matrimony?

The Doctor

Croup.

The attacks to which some children are very subject, known by the name of croup, are nearly always what a medical man calls "false croup." This is not precisely a dangerous illness, although the suddeness of the attack is very alarming, the more so as it frequently comes on at night.

Sometimes it is preceded by a cold or a cough. The attack begins by the child awaking suddenly with a fit of loud coughing and breathing will be loud and labored, and the little patient flushed and anxious looking. Between the attacks the chilo may sleep quietly, and the next morning will seem quite well, except for an occasional cough.

A similar seizure, however, will occur at night, and this may continue for several days, leaving a loose cough which may last for weeks. The treatment is simple, and consists in giving the child warm milk and water, barley water, etc., and putting a hot poultice around the throat, or sponge wrung out of hot water and held in place with a folded flannel will do very well.

If the cough be very troublesome a dose of ipecacuanha or antimonia wine may be given every fifteen minutes until vomiting is produced, but as this is very weakening, it should not be resorted to unless necessary. The bowels should be emptied as soon as possible by a dose of castor oil or anenema, as constipation appears to be one of the predisposing causes of this disease.

The child should be kept warmly in bed in a moist atmosphere until the croup symptoms have disappeared. If a bronchitis kettle is not procurable with which to moisten the air, a good substitute may be arranged by ringing clean clothes out of clean water, and hanging them to dry near the fire. Some children are very subject to this ailment, having many attacks in the course of the year.

Sense of Humor

By VIRGINIA HARLAN.

The mystery of having a sense of humor has attracted the attention of a medical paper, with very solemn results. Thus: "Humor, save for a few, has not yet purged itself of a sense of joy in our neighbors' ills. If this be so, the possession of a sense of humor of the popular kind appears to be rather a questionable virtue after all, and while it may be true that women as a sex are lacking in humor, the fact that they are temperamentally and conjeously converse from cruelty may quite well account for this." You foresee, trembling, a discussion of the old, old theme that women have no sense of humor.

Do not be alarmed. Not to such melancholy uses is this column consecrated. Women at least have enough sense of humor to be impatient of any more chatter as to whether they have it or not. But we may pause to note this ingenious turn to the old discussion. "Women have no sense of humor," says the new revelation. "Very likely. They are too good for it, sweet creatures." But there is a note of condescension in this which seems to suggest that its author is not richly endowed with humor himself.

We know, of course, that the correct definition of a sense of humor is the desire to laugh at your jokes. A person who can see no fun in them is plainly humorless. And almost worse is she who laughs at what you mean in mighty earnest. For she has no real sense of humor, but a base perversion. Therefore, let us turn aside from these individual considerations.

Los Angeles Times: Mrs. S. T. Rorer, a well-known cooking expert, compared French and American cooking in a lecture to the girl graduates of Chicago.

"American cooking, with its simple dishes and its free use of the grill," she said, "is healthful; but the rich sauces of French cooking and the liberal use of the frying pan make the French flabby and dyspeptic.

"I once entertained at a Paris restaurant famous for its chef. We had such dishes as salmi of becasse, etuve of beef and aubergine au gratin—and then my host, leaning back with a satisfied smile, handed me the menu and said:

"'And what'll we have next, Mrs. Rorer?'

"'Well, said I, 'I think we'll have indigestion next.'"

"THE BEST JOKE EVER"

New Pamphlet Contains Speeches of Proctor Knott and Foster.

"The Best Joke Ever," is the title of a new book issued by the publicity department of the Duluth Commercial club.

It is an edition of Proctor Knott's speech with the comparisons brought up to date, and it points out the manner in which the joke sprung by the Kentucky statesman in congress forty years ago was turned on him by the fulfillment of prophecies made in jest and considered in those days the height of extravagance.

One of the features of the new book is a reproduction of the speech delivered by Dr. Thomas Foster, July 4, 1868, at a gathering on Park Point. The speech is reprinted from the files of the Duluth Weekly Minnesotian, which was published by Dr. Foster and was the first newspaper established in Duluth. Since it was printed in the Minnesotian, the speech had not been reproduced until the Commercial club sought out the files and obtained a copy of the speech.

Dr. Foster's address is of value for the prophecies he made. He predicted in all earnestness a great future for Duluth and his prophecies, made seriously, measure up to those made in satire by Proctor Knott. The speech by Dr. Foster reveals his coinage of the phrase, "The Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas," which was first used by him, but which is generally attributed to Proctor Knott. The Kentucky congressman did not use the expression in his speech in congress.

DULUTH IS HOST TO BIG PARTY OF RAILROAD MEN

General Passenger and Ticket Agents Come on Special Train.

Entertained With Boat Ride in Harbor and Auto Trip.

It was a jolly party that arrived in the city this morning over the Northern Pacific railroad, on a special train from St. Paul, to spend the day in Duluth. It was composed of about 125 members of the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents, many of them with their wives and families, who are here to see the wonders of the Zenith City.

The majority of the visitors had never been in Duluth before, while many of them are making their first visit to the North or West for the first time. While here they were the guests of the Duluth Commercial club, while a large committee from the many railroad offices of this city was in charge of the entertaining.

For the past three days the members have been in attendance to the annual convention of the association at St. Paul, and last evening as soon as the closing session was over, they boarded the special train furnished by the Northern Pacific railroad and came to Duluth, arriving here shortly after 9 o'clock this morning.

In the party are many of the most prominent railroad men in the country, representing every line of importance in the United States. Not only are roads of this country represented, but railroads of other nations also have delegates.

Trip in the Harbor.

The party was met this morning by representatives of the Duluth Commercial club and the committees of railroad men, and after breakfast a trip was made around the horn, through the harbor, and up the river. The big ore, coal and mercantile docks were visited and the elevators were viewed from the boat. The aerial bridge and other scenes of interest were pointed out to the visitors.

The trip up the river was made to Spirit Lake branch of the boat club, where luncheon was served on board the boat. From here an excellent view of the $25,000,000 steel plant which the United States Steel corporation is erecting at that point, was obtained.

Upon arriving at the Fifth avenue dock on the return trip the party was taken for a drive on London road and through some of the residence portions of the city and finally over the famous boulevard.

At 5 o'clock the party leaves for Chicago on the special train furnished by the Northwestern line. Some of the party, however, will remain over, and will visit the iron range, of which they have heard so much.

Every effort was made by the representatives of the Duluth Commercial club and the railroad committee to make the visit of the railroad men an enjoyable one. The day was a most beautiful one, which added much to the pleasure of the trip on the water and about the city.

Northern Pacific Exhibit.

Much credit is due the Northern Pacific road for the manner in which they handled the party. The train was an excellent one, composed of a dynamo-baggage car, two diners and seven Pullmans.

In the observation car the company had on display one of the neatest and cleverest pieces of handiwork ever turned out, and which formed an excellent attraction for the travelers. It was a perfect reproduction, in sugar, of the North Coast Limited, of the Northern Pacific railroad, which runs between St. Paul and the Pacific coast. It shows the train with its seven coaches just emerging from the great tunnel through the Cascade mountains. The mountains, along which the track runs, are shown projecting high above the train, and are covered with snow. On the other side of the train runs a little river, frozen over. The road is double tracked, and is well equipped with all the latest improved signals. The train and signals are wired and an electric current can be turned on, which illuminates the train and engines, and even displays the burning coal in the fire box.

The reproduction is the work of Fred Kaul, chief pastry cook for the Northern Pacific, who is in charge of the two bakeries which the company conducts, one in St. Paul and the other on the Coast. To make this display required his constant work for three months. It is to be taken to Chicago and New York, at both of which places it will be put on exhibition. The car will be open from 5 to 6 o'clock this evening for the inspection of the public.

H. J. Titus, superintendent of the dining and parlor cars, and F. J. Renning, traveling chef and instructor in the dining department of the company, are with Mr. Kaul on this trip, and besides looking out for the comfort of the passenger agents, are taking care of the exhibit.

Cairns Takes Charge.

C. A. Cairns, general passenger agent of the Northwestern line, who was elected president of the association for the coming year took charge of the party before leaving this city, thus relieving A. M. Cleland, general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific, who took care of the trip to Duluth on his road. Mr. Cairns was well pleased with the trip, and speaks highly of Duluth. He has been here on several occasions, and took pride in showing some of the "new ones" some of the sights.

Frank Roberts of Havana, Cuba, general passenger agent for the United Railways of Havana, is in the Northwest for the first time. He is well pleased with the Zenith City, and said that "sometimes we have weather just like this in Cuba."

"This is the first time I have been in the North, and I like it very much. In Cuba there has been much development in recent years, and today business is prospering. Thousands of American tourists come to Cuba every year, and they are treated well by the natives, who have long since gotten over their prejudice against the American people."

T. Kately of New York, general agent for the Great Western Railways of England, is one of the many who are surprised at the wonderful development of the West, and who marvels at the remarkable natural advantages of Duluth. Mr. Kately has been in New York for many years as the representative of the English road, and speaks with enthusiasm of the railroad work in the British Isles.

"The Great Western Railway is the longest in the British Isles," said Mr. Kately. "It has 3,000 miles of tracks in operation, which is 1,000 miles in excess of any other road there. It is the royal mail route from Plymouth and Fishguard to London. Plymouth is the port of arrival for the following great oceanic lines: The North German Lloyd, the White Star, the Hamburg-American, the Holland-American, and the American. Passengers who debark here are conveyed by a special train to London, a distance of 240 miles, the journey being made without a stop in four hours. This is the longest unstopped run in the world. At Fishguard the Cunard liners call, and the passengers are taken on a special train to London, a distance of 262 miles, with but one stop. The Great Western route from Liverpool to London is called the "scenic run," for along this line are such famous places as Chester, Warrock, Livingstone, Stratford-on-Avon, and others."

Will Visit Mines.

W. S. St. George of St. Louis, of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, has heard so much of the iron ore mines of Northern Minnesota, that he has decided to remain over for a few days to visit them. "There is much talk of this part of the country in the South, and I have heard so much I will have to stay over. In the South there has been so much heat this summer that the corn crops and some other grains have suffered, but there has been an increase of 20 per cent in the production of cotton. On the whole the farmers of the South are well satisfied with the year's outcome. The weather in Duluth is certainly grand, and I am enjoying myself here much."

In the entertainment of the visitors, the Commercial club was represented by Maj. H. V. Eva and J. S. Pardee. The committee on arrangements was composed of J. P. Hanson, of the Duluth & Iron Range, H. Johnson, Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Mart Adson, of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic. The other members of the reception committee were: B. P. Neff, vice president Duluth Commercial club, chairman; Fred A. Hills, H. R. Carl, Great Northern; J. I. Thomas, C. P. O'Donnell, Northern Pacific; M. M. Hanna, Duluth & Iron Range; C. W. Kleswetter, Duluth, Missabe & Northern; A. J. Perrin, J. P. Gordon, W. W. Walker, D. S. S. & A. Ry.; C. L. Kennedy, C. M. & St. P. Ry.; W. D. Burr, D. Blakeney, G. M. Smith, Omaha Ry.; J. Longbotham, Great Western Ry.; Fred Ober, ticket agent at the Union station; W. H. Smith, A. E. Hathaway, city ticket agent Great Northern, A. H. Kuehnow, and W. H. Shachan.

SOUTH SHORE'S ANNUAL MEETING

No Changes in Board of Directors While Reports Show Corporate Loss.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 22.—There was no change in the board of directors of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway at the annual meeting held here yesterday participated in by 130,000 out of 220,000 shares, and devoted to routine business.

The officers will be elected at a meeting to be held in two weeks probably in New York. Vice President Eldridge is quoted as saying he did not expect a change in officers to be made.

The annual report of the fiscal year ending June 30, shows a falling off in every department of the company's business, while the expenses were practically the same as for the preceeding year. The net corporate loss is $220,465, compared with a loss of $31,824 the previous twelve months.

HENRY HORN'S PROMOTION.

May Become General Manager of New Haven Road.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—Henry J. Horn, formerly general manager of the Northern Pacific is reported to be slated for the position of general manager of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

Two years ago, Harry Horn was general manager of the Northern Pacific, rising from a draftsman. After graduating from the Boston Institute of Technology he became acting flagman with a surveying crew on the Minneapolis & St. Louis. After leaving the Northern Pacific for about a year he was general manager for C. Gotzian & Co. But he did not like commercial work and resigned. Charles S. Mellen, formerly president of the Northern Pacific, then took him on the New Haven road as his assistant.

EVERY MONTH HAS ITS MOOD.

Gentlewoman: A well known sportswoman writes me an interesting note of those ladies who take an active part in life and the pleasures of the field. She says:

"Have you ever thought how we all more or less, develop a different temperament each month? It seems to me that in January we are apprehensive; in February, speculative; May, impulsive; June, appreciative, July—it's generally too hot to be anything but submissive; August, aggressive; October, contemplative.

"For November and December words fall me to define a temperament. The hunting woman is in her seventh heaven and as happy as can be to be in the saddle again and at covert side. Of course nowadays each month has its program for the sportswoman—she is much more the sympathetic and intelligent companion of the sportsman than ever was the case before."

OBJECT TO PLAN OF ROAD WORK

Members of West Duluth Commercial Club to Discuss Getchell Road.

The West Duluth Commercial club will hold a meeting this evening at the club rooms and several important matters that have come up the past week will be discussed. Prominent among them is the new Getchel road and the large expenditures authorized for the work. Members of the club claim that the money appropriated for the grading of the road is not being used judiciously.

A. J. Meldahl of the board of public works and J. J. Frey looked the work over yesterday. The latter said that it will cost several thousand dollars more than appropriated to get the road through to Proctor or to the country roads, the way the work is being done at the present time.

"What the city should do is to push as rapidly as possible a road through to the top of the hillside and not pay so much attention to a special kind of grade for the embankment alongside of the highway," said Mr. Frey. "Several hundred dollars are being spent in needlesly making a sloping embankment which must have a slope of a foot and a half to every foot of depth. All of this costs money where most any kind of a cut would do if it provided the roadway. The embankment could be completed later when more money would be available." Mr. Frey says further that if the money is allowed to be used as it now is, the county commissioners may object to contributing the $2,000 which they they have practically promised.

WEST DULUTH MEN IN CENTRAL CHINA

Thomas and Michael Ennett Write of Cholera Conditions in Orient.

Peter Ennett received a letter yesterday from his two brothers, Thomas and Michael, who are in Central China at the present time. Both men have been there for the past five years and in their letter state that conditions are worse now than they have ever been. It took four weeks for the letter to reach West Duluth.

Speaking of the conditions existing in China at the present time, they write in part:

"The cholera here has damaged everything and the crops are spoiled everywhere. The sickness in the western section, although not widespread, has frightened everyone and has made matters just as bad. The government is doing everything in its power to check this plague, but is of very little help, as the doctors themselves are dying from the disease."

The boys are both well, not being in the infected district, and have taken a load of anxiety off the minds of their friends and relatives in West Duluth.

LOSES HAND AT BLAST FURNACE

John Carlson, a laborer with the Zenith Furnace company, lost a hand early this morning in an accident near the blast furnace. There was no eyewitness to the accident, but Dr. Payette, who attended his wound, believes that the hand was burned off in the big cauldron, or probably caught on some of the hot handles. The young man has not been questioned yet regarding the accident.

He was immediately taken to St. Mary's hospital, where he is considered out of danger at the present time. Dr. Payette said that the young man's hand was taken off at the wrist in the accident, and, although it is a serious injury, he will probably be able to leave the hospital in a few weeks.

After visiting his parents and relatives on the other side he will go back to Portland, where he is established in business.

He is well pleased with the growth of West Duluth and predicts a bright future for this section of the country. He will spend a few days renewing acquaintances before leaving for New York.

Old Folks' Concert.

Dressed in the costumes of a century ago, the Asbury M. E. church choir gave their old folks' concert in the church auditorium last evening. A large audience witnessed the performance and was enthusiastic in praise of the music and singing of the various parts. There was a chorus of forty voices outside of the principal cast, and their singing was worthy of special commendation. The performance was a success throughout.

WHAM MAY QUIT.

Illini Tackle May Desert Game for Teaching Post.

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 22.—Fifty candidates for the Illinois varsity reported to Head Coach Hall on Illinois field yesterday. Before the practice ended the coaches had an eleven running through signals. All indications point to fast and furious work to round the team into shape for the stiff game with St. Louis university, Oct. 14. Springe, who was undecided as to playing football again, donned a suit.

The only bear story is that Charley Wham, tackle, may not play. He considers taking a teaching post in the university, which would bar him. Otherwise the lineup is complete. Sinnock, the famous quarterback of a few years back, may be selected as freshman coach.

STATE SUPREME COURT WILL MEET OCT. 3.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court of Minnesota will convene Oct. 3 with about 200 cases on the canendar. This will be an unusually small number. There were more than 250 on the docket last spring.

NO REPEAL OF RECIPROCITY

Washington Believes Agreement Will Stay on Statute Books.

Political Gossips Beg'n Figuring—Some London Comment.

Washington, Sept. 22.—"Liberals defeated" was the report to the state department from Consul General Badley at Montreal, recording the official demise of the reciprocity movement.

No further official declaration is expected, because the Canadian government naturally supposes that this government is familiar with the agreement, and especially the condition that the proposed new and reduced duties shall not be effective until after Canadian ratification.

The single exception was the wood pulp and paper schedule, which by special provision went into operation immediately upon the approval of the act and is the law of the land, unless congress should see fit to retire the whole reciprocity act.

No Repeal Expected.

The opinion expressed at the state department was that no effort would be made to repeal the reciprocity act, and although the duties therein provided will not become effective, the act itself will be permitted to remain on the statute books, constituting an ever open door to Canada and a reminder of the recognition by the United States of the merits of the principle of reciprocity.

The question which is agitating leaders of political parties and factions throughout the United States, is how their fortune in the approaching national campaign will be effected by the defeat of the Laurier government and Canadian reciprocity. It is evident that the replies will be as varied in character as were the political views of the factions which fought over the question during the special session of congress.

Nothing to Say.

Official Washington closely followed the returns from Canada, but remains silent. Acting Secretary Huntington Wilson of the state department declines to make any statement, and there is not another high official here in a position to discuss the situaton. The unofficial view was that as Canada had rejected the agreement there was nothing for the administration to do but "make the best of the matter."

That the rejection of the Canadian agreement will have a bearing upon the campaign of President Taft for renomination and re-election is not doubted. Some of the old guard Republicans who supported the agreement 'against their better judgment' are saying that its defeat will strengthen the Taft administration by removing the only issue on which they were in disagreemet with the president. Most of the insurgent Republicans opposed the agreement and they believe their position has been made much stronger as a result of the election in Canada today.

No Democratic Word.

There is no one here to speak even informally for the Democrats. A majority of that party in both the senate and house voted for the enactment of the agreement, and without their votes the Taft program for the special session would have failed.

Some of the friends of the Canadian agreement do not hesitate to charge the Canadian defeat of the Laurier government to the "annexation bogey." One of the excuses for this issue was suggested by a speech of Champ Clark of Missouri, now speaker of the house, which he delivered during the last session of the Sixty-first congress, when the agreement was passed by the house and held up by the senate. Mr. Clark was making a plea for a wider market, and in giving his reasons for supporting the Canadian agreement, said:

"I am for it because I hope to see the day when the American flag will float over every square foot of the British North American possessions clear to the North Pole. They are people of our blood. They speak our language. Their institutions are much like ours. They are trained in the difficult art of self-government. My judgment is that if the treaty of 1854 had never been abrogated, the chances of a consolidation of those two countries would have been much greater than they are now."

Couldn't Explain It Away.

The Canadian press, or at least no small part of it, accepted Mr. Clark's statement as a confession that the real motive of the United States was to promote annexation. In vain Mr. Clark explained that the remark was "semi-jocular," although representing his personal desire. He said he spoke for no one but himself, and that he merely expressed a hope to which he had given utterance many times in the past. The chance remark was one of the chief arguments used in the Canadian campaign by the opponents of the agreements.

Added importance to Mr. Clark's remark was given when he was later elected speaker, and as such became the leader of his party. Many persons, because of these circumstances, are attributing the political downfall of the premier of the Canadian government to the speaker of the American house of representatives.

"Great Moral Victory."

London, Sept. 22.—Commenting on the result of the Canadian election, the Pall Mall Gazette says:

"Canada stands to be congratulated on the greatest moral victory and signal triumph of patriotic instinct and political wisdom ever achieved within the confines of the British empire. Canada, from east to west has elected to stand by her birthright, and has emptied the mess of pottage in the gutter. Her vengeance has fallen with terrific weight upon the fatuous politicians who lent themselves to the program of sinverse. The premier himself is left almost alone, the pathetic and broken survivor of a once omnipotent party."

The Pall Mall Gazette pays a tribute to Sir Wilfrid and his previous work for the empire, and says that he must hope that the ill-fated chapter of reciprocity will be overshadowed by the memory of his worthier and honorable achievements.

Praises Taft's "Meekness."

Of President Taft the paper says:

"President Taft, we are glad to see, accepted Canada's message with becoming meekness. He failed to effect the designed breach in that imperial commercial band stretched from England around the world to England again, and the importance of rupturing which he announced. Canada is not minded either to be annexed by her neighbor or to become a hewer of wood and a drawer of water."

The Liberal Westminster Gazette, after a personal tribute to Premier Laurier, who, it points out, might, if he had chosen, have conducted the affairs of the government in such a way as to continue in power, but made a bolder choice and showed his countrymen the way to a new policy, says:

"The Canadians, it is clear, are not yet prepared for the new departure which threatened to, if it did not actually make, a breach in the policy in which for generations they have been nurtured by both parties."

From Federal Standpoint.

The paper, from an imperial point of view, finds many grounds for encouragement and consolation. It adds:

"It may be, and we think it is, an unfounded opinion that the reciprocity agreement conflicts with the imperial connection; but while that opinion is held we say frankly that we had rather the Canadians voted against reciprocity in the belief that it would weaken the imperial tie, than that they voted for it with the deliberate intention of producing that result."

The Gazette thinks, also, that the Canadians are only at the beginning of the question of reciprocity, and that under a new redistribution act, and as the West fills up, the Liberals will have a better chance of carrying it.

The paper further reminds the Conservatives that a part of their success was due to Bourassa, and that it would be a mistake to count the Quebec vote as permanently hostile to reciprocity.

Judge Cutting rendered a verdict in favor of Michael C. Brzonkala against Victor Matel for $120, the full amount asked, yesterday afternoon in municipal court. Brzonkala defended Matel and his cousin, Adolph, in the fall of 1909, securing their acquittal on murder charges and claimed that he had that amount still due from each of the defendants. Adolph's whereabouts are unknown and Victor claimed that he had settled in full with Brzonkala for $375. Three trials were necessary to finally dispose of the cases against the cousins.

Looking for Missing Son.

Mrs. W. E. Patten of 246 Watson avenue, St. Paul, has written the local police asking them to assist her in locating her son, Eugene. She said that he left home last Monday after his father had threatened him with the reform school but that he will be welcomed back gladly if he will return. Eugene is 16 years old, large for his age, with blue eyes, dark hair, blue suit and gray hat. He also wore a red sweater with gold-colored trimmings down the front. He was accompanied by another boy of about his own age and it is thought that he is in Duluth or its vicinity.

Osborn Not Surprised.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Osborn this afternoon gave out the following signed statement on the Canadian election result:

"I am not surprised at the result in Canada. The pendulum there has been swinging away from Laurier. Every man has his day. It was big of him to go to the country for a true expression when he might have forced the reciprocity treaty through unless he hoped to use it as an issue to rehibilitate the Liberal party.

The disappointment on this side is assuaged by the fact that the United States took the right position and was influenced by principles higher than those of commercialism. Canada is in the full pride and pulse of young nationalism. In this state of mind her hopes and prejudices are easily bent in narrow and selfish directions. The day of greater political propinquity is only deferred, because at the base the Canadian people are the same as our people, and will come in sober sense to see that they must fight their higher battles of national and individual life with us.

"I do not exclude England from this sentiment. I have reason to believe that Ambassador Bryce and many other wise English statesmen favored reciprocity as the portal of a new era of better feeling, out of which only good to all could flow. On our part there should be no desire for reprisal, and only a sense of regret that Canada refused to shake hands today. She will tomorrow."

LIFE INSURANCE BILLIONS.

Life insurance companies have been charged with favoritism in the matter of distributing their investments. It has been argued, says a writer in Moody's Magazine, that the reserves held in the territories where the policy holders live who contributed them, and in one or two states legal enactments have been passed to secure this result.

Railroad bonds and real estate mortgage loans are the two classes of securities most patronized by the companies. Of the $3,665,630,535 assets owned by the companies doing business in New York no less than $1,746,665,734 is invested in bonds and stocks and $1,126,279,860 in mortgage loans.

So far as the latter form of investment is concerned, this kind of criticism is silenced because the mortgages themselves, scattered over wide areas, are the best evidence that the policy holders' money is not "piled up in Wall Street." But with stock and bond investments it is different.

Because railroad securities are bought on the New York Stock exchange, even though the railroads which they sustain help to develop the Southern and Western states, some critics from these states have conjured up a financial grievance against the companies and raised the specious cry of "Keep our money at home."

That these sections of the country have nothing to complain of in the matter of investments has been conclusively shown in a paper by Robert L. Cox, general counsel of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

Analyzing the investments of fourteen large companies representing two-thirds of the entire assets, Mr. Cox found that states like Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska had more than three times as high a ratio of investments to reserves as had the New England states. Paul Morton, late president of the Equitable Life, in a speech delivered in Chicago in December last, stated that life insurance companies had invested in the Mississippi valley territory $726,000,000, although the estimated reserves belonging to the policy holders residing in the same territory amounted to only $583,000,000.

THE TROUBLE WITH ARBITRATION.

Los Angeles Times: "Arbitration as a substitute for warfare will do excellently, said Gen. F. D. Grant, at a banquet at West Point, "provided the contending nations don't show the spirit of Commodore Vanderbilt's tenant.

"Commodore Vanderbilt used often to arbitrate his tenants' disputes, and one day two farmers called on him in his function of arbitrator.

"The commodore, before consenting to act, put to the first tenant the necessary question:

"'Now, Henry, if I consent to arbitrate, will you abide by my decision?'

"The farmer, a hard-headed old fellow, answered thoughtfully:

"'Well, commodore, I'd like to know what it is first.'"

FIREWORKS FOLLOW THE DEFEAT OF RECIPROCITY

Shorts Rush to Cover at Opening of Trading Session.

Wheat Soars, December Option Closing 7⅜ Cents Over Thursday.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 22.—Fireworks were on display at the session of the Duluth Board of Trade today. September wheat closed at a bulge of 8½ cents, its final figure being $1.10½. That was only an eighth of a cent below the very highest point it reached during the whole panicky session. There were also big bulges at Minneapolis and Chicago, but Duluth cast them both into the shade.

Duluth flax likewise closed higher all along the line. Aside from the excitement over the defeat of reciprocity, conditions were such as to cause a decline, for offerings were more liberal than they have been for some days. Nevertheless, September gained 6c, October and November 12c and December 8c.

Rye closed at a gain of 3c, oats ½c and corn ⅝c.

Wild Time at Opening.

Seldom has the floor of the Duluth Board of Trade presented such an exciting scene as it did at the opening this morning. Hardly had the gong sounded for the trading to begin, when there was a terrific rush of the shorts to get rid of their obligations. There was a panic to buy. In the pit there was a bedlam of voices. On the board there was a display of figures that was truly fascinating. it meant so much. The boys kept chalking as fast as they could chalk, and it all meant that wheat was making skyward bounds as a result of the vote on reciprocity. Not only that, but all the other grains were going up too.

The fact that there was such a wild time at the opening showed very plainly that the Canadian vote was a surprise to many. It had appeared to be the general opinion that the treaty would win out, and there were many who had sold short on the strength of that false prophecy. It is true that many of the shorts made a rush to cover just before the close of yesterday, because they had become timid over the possibility of a defeat of the treaty and there was a bulge in wheat at the last, but the greater number of those who speculated on the triumph of the international measure stuck to their hazard. It was no wonder that there was nervousness and excitement at the opening.

Wheat Opens 5 Cents Up.

Wheat fluctuated more or less through the morning but the general tendency was clearly upward. Some of the gains were quite sudden and violent, even after the initial excitement had to some extent died out. There were lulls in the storm from time to time, but it continued to rage more or less all through the morning. There was quite a sensation when Duluth September wheat made an opening at $1.07 or 5 cents over the price that was bid at the close of yesterday, but that bulge was only a beginning. September quickly took another flight, reaching $1.09½. Then the bidders, half frightened at what they had done, allowed it to subside to $1.09 and later it got down to $1.08½. Bullish news kept coming, however, from Chicago and Minneapolis, especially the latter. At Minneapolis there was about as wild a time as there was at Duluth. The result was that Duluth September took another skyward flight. This time it went up to $1.10¼.

"Poor Winnipeg," was a remark that was frequently heard on the floor this morning. Winnipeg wheat started off with a loss. The Winnipeg bulls had nothing to rejoice over. Winnipeg October, which closed yesterday at $1, opened this morning at 98¾c. To be deprived of the American market certainly did the wheat sellers of Canada no good. By noon, however, the American bulge had had some sympathetic effect on Winnipeg, which even a tariff wall could not prevent. Winnipeg October had reached 99⅜c, but still under yesterday's close.

That reciprocity was a proposition affecting the flax market was demonstrated on the Duluth floor today. There was no little trading, in comparison with what there has been, though the flax movement is not yet what it ought to be for this time of the year. Yet there was more activity than there has been for many days. Arrivals of flax are increasing in volume day by day. This condition, under ordinary circumstances would have caused the price of flax to fall, but today up to noon September did not get any time more than 1 cent below yesterday's closing figure and most of the time it was above it. September opened at a bulge of 4 cents. Canadian flax does affect the American market. If it were not for the duty, all of Canada's surplus product would find its most natural market in the United States.

Brownhall wired from Liverpool: "The wheat market opened unchanged to ¼d lower, and during the early trading October declined ⅜d, with the distant months easy. The firmness in Winnipeg yesterday and the firmness in Minneapolis was offset here by the results of the Canadian election, with rather free outside selling in the way of realizing. During the morning the market was dull, but with a steadier undertone and some recovery on predictions of lighter world's shipments this week, small Russian shipments and improved demand by millers for Australian grade. Manitoba is offering freely. The general demand here is quiet, with cargoes rather pressed for sale, especially so on distant offers. At 1:30 p. m. the market was easy, ⅛@⅜d lower than yesterday.

"The corn market was neglected and unchanged. Indian wheat shipments this week amount to 552,000 bu against 256,000 last week and 1,688,000 a year ago. Shipments next week will aggregate 96,000.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Soars as Result of General Rush to Buy.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—A general rush to buy today sent wheat soaring. The defeat of reciprocity in Canada was the only influence thought of, everything else temporarily being forgotten. It was the accepted view that with no Canadian wheat available the holders of American wheat were in a position to command greatly enhanced figures, at least from the mills. Indeed, one prominent speculator was quoted as declaring an advance of 20 cents not improbable for spring wheat. Dispatches from Liverpool telling of a decline there because of the election outcome were entirely ignored in Chicago. The opening here was 1¼@1⅜c to 2⅛c higher than last night. December started at 97c to 97¼c, a gain of 1¼@1⅜c to 1½@1⅝c, touched 96⅞c and then climbed to 97½c.

Profit-taking on a huge scale helped calm the excitement until late in the day when stop-loss buying caused a fresh upturn. The close was nervous with December at 98⅝c, a net advance of 2⅞@3c.

Oats attracted almost as much attention as wheat, being equally involved in the defeat of reciprocity.

A genuine buying flurry ensued, commission houses, cash concerns, shorts and local bulls all took a hand. Eventually, profit-taking by holders checked the rise. The market opened ⅞c to 1⅝c up. December started at 46⅛c to 46¼c, a bulge of ⅞c to 1¼c, and ascended to 46⅝c.

As the reciprocity treaty did not refer to corn, that cereal was unaffected by the uproar in the neighboring pits. Lightness of country offerings, however, led to a little display of strength. December in the initial trading was ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c higher at 64¼c to 64⅜c. Afterward the price hardened to 64½c.

Near the end of the session, corn worked a little higher in sympathy with wheat. The close was firm at 64⅝c for December, a net gain of ½@⅝c.

Provisions were tame, nearly neglected. First sales were the same as last night to 12½c lower with January deliveries $15.00 to $15.12½ for pork, $8.92½ for lard, and $7.95 for ribs.

MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Reciprocity's Defeat Sends Wheat Up and Close Shows Gain.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 22.—Speculative demand for wheat today was active and local brokers received numerous orders on account of the defeat of reciprocity. Prices fluctuated sharply and went upwards with a bang. Pit offerings light. September closed 5 cents higher than yesterday. December 5⅞c higher and May 5⅞@6c higher. Local elevator stocks decreased 150,000 bu for the week. Minneapolis today received 575 cars of wheat against 418 a year ago; Duluth, 91 against 199 and Winnipeg 356 against 591. September opened $1.06¾, high $1.07½, low $1.06½, closed $1.07½. December opened $1.06½ to $1.09, high $1.10¼, low $1.06½, closed $1.09¾. # SHARP BREAK IN STOCKS AND VIOLENT RECOVERY

Looked as Though Market Might Be Entirely Demoralized.

Supporting Orders Cause the Bears to Beat a Hasty Retreat.

New York, Sept. 22.—The stock market was again deluged with selling orders for United States Steel at the opening today. The first sales of the common was 45,000 shares, a block of almost unprecedented size, which sold from 54 to 55½, an extreme loss of 4¼. On subsequent transactions the price fell to 53½. In the first ten minutes of trading 150,400 shares were sold. The preferred stock sold at 103½, a loss of 2⅛. The remainder of the market was seriously upset. The defeat of Canadian reciprocity was chiefly responsible for large losses among the railroad shares. Great Northern preferred fell back 4¼, Northern Pacific 2½, Erie first preferred 1¾, Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Atchison 1¼ and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Reading and Northwestern 1. The decline in General Electric continued and lost 4 points.

After the first staggering effects of the violent slump in the steel stocks and the issues immediately concerned in the defeat of the reciprocity agreement the market began to respond to banking support, which was extended to the representative railroad stocks.

Union Pacific bounded up to 158⅝, placing it a point above yesterday's closing. Rallies among other issues reached a point or more and extended to 3 points in General Electric.

United States Steel went to 53¼ and the preferred to 103 before the demoralization of those stocks, was checked. After they had rallied 1 to 1½ the movement became very nervous, but trading was less heavy.

Dealings in the common stock aggregated 245,000 shares in the first thirty minutes, but after that the pace slackened considerably, and in the next fifteen minutes the volume of sales was less than 20,000 shares.

The effective support offered by banking interests following the first wild break steadied the market shortly after 11 o'clock. United States Steel common rallied 2½ from the low of the day and the preferred rebounded 2 points.

Trading in these shares, while still heavy did not approximate the enormous outpouring of the earlier transactions.

The dealings in the second half hour amounted to only 56,000 shares as compared with 245,000 in the first thirty minutes. The total transactions in the first hour were 565,000 shares.

The recovery of the railroad shares was still more pronounced. Canadian Pacific rallied 3 points from the lowest and Union Pacific 2⅝. The recoveries elsewhere were from 1 to 2 points.

Much pressure against the steel stocks came from London. The large part of the heavy selling orders at the opening were said by international houses to have originated at that point. Most of the London offerings were disposed of at the low price.

Priced were pushed up even more rapidly than they had declined in the early trading. United States Steel preferred more than made up its losses, rising to 106, as compared with yesterday's closing price of 105⅝. The common rallied 4 points from 53¾ to 57¼, recovering all but a fraction of its decline. Almost the entire list, with the exception of United States Steel common and the Hill shares, rallied above yesterday's close. Canadian Pacific made a net gain of 5 points, Union Pacific 2¾, St. Paul 1½ and Reading 1. Bethlehem Steel preferred was sent up from 54½ to 58½, General Electric from 142 to 145¼, Great Northern preferred from 120 to 123 and Northern Pacific from 111¾ to 114¼. The market ignored all influences other than the steel situation and the defeat of Canadian reciprocity. The violence of the rally was due in large part to a rout of the bears. When it became evident that support was being offered the bull leaders took the market in hand. The turn in the sentiment was so swift that shorts took fright and began to bid against the bulls for stocks to cover their contracts. Profit-taking sent prices off sharply again before midday, however. United States Steel reacted 1½ and Canadian Pacific 2 points. The bond market was easy.

Trading fell off to a marked degree during the noon hour, but the undertone continued feverish. There were fractional recessions from best price, particularly in United States Steel, which felt the weight of further liquidation.

The market closed heavy. Finding that they could dislodge little stock by another drive against the copper shares, and making no impression whatever on United States Steel and the active railroads, the bears beat a hasty retreat and bought stock in large blocks.

United States Steel again mounted to 57, Reading to 139 and Union Pacific to 160. Talk about a 100,000-share pool in United States Steel which had been hanging over the market having been liquidated this morning, afforded encouragement to the bulls in bidding up prices.

Fluctuations in the latter part of the day were on a normal basis and speculation lacked the excitement of the forenoon. Prices, aside from the Hill group and the copper and steel stocks, ruled mostly well above yesterday's closing. There was a renewal of profit-taking in the final dealings and fresh liquidation in United States Steel.

Cotton Market.

New York, Sept. 22.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 7 to 10 points in response to disappointing cables, reports of unsettled financial markets abroad, the failure of the weather map to show as much rain as predicted by buyers of yesterday, and reports that the South was offering spot more freely again this morning.

Offerings were heavy after the call and prices made new low records with October selling at 10.61 and December at 10.66, or about 16 to 18 points under the closing yesterday. Stop-loss orders were uncovered on this decline and after their execution the market rallied 7 or 8 points from the lowest on covering and buying for a reaction.

The market was less active in the forenoon and somewhat irregular, but old bull brokers had supporting orders apparently, and there seemed to be a good demand around 10.70 for December, with the general list ruling about 8 to 10 points net lower at midday.

Private reports from Georgia claim spot offerings were enormous with demand limited, but a few advices were received from other sections of the belt indicating that the interior was a less active seller at the decline, and there was some talk of a better trade demand, which probably helped the rally from the low point of the morning.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: September, 10.76; October, 10.65; November, 10.63; December, 10.71; January, 10.67; February, 10.72; March, 10.79; April, 10.83; May, 10.90; July, 10.90.

COPPERS WEAKER; METAL TOO CHEAP

Absence of Foreign Demand for Red Product Keeps Stocks Down.

Coppers showed little disposition at any time today to recover any of the ground they have recently lost. The general tendency was rather to go still further down. Though the general stock list, toward the close, made quite a rally, coppers responded very languidly. Amalgamated was about the only copper stock that shared in that rally, and even Amalgamated did not recover enough of the ground it lost at the opening to come up to its closing figure of yesterday.

While many of the copper brokers and brokers of other stocks expressed surprise at the outcome of the Canadian vote on the reciprocity issue, the damage to market values of these stocks was not what many of the warm friends of reciprocity expected, in the event of its defeat. There were weak openings, to be sure, all along the line, but this was the situation that might have been anticipated, in view of the many adverse influences that have been operating on the markets, even if the reciprocity question had not existed. The terrific hammering that United States Steel has had was in itself sufficient to account for that. The stocks that suffered most from the defeat of reciprocity were those of the railroads operating along the Canadian border. The general list, however, had quite a rally before noon today, and coppers shared in the benefit. The opening of the London market was adverse to coppers, both spot and futures being 1s 3d off. Tonopah Nevada declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents and 15 cents extra. This is what it has been declaring for some time. Among the copper movements of the day were the following:

Amalgamated, $52.50 yesterday's close; today, $51, $51.50, $52, $53, $52.50, $52.87½, $52.12½; Butte-Ballaklava, yesterday, $4.25 bid, $4.75 asked; today, $4.25, $4; Butte Coalition, yesterday, $14.50 bid, $15 asked; today, $14.50; Calumet & Arizona, yesterday, $48 bid, $48.50 asked; today, $48, $47.50, $47, $47.50, $48, $46.75, $47.37½; Giroux, yesterday, $3.50 bid, $3.68¾ asked; today, $3.50, $3.37½, $3.50, $3.37½, $3.50; Greene Cananea, yesterday, $6 bid, $6.06¼ asked; today, $6, $6.06¼, $6; North Butte, yesterday, $22.25 bid, $22.50 asked; today, $22.25, $23, $22.50, $23, $22.50; Butte & Superior, yesterday and today, $9 bid; Keating, yesterday and today, $.37½ asked.

Mohawk produced 1,134,684 pounds of refined copper during August, the largest output ever recorded. The recovery of refined copper per ton of rock was 15.53 pounds, the lowest since March, when it was 13.88 pounds.

A wire from Globe, Ariz., says No. 2 shaft of Live Oak, now being sunk on hole No. 38, is 781 feet, and is now 60 feet into ore, which by sampling in the shaft averages 3.3 per cent. Sampling of hole No. 38 for the same 60 feet averaged 2.6 per cent, showing that sampling more than holds up to drill hole records. This is probably the best 60-foot section of ore opened up in the Miami camp.

SALMON PLANTED IN STATE LAKE

First Such Experiment in Minnesota Is Tried.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the first time in the history of the state, so far as the records in the office of the game and fish commission, land-locked salmon have been planted in a Minnesota lake. One hundred and fourteen cans were sent to Burntside lake near Ely some days ago.

Two car loads of trout fry, finger length, have been sent to the lakes near Duluth, and this practically completes the distribution for this year. Approximately 4,000,000 trout were sent out from the hatcheries, the largest ever sent out.

SCRAMBLE FOR TROUT

Game Warden Has No Difficulty in Disposing of Fish.

Greater Part of Shipment Planted in Streams Within City.

"We could have disposed of several carloads of trout last night as easily as we did of the 160 cans which reached the city last evening," said Game Warden Thomas J. Storey this morning.

The fish were snapped up almost as soon as they were hauled inside the Union station. Many persons had to be turned away disappointed. Over a score of automobiles and rigs were on hand to receive them. Fishermen stated that they are the finest lot ever sent to this part of the state. Many of them were finger length and the majority of these will have grown big enough by next summer to catch. The law prohibits the taking of brook trout under six inches in length, and the season doesn't open until April 15.

All of the fish went to stock streams inside the city limits or right close by. The larger part of the fry were placed in streams which flow through the city, including Lester river, Chester creek and Miller's creek. This will prove a boon to the disciples of Isaac Walton who can devote only a few hours once in a while to following their favorite pursuit. Street car lines cross each of these streams and they can be reached without the slightest difficulty or hardship. If the stocking is continued and fishermen obey the law the fishing in these convenient streams should be good every season.

Other streams which were supplied with fish were the Sucker river, only a dozen miles away from the downtown section and one of the most distant streams in which the fish were placed; Beaver, Silver, Hay, Talmage and Amity creeks. All of these have been good trout streams in the past, and some fish have been taken from them every year, but they have been so popular that the supply has been sadly depleted.

Deputy Storey stated that he is deeply grateful to the sportsmen of the city for the great assistance which they gave him in disposing of the fry. He said that he is very sorry that he couldn't have given every person who was at the depot last evening at least a few of the 160 cans which came in. At least one man from another county came to Duluth and asked for part of the fry, but he had to be refused. One of the particularly gratifying features of the distribution last evening is that the fish were put in streams which are so close to home. It is stated that there is a further supply still in the state fish hatcheries and an effort will be made to get another shipment to this city.

SUIT AGAINST GREAT NORTHERN

Roy G. Coyne Asks $5,000 for Alleged Injuries Sustained.

Before Judge Ensign and a jury in district court, Roy G. Coyne is trying to collect $5,000 from the Great Northern Railway company for injuries alleged to have been sustained while in the employ of the company some months ago.

The plaintiff claims that he was a signal man. A train of some sixty-five cars parted at the station called Fermoy. A defective coupling was the cause.

While he was engaged between the two sections trying to repair the break, the engineer backed the first section and he was badly crushed.

He claims that it was the duty of the engineer to move the train only when signalled to do so and that on this occasion no signal was given.

He claims that his body was crushed but that the most serious injury was sustained to his hand. As the result of the accident he claims to have been forced to have the injured member amputated.

After flying about five miles some trouble developed in his engine and the machine dropped to the earth, a distance of about sixty feet, near Rathbone, and was badly damaged. Ward escaped serious injury and is returning to Addison on foot. The extent of the damage to the machine is not known.

AEROPLANE STARTS FORTY RUNAWAYS

Stirring Times Follow Accident at Viroqua, Wis., Fair.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 22.—In an aeroplane flight at the Vernon county fair at Viroqua, Wis., today, one of the planes of the aeroplane failed to work after the aviator, Vangie Ludvig of New Lisbon, Wis., had arisen, and dragged along a row of buggies, striking the horses and causing forty runaway horses to crash into the crowd of thousands of people. The aeroplane finally came down on the top of a buggy and was wrecked. The aviator was badly bruised but not dangerously hurt.

MUCH RELIEF FELT IN EBERHART CAMP OVER RECIPROCITY'S DEFEAT

Governor Says It Has Not Hurt Taft With His Friends.

Failure of Pact May Unite Warring Republican Factions.

Some Breakers Ahead for Present Members of Congress.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A sigh of relief heard from the point of old Lake Superior to the Iowa line and from the wilds adjacent to the Wisconsin on over to the Dakotas might have been heard from the Eberhart camp yesterday, when it was announced the Canadian pact had failed. Reciprocity has been a "boogy man" which tantalized and harassed and embarrassed the governor's friends beyond measure. In an effort to stand by the Taft administration, Mr. Eberhart has had to face a storm of protest from the rural districts of his state, and his position between the president and the farmers might be likened to the man in the well with a bear at the bottom and a mad bull outside—either way he moved, he faced a fight.

When it was learned that the pact had failed, the governor said:

"As far as the president's interests are concerned, defeat of the pact has not hurt him with his friends, and cer-

KNIGHTS OF HONOR MEET NEXT WEEK

Succeed Odd Fellows and Patriarchs Militant at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 23.—With the passing of the Patriarchs Militant, the military branch of the Odd Fellows, who broke camp at the state fair grounds here yesterday, officials of the Knights and Ladies of Honor today began preparations for the first biennial national encampment of the uniform rank, which will be held at the fair grounds all of next week.

A novel feature, not usually seen at the uniform encampment of secret orders, will be the presence of women, in military dress, taking an important part in the encampment. Several hundred women, it is expected, will occupy tents at the fair grounds, and a number will share places with the men on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Samuel J. De Long. Women on horseback and afoot will form one of the important divisions in the parade next Thursday afternoon.

While the uniform rank is encamped at the fair grounds, the supreme lodge of the Knights and Ladies of Honor will meet at its national headquarters building in this city.

Stocker Heads Patriarchs.

Maj.-Gen. A. B. Stocker of Miamisburg, Ohio, was appointed commander of the Patriarchs Militant, by Grand Sire John B. Cockrum. The appointment was later ratified by the sovereign grand lodge.

HAS DROPPED OUT OF CROSS-CONTINENT RACE

JAMES WARD,
Who Has Given Up the Contest With Fowler and Rodgers for Trans-Continental Aviation Honors.

FOWLER HAS TO GO BACK

Engine Is Not Strong Enough to Cross the Mountain.

Rodgers Has Accident and Ward Quits Trans-Continental Race.

Colfax, Cal., Sept. 23.—Aviator Robert G. Fowler was ready at 5:30 o'clock this morning to resume his interrupted flight to New York, waiting only a favorable report of weather conditions at the summit. He finally got as far as Blue Canyon, but finally turned back and descended near his place of departure in a long glide. He said that his engine was not strong enough to carry him over the summit.

Fowler left the ground at 6:43 a. m., circling the city several times until he reached a height of 1,500 feet, then swung away toward the summit. In twelve minutes he was out of sight, his engine running smoothly. The aeroplane reappeared in the eastern sky at 7:15, the aviator apparently devoting himself to trying out the air currents as he kept working higher.

Machine in Good Shape.

Just before he left the ground Fowler said that the machine was in good shape and that he had every prospect of success. A message from Summit reading: "Clouds are high," was hand-

POLICE FIND SECRET ROOM

Paraphernalia for Binding Human Body Are Discovered There.

Englewood Murder Case Developes Puzzle for Chicago Officers.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Detectives searching the unoccupied house in Englewood where Dr. W. H. Falker shot and killed Emil Signos, the aeroplane mechanician, discovered a locked closet today, in which six heavy staples had been driven into the floor, with ropes drawn through them in such a manner as to permit the binding of a human body. In one corner was an ax. The detectives opened the lock on the closet door with a skeleton key and were surprised at what they found on the inside. The police believe that the staples and ax were put in the closet by Dignos.

Notwithstanding the fact that Dr. Falker was exonerated at the coroner's inquest, the police still are investigating the case in the belief that another motive for Dignos' attack on the physician besides robbery may be discovered.

Dignos has been identified as the man who, under the name of Adler, rented the vacant house several days ago.

Health Commissioner Young today suspended Dr. Falker, who has been an inspector in the public service since Jan. 22, 1907, pending the outcome of the police investigation of the killing of Dignos.

SAYS HE WAS PAID TO SLUG DENON

Ex-Pugilist Daly Testifies Against Chicago Labor Men.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—John Daly, better known as "Chicago Jack" Daly, a former pugilist, has testified before Judge Himes that he received $50 from William J. Boener, said to be former organizer for Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, and John Olson, a printer, for assaulting Rush V. Denon, a non-union printer, who died Jan. 16, 1911, as a result of his injuries.

Boener and Olson are under arrest, charged with conspiracy in connection with the crime.

BRING MEN BACK INTO THE CHURCH

That Is Aim of Men and Religion Forward Movement.

National Executive Secretary of Modern Crusade Visits Duluth.

Tells of Movement for Which Big Rally Day Is Planned.

An enthusiastic young man, with the intensity of his enthusiasm shining from his eyes, Roy B. Guild of New York, executive secretary of the Men and Religion Forward movement for America, is here today going over with the various committees the plans that are being made at the present time for the campaign in Duluth. It is a campaign to get the men of America back into the church, and tomorrow will be rally day in Duluth.

Mr. Guild says it is the biggest religious movement in the history of the world. That is a very broad and sweeping statement, he admits, but to better illustrate just how the movement came into being, he relates a most remarkable coincidence.

Harry W. Arnold is the man who first thought the movement out. He outlined it, going thoroughly and persistently over the multitude of details. Then he became a victim of tuberculosis and is now in the Adirondacks. He is the man who believed he had a scheme for bringing men back into the church.

The plan was taken up by Fred B. Smith, called the greatest preacher to men in the world, and he called on Marion Lawrence of Chicago, head of the International Sunday School movement. He wanted the co-operation and help of Mr. Lawrence.

Mr. Lawrence reached to a pigeonhole of his desk and pulled out a plan somewhat similar in detail, which he had evolved about the same time that Mr. Arnold was working on his

ACCUSED OF $1,000 THEFT IN CHICAGO

East Side New York Dry Goods Dealer Is Arrested on Partner's Charge.

New York, Sept. 23.—On a warrant from Chicago charging him with the larceny of $1,000 in that city two years ago, Louis Millman, proprietor of a small dry goods store on the East side, was held here today to await the arrival of Chicago detectives. The warrant against Millman charges that the money was stolen from a former business partner, John Lustig.

GREET TAFT IN ST. LOUIS

Non-Partisan Welcome Given the President in Missouri.

Executive Praises Governors Who Are Watching Rate Cases.

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—President Taft arrived here at 7:58 o'clock this morning. He was taken at once to the Mercantile club for breakfast. While here he is to be the guest of the Million Population club.

President Taft, after having breakfast at the Mercantile club, was taken for a forty-mile automobile ride. On the ride he watched a football game for a few minutes and then went to a hotel for a brief rest.

He addressed the Masonic club for five minutes and then went to the City club for luncheon. He was scheduled to lay a corner stone in the new Y. M. C. A. building at 2:30 o'clock, after which he was to proceed to the National league baseball ground to witness a game between Philadelphia and St. Louis.

He will be a guest of honor at a private dinner at 6 o'clock and at 8 o'clock tonight he is scheduled to speak at the Coliseum. He will leave the city shortly before midnight.

Reception Was Non-Partisan.

The president's reception here was non-partisan. At the Mercantile club three former governors of Missouri—Stephens, Francis and Folk—Democrats, were on the reception committee.

At the union station five companies of Boy Scouts were given a place of honor despite the protest of the union labor men, who protested against the Scouts participating. A union band

QUAKE BREAKS ALASKAN CABLE

Heaviest Shock in Thirteen Years Is Felt at Valdez.

Valdez, Alaska, Sept. 23.—(By wireless telegraph.)—The most violent earthquake experienced in Valdez since the town was founded thirteen years ago, occurred at 7:02 Thursday night. The cable at Sitka was severed.

ENTIRE NEW VENIRE IN DUMAS CASE SENT BACK HOME BY JUDGE

"Not Satisfactory" Is Court's Only Explanation of Action.

Coroner Brings in Twenty Men From Bemidji District.

Mike Davis Is Seen But Escapes on Mysterious Tip.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The entire special venire of twenty men submitted this morning by Coroner Ibertson for jurors to be examined for service in the Dumas arson case were summarily discharged by Judge McClenahan when court reconvened at 10:30 after a recess of an hour.

The court did not offer any explanation in dismissing the veniremen, but simply told them to go to the clerk and get their certificates for mileage and receive their pay for one day. No veniremen was examined or asked a question, but the entire twenty were discharged. Court was then adjourned until 1:30 this afternoon.

No Instructions to Coroner.

Judge McClenahan gave no instructions to the coroner for subpoenaeing a further venire, and gave no indication as to what course the court would pursue when the session was to be convened again in the afternoon.

Asked in the chambers why the veniremen were dismissed, Judge McClenahan simply said: "They are unsatisfactory, all around."

It was noticeable that none of the men selected for the venire lived more than fifteen miles from the city of Bemidji, and several in the city.

Twenty Men Summoned.

When court convened at 9 o'clock this morning, M. E. Ibertson, the coroner, who served the special venire for

ANOTHER GUILTY OF JUDGE'S MURDER

Second Kentuckian Convicted Is Sent Up for Life.

Somerset, Ky., Sept. 23.—Fount Helton was found guilty by a jury today of the murder of Magistrate A. J. Beatty and Constable W. F. Heath, and was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Beatty and Heath were shot and killed in the courthouse at Burnside, Ky., last July.

James Ellis, who was tried on the same charge as Helton, was found guilty last Saturday and sentenced to be electrocuted in October.

ONE OF WORLD'S GREATEST WAR VESSELS IS LAUNCHED

Argentina's Battleship Moreno Slides Into the Water.

Big Company of Guests Sees Event at Camden, N. J.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Ranking as one of the greatest warships ever constructed for any government in the world, the Argentine battleship Moreno was launched shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon at Camden, N. J. The only other vessel her equal now afloat is her sister ship, the Riva Davia, recently launched at Quincy, Mass.

The Moreno was christened by Senora Isabel Betbeder, wife of Rear Admiral Onofre Betbeder, president of the Argentine naval commission, as proxy for Senora Josefa Figueroa Alcorta, wife of the former president of the Argentine Republic, who had been selected as the sponsor but was unable to come to this country.

Many Invited Guests.

A large company of invited guests saw the giant ship take her first plunge into the water. Among the guests were Senor Dr. Romulo S. Naon, the Argentine minister at Washington, and his staff, and high officers in the American navy.

The Moreno, named after Mariano Moreno, a famous figure in the history

MORE PUPILS IN SCHOOL THIS YEAR

Eighteen Million in Common Grades Alone Is the Estimate.

New York, Sept. 23.—The schools of the country are opening this month and next to increased attendance, which shows that the American thirst for education has kept ahead of the growth in population. This was said today by a manager of one of the largest teachers' agencies in the country, who from the nature of his work is in touch with the educational situation all over the country. Incidentally, he added that good times were ahead for the members of the teaching profession.

The last school census showed that 20,000,000 enrolled in the various institutions of the country. While no figures for the present year are obtainable, it is estimated that common schools alone have at least 18,000,000 pupils.

POTTERY PLANT IN OHIO IS BURNED.

Zanesville, Ohio, Sept. 23. — Fire destroyed the plant of the Ohio Pottery company here early this morning with a loss estimated at $75,000. Twelve people were slightly hurt by flying bricks when a south wing of the pottery collapsed.

TWENTY VARIETIES GROW ON ONE TREE

Waterville, Minn., Man Says State Is Best of All for Apples.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Willing to wager that he can grow any variety of commercial apple known to horticulturists on the body of a Gould crab apple tree, Seth H. Kenney of Waterville, Minn., who won honors at the Paris exposition and was recognized by the national government for perfecting a cane syrup, has written George Welch, state immigration agent, that he has twenty different varieties of apples growing on one tree.

"You must be aware," Mr. Kenney says, "that this is to be the best state for apple growing in all the United States; that I am ready to pay a large sum for any commercial apple I cannot grow."

The Waterville apple grower produces the different varieties of fruit on one tree by grafting twigs thereon. He believes the ruggedness of the Gould crab tree is especially suited to Minnesota soil.

Mr. Welch has heard of the Kenney products and knows his statement about the number of varieties on one tree to be true. From one tree in the Kenney orchard this year four bushels of apples have been picked and it is estimated there are still six bushels on it.

Stolypin's Funeral Held.

Kiev, Sept. 23.—The funeral of Premier Stolypin was held yesterday and was the occasion for universal mourning. Deputations came to Kiev from all parts of the empire to attend the ceremony, and laid more than 200 wreaths on the catafalque.

SUIT FILED TO OUST FOES OF KANSAS' WOMAN MAYOR

Attorney General of Kansas Acts in Hunnewell Case.

Story of Bitter Contest Is Told in the Petition.

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 23.—Charging that the Hunnewell councilmen refused to confirm Mayor Ella Wilson's appointees, although she presented the names of nearly every reputable citizen of the town, including the "village school master," a petition asking the ouster of the four councilmen was filed in the Kansas supreme court today by Attorney General Dawson.

The petition was drawn up by C. W. Trickett, special investigator appointed by Governor W. R. Stubbs to straighten out Hunnewell affairs. It is directed against F. J. Lander, B. Keir, J. E. Richardson and J. O. Ellis. It alleged that Mrs. Ella Wilson "was elected mayor of Hunnewell at the regular election last April, the voters writing her name on the ballot; that she did not seek office, but that the voters elected her voluntarily."

Tells Story of Dispute.

The petition took up the history of the dispute between the mayor and council, stating that the council desired to meet in "an upstairs bedroom in a hotel," that Mayor Wilson objected to this, and the councilmen consented to meet the mayor in Brockmyre hall, but did not attend when she went there. Then when the attorney general notified them they would have to meet they met, but refused absolutely to confirm any of her appointments, although she named every respected citizen of the town.

By reason of these failures, the petition stated, two women friends of Mayor Wilson now are serving the city as city clerk and city marshal.

The petition concluded with the statement that by reason of the failure of the councilmen to act, "the city is made helpless and is prevented from providing protection for the life and property of its citizens."

FLOUR IS SOARING

Advance Is Attributed to Defeat of the Reciprocity Treaty.

The sharp advances in Duluth in oats, flour and cheese of yesterday and today are laid to the defeat of Laurier and the reciprocity treaty.

While there have been sharp advances in other lines of the grocery trade during the last few weeks, the defeat of the reciprocity bill will send all grains and their products up to a higher point than in some months, in the opinion of local grocers.

Today flour is $6 a barrel. Tuesday it was but $5.40. Oats have advanced 3½ cents and cheese has had an advance of ½ a cent.

From all the milling centers of the East and West comes the report that flour is climbing.

Local and Minneapolis millers say that at this time no one can tell where the advance will end. According to some flour will soar higher and remain firm at the higher price and according to others the price will fall back to the level of a few days ago and remain there.

Local brewers look for a rise in the price of barley. If this is true it may be that the price of beer will go up.

ANOTHER BAD DAY FOR THE COPPERS

Weakness of Foreign Demand for the Red Metal Causes Depression.

Most of the coppers sagged again today. Amalgamated lost heavily. This and Smelter were the weakest stocks on the New York list today. While United States Steel showed considerable rallying power and a strong tendency to recover from the tremendous hammering it has received, Amalgamated slumped almost hopelessly, closing three and a quarter points below the close of yesterday, which close was indeed low enough. North Butte also lost, closing at ⅝ of a point below yesterday.

The general weakness of coppers cannot be attributed to the condition of other stocks. Many of the New York list showed a tendency to rally today. United States Steel, Union Pacific and Reading all showed gains over yesterday at the close. The copper business itself is dull. The price is not high enough to make the mines pay as they should. Neither America nor Europe is showing a sufficient demand for the American product to keep a proper pace with the production.

| | yesterday's close, | today, |
|---|---|---|
| Amalgamated | $53.12½ | $52.50 |
| Smelter | $51.75 | $52 |
| Smelter pfd | $51.50 | $49.75 |

THE "MASCOT" GOLD MINE

Lake Superior & Nevada Development Co. Setting a Hot Pace.

When the Lake Superior & Nevada Development company decided to erect the 100-ton gold mill on the "Arizona Mascot" mine, negotiations were opened with the Arizona Power company to extend its lines to the Bradshaw mountains and to supply the "Arizona Mascot" with electrical power.

The Arizona Power company wanted the business proposed, but demanded a cash deposit of $30,000 and a guarantee to use its electrical energy at rates which the Lake Superior & Nevada Development company management considered too high.

Negotiations were, therefore, broken off, and it was decided to install a crude oil engine to provide both direct power and electrical energy at a much lower price than asked by the Arizona Power company.

Under date of Sept. 19 the Prescott, Arizona, Journal-Miner says:

"R. S. Masson, chief engineer of the Arizona Power company, with G. H. Walbridge of New York, stockholder, after a trip of examination to the Bradshaw mountains, have returned to the city, and as a result of their observations, announce that a power transmission line to Crown King will be constructed from Poland Junction to that active mining district via Mayer and Blue Bell, if the operators will use the service. Both are pleased with the Bradshaws, which they found very active, with an almost unlimited tonnage of pay ore. In the case of consumers who are situated within two miles or more of the railroad, a material reduction will be made in the expense of operating by power, over prevailing methods is intimated, from which will be inferred the liberal inducements that await the building of the line. Among the properties investigated were the old Tiger, Nelson, Pacific Copper, Tiger Gold, Lake Superior & Nevada ("Arizona Mascot"), Springfield mines, under option to the Consolidated Arizona Smelting company, Sayer, Lincoln, Wildflower, War Eagle-Gladiator, Crown King, Swastika and De Soto, all of which are now developing or under operation with mechanical facilities, including reduction plants.

From the foregoing report, it will be seen that the Arizona Power company has abandoned its demands for heavy cash deposits and now is anxious to supply power at attractive rates.

This recession from heavy demands and an independent attitude is considered quite a feather in the cap of the Lake Superior & Nevada Development company. The independence of that company and the intense activity at the "Arizona Mascot" gold mine, has awakened the entire Bradshaw mountain region. Corporations and mining men down there have learned a great deal from the accomplishments of the Lake Superior & Nevada Development company and its skilled engineers during the past months and, probably, will learn much more in the months to come.

At the "Arizona Mascot" gold mine, Supt. Olund has completed the concrete foundation work and now is erecting the big building for the power plant and 100-ton gold mill.

All the mill machinery either has arrived at Crown King or is on the way from the factories.

The "Arizona Mascot" payroll this month will include about fifty-five men.

The three-ton Packard motor truck negotiates the mountain roads most successfully with over-loads. It exceeds all expectations and other companies now plan to purchase motor trucks for use in the Bradshaw mountains.

There is every confidence that the 100-ton gold mill will be in practical operation by Nov. 15 or Dec. 1.

UNCLE SAM WILL HELP DULUTH SCHOOL CHILDREN SAVE PENNIES

Postmaster A. P. Cook is preparing to send circulars to all the schools with the view of interesting the pupils in the government postal savings station, which was established here on Sept. 15. While a deposit of $1 is the smallest that can be made, provision is made for the issuance of a savings card, which can be purchased for 10 cents. The depositor can then, whenever he wishes, purchase adhesive stamps from the department at 10 cents each, which will be pasted on the card, and when the card is filled it will be worth $1 and can be turned in for a regular dollar deposit.

Any person over 10 years of age is permitted to make deposits and can purchase the cards and stamps. This idea affords an excellent opportunity for the pupils to start a savings account of their own, which in the course of time will grow, as 2 per cent interest is added each year.

So far only one card has been purchased and was turned in this morning full and credited to the person. It was by a boy of 16 who has just opened an account and who states that he will make it grow steadily, even though slowly.

Deposits continue to come in rapidly and already Duluth has gained a prominent place for herself among the cities where postal stations have been established. In a week's time almost $10,000 has been put into the coffers of the United States postal department for safe keeping for persons who do not trust others with their savings.

EASTERN FOOTBALL

First Contests of the 1911 Season Take Place in East.

Real Schedule Will Open a Week Later Than Usual.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 23.—The final scenes in the American sports for 1911 and the opening of the intercollegiate recreation year began today with football games on a dozen college gridirons in the East.

The games today were between what might be called minor colleges, for Cornell, Dartmouth and Lehigh do not get into the running until next Wednesday, while Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Pennsylvania play their first games a week from today, which is unusually late. In fact, the whole football schedule is a week later than last year.

Three of the Maine colleges—Bates, Colby and the University of Maine, will play their first games today, while Holy Cross, La Fayette, Carlisle, Gettysburg, Virginia and Ursinus are also on the schedule for their initial team tests.

All of these colleges have opponents that in former years have proven slightly inferior, so that high scores, even with shortened periods are expected. The work of Bates against New Hampshire state—of Holy Cross against Boston college and Gettysburg against Middletown will attract the most attention for a week hence Bates meets Harvard, Holy Cross plays Yale and Gettysburg wrestles with Pennsylvania.

TY COBB STILL LEADING LEAGUE

Tiger Star Retains Position as Premier Hitter and Base Runner.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Ty Cobb of the Detroit team still leads the American league in batting, base stealing and run-getting.

He retains his position as premier batter with an average of .416, Jackson of Cleveland being second with an average of .400; Lajoie of Cleveland is third with .388.

Cobb has stolen 79 bases, which gives him an average thus far this season of .59. Callahan of Chicago is next in the number of pilfered bags with an average of .40, while Milan of Washington is third with .36.

Cobb has scored 138 runs while Jackson of Cleveland is second with 120 and Bush of Detroit third with 118 runs.

In the National league Jackson of Boston heads the list in batting with an average of .363, while Almeida of Cincinnati is second with .355 and Myers of New York third with .342. In base stealing Beschor of Cincinnati is first with an average of .48, Devore of New York next with .42 and Murray of the same team third with .38.

Huggins of St. Louis is the leading run-getter with an average of .78 Sheckard of Chicago second with .76 and Doyle of New York third with .73.

POINTERS FOR THE MOTORIST

Insufficient Inflation and Constant Overloading Cause Much Tire Trouble.

The first thing a driver does when one of his tires blows out is to look for some small sharp object that he is certain caused the trouble. The next move very often is to form an ironclad opinion that the tire manufacturer is wholly to blame for the accident. As a matter of fact, it is more than likely that the fault lies with the driver, for there are two results of carelessness that no tire can possibly withstand—insufficient inflation and constant overloading.

Few motorists ever concede the fact that they have been guilty of either fault. Some drivers claim that they have been particularly careful before starting on the particular trip when the blow-out occurred, to test their tires so as to be sure that the air pressure was absolutely correct and others claim that their cars were far from overloaded. Many drivers forget that previous careless treatment affected the tire's strength. That, perhaps, with the exception of a few times, ever since the first day of the tire's service, it had been compelled to carry an overweight of from 100 to 200 pounds, and had probably been insufficiently inflated most of the time.

The fact that there was no overload or underinflation at the time the blow-out occurred proves nothing. To draw a tragic parallel, a man may die suddenly of some internal disease which unknown to him has been developing for a considerable time. In the same way a tire will eventually succumb to a long sustained strain. In the greater number of cases it is only after a long period of heavy work that signs of wear begin to appear.

It should be remembered that tires are not made of granite or concrete but of rubber and should be treated accordingly.

The questions of insufficient inflation and tire overloading are thoroughly discussed in the "Book of Bibendum," issued free to motorists by the Michelin Tire company of Milltown, N. J.

SCHOLARSHIP AIDED.

Yale Football Association Offers Free Tickets to Best Students.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 23.—The offer of the Yale Football association to promote scholarship in the public schools of New Haven was accepted yesterday by the New Haven board of education.

The football authorities will give 6,000 tickets of admission for the Yale games this fall to the leading scholars of the grammar and high school grades of the city, 1,000 tickets being given to each of the six games, exclusive of the Wesleyan mid-week game and the Princeton match, which closes the home season.

Scrimmaging was the order yesterday for the first time this season for the Yale football squad. The first and second elevens battled through fifteen minutes of gruelling work, the regulars scoring once and retiring the scrubs without a fall. Anderson, the former Wisconsin back, tore back twenty yards, but the second team failed to gain, and again the regulars began rushing. Capt. Howe tried a field goal from the 40-yard line, narrowly missing it. The scrubs failed to gain, and Anderson was called to the varsity replacing Church. The varsity backs could not be checked, and Reilley skirted right end for a touchdown.

Marvelous New Treatment Which Conquers All Diseases.

His Patients Verify His Claims.

Dr. Mitchell has built up the immense practice he now enjoys through the cures he has effected and giving entire satisfaction. It is results that count—not promises. The large percentage of his patronage comes unsolicited from cured patients, who have recommended Dr. Mitchell to their friends, and others; that is the reason he is a busy man. It has required years of study and experience to establish such a reputation as Dr. Mitchell's, curing the sick and the cripple, the deaf and the blind. He believes in fair dealings and honest methods, which, together with his skill and ability, are the only qualifications and conditions that really promise a cure. Read the testimonials proving beyond a doubt that Dr. Mitchell's Electro Magnetic treatment is revolutionizing the art of healing the sick and despondent.

Mrs. C. Dempster, 2106 West Third street, Duluth, says: "I deem it a duty I owe to Dr. Mitchell's treatment, as well as suffering women. I was in very bad health, suffering from stomach nervousness, and, in fact, was almost in despair of ever getting well. I am now in splendid health. My son has started treatments for nervousness and bowel trouble and is improving every day. I have been in Dr. Mitchell's office when it was crowded and have talked with many of his patients and they are all convalescing."

Mr. Albert Blake of Cloquet, Minn., was stricken with fever, results of poor blood and weak nerves; came to Dr. Mitchell as a last resort hardly able to walk with a cane and one of his limbs drawn up one inch and a half. Shortly after a course of Dr. Mitchell's treatment he gained fifteen pounds and the limb restored to normal.

Mr. George Bisonett, Jacobson, Minn., sciatic rheumatism for twenty years, cured by Dr. Mitchell.

Mr. John Anderson, Richfield, Idaho, cured of kidney and stomach trouble; had doctored three years with medicine then came to Dr. Mitchell and was restored to health.

An old soldier crippled with rheumatism, had not walked for ten years, had the use of his limbs restored by Dr. Mitchell. His address can be had at 300 Columbia building.

Mrs. Geo. Smith, 430 Twentieth avenue west, writes: "For six years I doctored with the old methods of treatment. I was a nervous wreck, had headache, stomach and kidney troubles. I could not sleep nor rest at any time. I had tried several physicians and underwent an operation, but got no relief. When I went to Dr. Mitchell my weight was 235 pounds. After taking a course of treatment my weight is 174 pounds and I am enjoying good health and recommend Dr. Mitchell's treatment to any suffering from disease. I have seen and talked with many of his patients and they are all enthusiastic. I will be glad to substantiate this statement."

Remember, Dr. Mitchell has moved to larger quarters, 300, 300½ and 301 Columbia building. His success has made great demand for his treatment.

200 DULUTHIANS MAKE NEIGHBORLY CALL ON TWO HARBORS AND ENJOY A "BULLY" FAIR

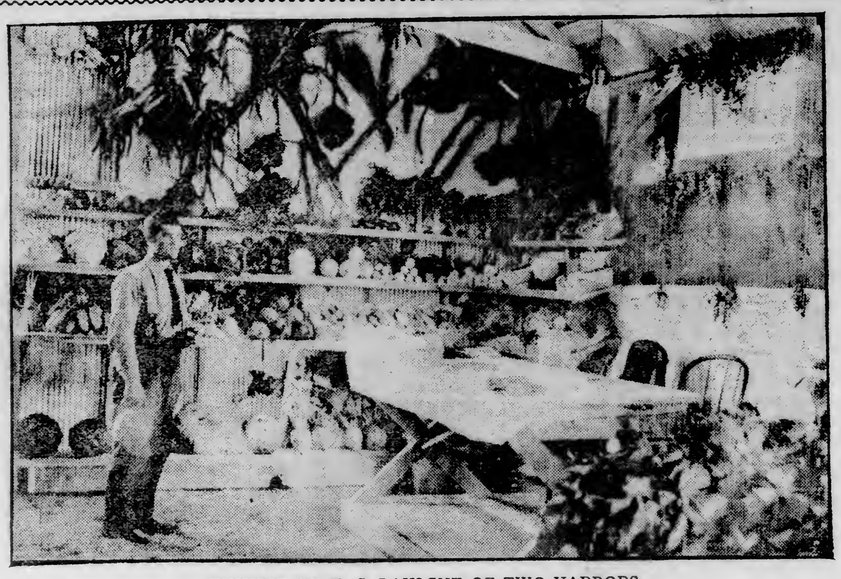

EXHIBIT OF N. G. LAVIGNE OF TWO HARBORS.

Yesterday was truly "Duluth day" at the Lake county fair which is being held at Two Harbors.

Between 150 and 200 Duluthians, many women being in the party, made the trip to the fair in the special train yesterday afternoon, while a number of others went in automobiles. They returned last evening.

They were most delightfully surprised by what they saw, for the exhibition in all its branches was one of the best which has ever been collected in this section of the state. They looked for something good, but the fair was complete in every particular and surpassed the expectations of even the most sanguine visitor. Those who are familiar with exhibitions of that nature declared that at no fair in Northern Minnesota have they seen a better display. The agricultural products were a joy to the beholders, while the live stock and poultry aroused the enthusiasm of fanciers There were also manufactured articles and some fine domestic science samples. In the latter classification comes a loaf of light, white flaky bread, which was made from wheat raised in Lake county on the farm of Thomas Owens. This is said to be the first loaf of bread made from wheat grown in Lake county, and it was but one of the many things showing the possibilities of the country tributary to Two Harbors.

Warm Reception.

The Duluthians were delighted with the reception which was accorded them. They were met at the depot by a large delegation of representative Lake county and Two Harbors residents, accompanied by a band and escorted to the fair grounds. There they were shown every attention. The local people were gratified at the large number of visitors from the Zenith City and expressed their appreciation in the warmest terms.

"The Duluthians certainly turned out in numbers," said John Dwan, one of the directors of the fair and a leading citizen of Two Harbors. "We more than appreciate it. It is an indication of their faith in Lake county and as well as their belief in the future of their own county and of the cordial relations existing between the two cities whose interests are so closely allied. Modesty allows me to say only that our fair this year is the largest which we have ever had. But we are already planning for that of next year and we expect to make it bigger and better in every way. The exhibits will be more extensive and the scope of the fair will be extended. We have two new fireproof buildings and more will be added along with other attractions which go to make fairs a success.

Lighting Talks

NUMBER 67 DULUTH, SEPTEMBER 23, 1911

No Discrimination

is made by the Duluth-Edison Electric Company against any customer or any class of customers. Every customer is treated alike—fairly and squarely, and courteously.

Our rates are the same to every customer taking the same class of service, whether it be electric light in the home, store, factory, or shop, electric power for commercial motors, or current for electric washing, ironing, cleaning, cooking and heating.

Each customer is expected to pay only for the amount of current he uses, by exact meter measurement—the only right way. It requires a large staff of helpers to maintain adequate and satisfactory service to more than 13,000 customers, to look after their requirements ceaselessly day and night, to read the meters, record their readings, and see that each customer is billed exactly right.

All this requires an immense amount of careful, painstaking work; and, just as in every undertaking largely dependent on the human element for its execution, occasional mistakes inevitably happen. But when a mistake is brought to our attention it is corrected promptly and courteously—and all possible steps are taken to prevent its recurrence.

We aim not to make mistakes. When a mistake of any kind is made, we want to know it. We welcome every just complaint. No customer coming to us even with an imaginary grievance was ever ordered out of the office, or told to take his trouble to somebody else, or treated with anything but the most careful and courteous consideration.

These things cannot be said of every public utility; and they are by no means unimportant. We mention them simply because they deserve their proper share of consideration in any discussion of the advisability of taking the City lighting away from this company, which has served Duluth long and well and offers to continue that service at the lowest price in the country, and of having such lighting done by a municipal electric plant which cannot possibly do it so cheaply and which would burden the City with an enormous debt and make YOUR TAXES go higher all the time.

Absolute fairness and undiscriminating courtesy in business are not matters of sentiment but of good business policy. This fact, unfortunately, has not yet been learned by some public utilities

We maintain that every customer for electricity in Duluth, including the City itself, receives better treatment and a better bargain, at a lower price, than would be possible with a municipal plant.

Think on these things, and read the next Lighting Talk in next Tuesday's Herald.

TAFT ADMITS MISTAKES; PLEADS GOOD INTENTIONS

Has Heart-to-Heart Talk With Illinois Republicans.

Says His Ambition Was for Bench, Not for Presidency.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 23.—President Taft had a heart-to-heart talk here yesterday with the leaders of the different Republican factions in Illinois; defined his status as to progressiveness; pleaded guilty to being a poor politician; acknowledged again that his ambition had lain in the decision of the office of chief justice rather than in the presidency; admitted that he undoubtedly had made many mistakes, but asserted that as president he had tried to do what he thought was right. What the future held for him, he did not know, he said, but stated he would go ahead, doing the best he could.

Mr. Taft declared he was not allied with the extremists of his party, either conservatives or progressives, but had tried to take a middle ground between the two.

"But we middle-of-the-road people believe we are the real progressives," said the president, "because you do not make progress in great strides, you make it step by step."

In Serious Mood.

The president was in a serious mood. He declared that while it might not be for a time, the people in the end would distinguish "between fact and fustian" and would recognize the difference between substance and platform declarations written for campaign purposes only.

The speech made by the president was the most significant and interesting of his trip thus far. He still was downcast by the defeat of the reciprocity agreement in Canada, but his only reference to that subject had come earlier in the day when he addressed the workingmen in a local manufacturing establishment where farming implements are made.

"I was sorry to hear that in Canada they do not care to have closer commercial relations with us," he said. "If reciprocity had been adopted, we could have gotten our agricultural implements into Canada at a substantial decrease. But I guess we can get along."

Spoke at Luncheon.

The president's political speech followed a luncheon given in his honor by the Republican state central committee attended by Republican leaders from all over the state, including Senator Shelby M. Cullom and Lieutenant Governor Oglesby. Governor Deneen was unable to be present because of the injury to his leg. The so-called Deneen, Yates and Independent factions were represented at the gathering at the Country club, including one member of the Lorimer faction.

The leaders present vied with each other in pledging their support to President Taft, and predicted, amid enthusiastic applause, that he not only would be renominated but re-elected. Charles H. Williamson of Quincy, a prominent member of the state central committee, said he had taken a poll on a train a few days ago en route from Keokuk to Quincy, and that of 62 voters interviewed, 58 had declared for Taft, 3 for Col. Roosevelt and 1 for La Follette.

Taft "Poor Politician."

Mr. Taft pleaded guilty to the indictment that he knew nothing of politics and was a poor politician.

"But the truth is," he continued, "that my politics was limited to a very early stage of my career. Three or four years after I came to the bar I was pretty active, so I know something of ward politics. Since that time my fate has been such as to carry me out of politics on to the bench, or 7,000 miles away from any American politics.

"I am not giving you to understand that I ran away from the nomination for the presidency, but the fact is that it was not in the line which I had marked out; but being nominated and getting into the fight, I did the best I could, and being elected, I took up the discharge of the presidency with certain tendencies, perhaps I ought to call them, that I had gathered from judicial experience.

"Of course, I made a great many mistakes. I shall continue during this term to make them. They are hardly to be avoided. But there are certain things, certain rules that are rather easy to follow. One is, that when you have made a promise, it is your obligation to keep it.

About the Vetoes.

"Now something about the vetoes. I considered with reference to those bills that I was as much under an obligation to veo every one of them, as if I had said when I was on the platform running for the presidency, that I would veto just those bills, for the reason that the whole Republican party had taken the position that it was necessary to maintain the industries of this country by protection sufficient to give them a living method of competing with foreign manufacturers, and the whole party had also said, if you could trust the resolutions of the conventions, even in Iowa, and Kansas, and Wisconsin, that they approved finding out the facts by a tariff board before we passed legislation that might take down our industries.

"I would have vetoed those bills under any conditions, even if it would have cost my life. I say that with all the earnestness possible, because what I did was the result of a conviction as deep-seated as any principle I ever had.

"Wrote Heart Into It."

"So far as the veto of the Arizona bill is concerned, I just vetoed that because I could not do anything else. I wrote my heart into that veto.

"My friends, I have tried to follow what I thought to be right in the administration of my office. There has been a division in the party and I have been charged with not being progressive, and therefore to be condemned. What one does, this man thinks is progressive, another man thinks is retrograde. There are, however, two great schools, one which believes that the present is not perfect, perhaps, but that changes from it would be dangerous. These are strictly conservative and perhaps are known as the reactionary. Then there is another class at the other end which is extreme in its view that the whole present condition is wrong and there must be radical changes if we can live at all.

"Now I think—perhaps I am wrang—but I think I am going along in the middle of the road between those; at least it is what I am trying to do, and I believe legislation has been along that line.

Some Things Accomplished.

"We have brought the railroads under a condition of regulation that has satisfied them that the country is bounds to have their business discharged according to law, and under such supervision as to insure that it will be according to law, and I have heard no complaint that the present regulations do not secure that result.

"With respect to the trusts, we are in a transition period in this sense: that the supreme court has decided what the law is, and now business has got to square itself with that law.

"We might as well make up our minds to that, gentlemen. We can protest as much as we will as to what the law ought to be, but the supreme court has said what the law is, and I learned that when they have to do so they can adjust their affairs without endangering the progress to which they thought smoother methods indispensable.

"With respect to much of what has been discussed as to progressiveness, the federal government has nothing to do. This is a matter for state governments to settle, and states are making different experiments and I presume the Conservative states will wait to see how the experiments work out.

Saw Duty in Action.

But occasionally there crops out something extreme in the form of a judicial recall in a constitution tendered to the federal government for approval. Under the conditions, when a proposition is made that seems to me to destroy all possibility of good government in the manitenance of an untrammeled judiciary, it is the function of the executive, when his judgment is invoked under the Constitution, to say that he disapproves that feature, and that so far as he is concerned, he will allow no state to come into the Union with any such radical heresy expressed in its constitution and with the sancation of the federal government upon it.

"What the future is, I know not. I only know this—that I am going ahead, doing the best I can, and I am going through the country on this trip and try to explain some of the issues which have arisen and make them clear to the people, because I believe that the time has come for sober, second thought. I have confidence that the American people can always be trusted, not only to exercise their sober, second thought, but also a discriminating sense as to what is fact and what is fustian, after a time. It won't happen at once, and sometimes we have to wait for it until after we die, and that is not quite so satisfactory; but in any event we middle-of-the-road people who are not extremists believe we are the real progressives, because you do not make progress by great strides, you make progress step by step.

"We can depend upon the people to recognize substance in progress rather than that which is represented by proposed legislation and platform declarations that are for the purpose, not of being put into force and into law to accomplish real reform, but are made for the purpose of campaign uses only."

WANTS FEDERAL GUARD ON MEXICAN BORDER.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 23.—That federal protection of the Mexican border is urgent and the only way to stop depredations by Mexicans along the Rio Grande is to police the border, will be impressed upon President Taft by Governor Colquitt at Hutchinson, Kan., where Governor Colquitt will meet the president.

Efforts of the state to stop lawlessness on the border have not been successful, Governor Colquitt believes, and he will ask that President Taft either recommend policing of the border by state rangers, or regular troops.

The five-passenger Ford automobile of V. L. Booth, which was stolen from his garage at 707 East Third street some time Thursday night, was recovered yesterday afternoon at Twenty-third avenue west and Michigan street. It had evidently been abandoned because of a shortage of gasoline, the tank having contained but a gallon when it was put away for the night. It is believed that the machine was taken by joyriders. They gained entrance to the garage by prying open the door. The car was practically uninjured. It was found by Lieut. Drennan of the West end police force.

King was the lowest bidder on the concrete culvert at Twelfth avenue west. His figure was $1,693.75. J. W. Preston was low with $3,468.75 for graveling and guttering Fourth alley between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth avenues west. The latter will also land the contract for the curbs and gutters on Twenty-first avenue west between Third and Fourth streets, his bid being $587.00. ## PULP AND PAPER CLAUSE STANDS

Reciprocity Act May Mean Free Entry From European Countries.

Washington, Sept. 23.—John Norris, chairman of the committee on paper of the American Newspaper Publishers association, has issued a statement showing that the defeat in Canada of the reciprocity agreement has expanded the free zone for pulps and paper so as to include all of the favored nations. His statement follows:

"Canada's rejection of reciprocity raises a question with respect to the favored nation treaties that is unique. Unlike the items contained in section 1 of the reciprocity bill, the paper and pulp clause, which was section 2, abolished the duty on Canadian pulps and papers subject only to a condition precedent that the pulps and paper must be made from unrestricted woods.

"Section 1 could not get into effect until Canada took reciprocal action, but section 2 became effective July 26, when the president signed the reciprocity bill. Canada's vote of rejection will make section 1 ineffective, but it will not impair the pulp and paper section, which cannot be nullified except by a repealing act of the American congress, and such repeal is highly improbable.

"The importers of pulps and paper from Germany, Norway and Sweden claim that under the favored nation treaty the products of these countries are entitled to the treatment that Canada obtains when the pulps and paper are made from unrestricted woods, and that the tariff on those articles is automatically abolished under like conditions. Treasury department officials say no similar case has ever arisen in this country."

MAIL CARRIER ADMITS HE ROBBED THE MAILS.

Middletown, Ohio, Sept. 23.—W. M. Marshall, assistant mail carrier, who was missing immediately after the mail which was being sent from Jackson Ky., to Hazard, Ky. Tuesday night, was robbed, was arrested here last night and confessed. Marshall was recognized by a man named Jackson, who formerly lived at Jackson, Ky.

GEN. REYES NOT AFTER PRESIDENCY?

City of Mexico, Sept. 23.—Gen. Bernardo Reyes has practically withdrew as a candidate for president. In a published interview he says he believes the elections will be held Oct. 1, that the country will not be at peace and thus the elections will be illegal, and urged his followers to desist from voting.

SELL GRAIN BY WEIGHT, NOT BUSHEL, IN OHIO.

Lima, Ohio, Sept. 23.—Grain will be purchased by weight rather than by he bushel by the grain dealers of this section of Ohio after Jan. 1, 1912, it was unanimously decided here at a meeting of the Northwestern Grain Dealers' association, composed of dealers of Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. That the United States and England alone of the twenty-four principal commercial countries adhere to the bushel standard in grain transactions, was pointed out by speakers.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY AT UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

New Dean of Law School Discourses Prospects of Gopher Institution.

Says Valuable Additions Will Be Made to the Faculty.

WILLIAM R. VANCE.

"I did not come to Minnesota because of any increase in salary, but for the reason that I believe there is the biggest opening, the biggest and broadest field of opportunity at the University of Minnesota of any college in the country."

This statement was made today by W. R. Vance, the professor of the Yale law school, who is at the present time directing the registration in the Minnesota college of law, and who on the first of next September will become the new dean of the university law department.

Mr. Vance is a Kentuckian and a graduate of Washington and Jefferson college. He was the dean of the George Washington college law department and is at the present time professor in the Yale law school. He has not immediately taken up his permanent duties at Minnesota for the reason that he could not get away from Yale the present year.

"There is a big field at the University," said Mr. Vance. "At the present time there is not the equipment to put the university law school on the same plans as some of the biggest law schools of the country but that will come with time, for there is the field and only work and effort and increased funds are necessary.

"We have already secured Prof. Thurston of the University of Illinois for the law faculty, one of the ablest instructors in the country. We hope to add others in the future, making the law school of Minnesota rank right up with the best schools in the country."

Mr. Vance was the guest of honor at an informal luncheon at the Commercial club this noon, at which were gathered some of the leading attorneys of Duluth. This evening he will be the guest and principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Eleventh Judicial District Bar association, which will also be held at the Commercial club.

The membership of the association is made up of the commissioned officers of the National guard and the annual meetings give opportunity for exchange of ideas and for the laying of plans for the improvement of the service. Legislative matters are discussed at the meetings each year before the session of the legislature, but this is an "off year" and legislative needs will give way to other matters on the program.

METHODS OF THE CONSERVATIVES

There's a very disappointed, very peevish Canadian visitor in Duluth today. He sneaked away from his Canadian home to remain away until the first flush of the Conservative victory is over, and he threatened the reporter with dire disaster if his name was used. Not wishing to encounter the disaster, the reporter complies, but the insight given into the Canadian election is interesting.

"I have been through campaigns for forty years, and it was the worst I ever saw," said the Canadian visitor. "The Conservatives worked patriotism and the annexation scare for the English, the conscription scare for the French and everything they could think of. They had a special argument for each nationality, for Catholic, Protestant and Jew.

"They went down into the French districts in Quebec and took a census, quietly letting it be known that the names were to be used for conscription purposes. We've got two old ships that couldn't blow over a wooden barn, yet they harped on the Canadian navy.

"They took the anti-reciprocity arguments that were used on this side and turned them against us. They imported writers from this side to write reciprocity articles showing how the United States would be benefited. They had money in barrels and they knocked the head out of every barrel.

"I'm sore clear through and I'm going to keep in hiding for a while. Maybe I'll feel better in about a week."

RALLY DAY.

FRANK DAY TALKS SOME

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Dispatch today says: Frank A. Day, the Warwick of countless Democratic campaigns in Minnesota, the strength in years gone by of the Democratic party, always the party, declared today for non-partisan politics "in the interest of right principles of government," and in the same breath put his O. K. on Ole Sageng, late Populist; E. T. Young, Republican, and John Lind, Democrat, as candidates worthy the support of the the voters of all the parties. At the same time, however, he said he believes the Democrats will deliver the country from the trusts.

Sageng "Kernel of Wheat."

"I am sorry," he said, "that the Progressive Republicans took my candidate for senator, Ole Sageng, away from me. But whether Ole runs on the Democratic, Republican or Populist ticket he should be supported by Democrats and Republicans. He would be a unique figure in the United States senate, a kernel of wheat amid a bunch of chaff. Ole Sageng would take the state by storm, whether he ran for the senate or for congressman-at-large.

"A. C. Welss, manager of The Duluth Herald, is excellent gubernatorial timber. He is a German, and on a progressive platform would make an excellent campaign.

Congressman-at-Large.

"I would like to see such a man as E. T. Young get into the race for congressman-at-large or United States senator. His fight in the rate cases and his record as attorney general would make him an ideal candidate. There are also Charlie Halverson, formerly of the board of control, and Thomas J. Knox of Jackson county, both good Progressives and excellent timber for congressman-at-large.

SIMPSON'S MEN BACK AT CAPITAL

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—After spending nearly two months in Cass Lake, where he has been trying cases in which the state is interested before the Cass Lake land office, C. W. Hilton, assistant attorney general, returned to the capitol this morning for a day or two at his desk. More than 100 cases were on the docket for trial and thirty-six of them have been heard. Mr. Hilton will return Monday for a week and will then come back to remain at the capitol till Oct. 20.

Lyndon A. Smith, who is to succeed George T. Simpson as attorney general when the latter quits on Jan. 1, also returned to his desk today after spending about three weeks at Little Falls, where the grand jury has been investigating the failures of the state banks at Royalton and Bowlus. The grand jury will not report until next Thursday.

SCHEDULES BUT HALF FINISHED

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—After two years of ceaseless work, the committee of experts appointed by the railroads to draft a uniform classification schedule for use throughout all the United States is only half through with its work and will do well if it finishes its task within the next two years, according to Charles Elmquist, a member of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission, who returned from Chicago this morning. Mr. Elmquist attended the committee on uniform classification from the National Association of Railroad commissioners.

Three different schedules of classifications are used in this country now, Mr. Elmquist said. In the East there are six schedules, under one of which each article carried by the railroads is moved. In the South there are fourteen schedules and in the West eleven. The vice presidents of twenty-one roads met in Chicago two years ago, and appointed a committee of three divisions to draft a uniform classification.

"These nine men have worked constantly since then," Mr. Elmquist continued, "going from city to city, meeting manufacturers and shippers, and although the committee has worked hard, it is only about half through. It is the thought of the railroad commissioners that as the committee agrees upon certain schedules in classifications, they will be published in tariffs from time to time. Thus the shipping public will be getting substantial relief as the work advances."

ALLEGED "AFFINITY" SAYS SHE WAS ONLY A LANDLADY

Mrs. Nellie Chapman Denies Allegations of Mrs. Frank J. Himes.

First Met Himes When Latter Sold Her Husband's Monument.

Mrs. Nellie Chapman, defendant in the $10,000 suit brought against her by Mrs. Frank J. Himes for alleged alienation of the affections of Mr. Himes, denies all the statements that have been made by the plaintiff or her witnesses. She brands everything as false and accuses her neighbors of jealousy and spite. The accusations made against her in the court room, she says are untrue.

She told the whole story today to a Herald reporter, of her meeting with Himes shortly after the death of her husband, who was killed in January, 1909, at the ore docks. He was an engineer on the Missabe railroad. Himes came to her as a monument agent and arranged for the monument after the burial of her husband. She has four children, the oldest 10 and the youngest a boy three months after the death of her husband. All Mrs. Chapman has to live on is $40 month and the rent of two houses that were letf her, she says. The income she receives is from the Samaritan Order, the New York Life Insurance company and the B. of L. E., a trainmen's organization.

Mrs. Chapman emphatically denies that she ever bought Himes any clothes or gave him any of her late husband's wardrobe. She can also prove, she says, that Mr. Himes gave her $20 a month for room and board. In speaking of Mrs. Himes' statement that the defendant enticed Himes away during her absence, Mrs. Chapman says that Mrs. Himes refused to go West with her husband and went South to live with her mother. When Mrs. Himes came back she started this trouble, says Mrs. Chapman, just because Mr. Himes was boarding with her in West Duluth. Mrs. Chapman blames a neighbor for the entire trouble and is merely the result of an argument that this neighbor had with Mr. Himes while he was boarding with Mrs. Chapman. The neighbor, immediately on the return of Mrs. Himes from her mother's home in Rochester, went to her and told her a number of things about her husband, says Mrs. Chapman, which the defendant claims are all false. This neighbor was the cause of the whole trial, Mrs. Chapman declares.

Mrs. Chapman denies the statement that Mr. Himes owes her for board. She says she does not care for him now and never did.

YEGGS GET $60 BLOWING SAFE

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Word was received here today that yeggmen successfully blew the safe in the postoffice at Calio, Cavalier county, yesterday with nitro glycerine.

They gained entrance to the Farmers' Mercantile company store, in which the postoffice is located, by breaking a window. Drilling a hole near the knob of the safe, the nitro glycerine was poured in and the explosion was so forceful that it drove one corner of the strong box partially through the floor and also otherwise wrecked the building.

For their work the yeggmen secured but $60.

Men and Religion.

A club will be organized in the Cumming Avenue M. E. church for men interested in the Men and Religion movement. This is the result of a sermon delivered last Sunday by Rev. R. A. Barnes, the pastor, who spoke on "More Men in Religion and More Religion in Men." Many of the men of the church are interested in the club and will become members. The Men and Religion Movement is gaining strength in Superior and active work will start there soon.

Funds for Parks.

In its estimate of the money needed for the work next year, the park board states that a levy of $14,000 will be necessary. The estimate was filed yesterday with City Comptroller Erichsen. Of this amount, $5,100 is to be used for Billings park, a similar amount for parks on the streets, for maintenance and construction, and $300 for Union square in Central Park and for East end parks, and $800 for Nemadji park.

Error in Tax Report.

A clerical error is supposed to be the cause of a shortage of $1,175.97, which was discovered yesterday by City Comptroller Erichsen, in the 1910 tax report. A thorough investigation is to be made with the view of finding the error, but in the meantime it may be charged to the general fund.

One Foot--30,000 Tons

Go back in memory about eighteen years. What did the Mesaba iron range promise nerve and capital at that time?

The KAMLOOPS copper range today is just as the Mesaba range was then. Hundreds of test pits, shafts and tunnels are here, demonstrating beyond all question the presence of tremendous bodies of copper ore.

In the midst of this virgin country are the mines of the Kamloops Copper Co., which, in the course of their development, have given up more than $300,000 of their treasure.

One of these mines, the Iron Mask, is 600 feet deep and has more than 8,000 feet of development work in the ore. THREE HUNDRED MEN COULD BE PUT TO WORK IN THIS MINE IF THE COMPANY HAD SUFFICIENT SURFACE EQUIPMENT TO CARE FOR THE PRODUCT.

One engineer says this mine contains 30,000 tons of ore for each foot of depth. Six hundred times thirty thousand tons makes EIGHTEEN MILLION TONS.

Our smelter and other proposed improvements will be the key to the copper situation of the entire KAMLOOPS country. These improvements will not only enable us to save a quarter of a million dollars each year on our own ores, mined even now at a profit, but will enable us to handle the ores of many small mines which are today unable to ship to the other smelters.

The KAMLOOPS range is destined to influence copper production just as the Mesaba range has influenced the production of iron, and those who co-operate with us now will do so ON THE ONLY GROUND FLOOR PLAN OUR COMPANY HAS EVER KNOWN.

Your careful investigation of our claims is earnestly solicited, and the following character-men, comprising our finance committee and board of directors, will cheerfully assist you:

This Flanders "20" Is the Car That Laid Out the Glidden Route

It Is the Lightest and Lowest Priced Car That Ever Performed the Feat—and It Did It Better—Made Better Time and Finished in Better Condition.

WHEN MR. S. M. BUTLER, Chairman of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, first saw the Flanders "20" with which driver "Bill" Soules had been instructed to report at A. A. A. Headquarters in New York to lay out the route for the Glidden Tour to Jacksonville, Florida, he exclaimed:

"THERE MUST BE SOME MISTAKE! Surely you do not expect this little car to carry four passengers and cover the route in the time at our disposal? You see there are only 36 days between now and the date the tour must start, and maps, booklets and other data must be gotten out. We can't allow more than sixteen days of that for the pathfinding."

"WHY, WHAT DID YOU EXPECT, MR. BUTLER?" asked Driver Soules, who feared he had misunderstood his instructions—and Soules never does that.

"WHY I EXPECTED an E-M-F '30'—the old war horse that has laid out so many routes. I surely did not expect a smaller car and I am surprised that W. E. Flanders, Manager of the Studebaker automobile business would risk his and their reputation with the 2,500 dealers of the Studebaker Corporation in such an important event on so light a car. What will a 20 horse-power car do on the slippery clay roads of North Carolina and the sand trails of Florida? Why—!"

"WHAT WILL SHE DO?" asked Soules—now thoroughly on his mettle—"I'll tell you what she'll do, Mr. Butler: She'll make the $5,000 cars that have laid out former Glidden Tours look like thirty cents—plugged.

"WHAT WILL SHE DO?—you say you can only allow sixteen days; that's an average of eighty-five miles per day. We—this little three speed car and me—will take your official party over that route on the tour schedule—that's ten days—and we will give them as comfortable a ride as they ever had—and we won't be late for supper once."

"YOU'RE ALL RIGHT, SOULES," exclaimed the Chairman enthusiastically now. "You have the right spirit and it is very evident you believe in your Flanders '20.' Go to it—and if you do the trick, hanged if I won't buy one—I begin to like the looks of her. She certainly is a trim looking little rig."

DRIVER SOULES was pleased—but he took issue with the Chairman on one point. She isn't so 'little,' Mr. Chairman—she has 102 inch wheel base; will carry five just as easily as four, and we'll show you there's the biggest 20 horse-power under that bonnet you ever saw in a car."

WELL, TO MAKE A LONG STORY SHORT, she did it and she did it magnificently. Each succeeding day when Pathfinder Westgard wired the head office the surprise of Chairman Butler and his associates became greater.

ON SEPTEMBER 11th Mr. Bruce, Manager of the A. A. A. Touring Bureau wrote in part as follows: "We have today received a telegram. from Mr. A. J. Westgard, our special representative, saying the Flanders car made the trip yesterday from Gettysburg to Staunton, a distance of 179 miles—a splendid performance considering that the road detail is being taken all the way for map making * * * will not you arrange to have the Flanders '20' continue after finishing the Glidden route, and come up from Jacksonville thru Savannah to Charlotte, connecting North and South by the Shenandoah Valley, Charlotte, Columbus, Augusta and Savannah." We wired, "Glad to do it, or to continue the route to Panama or the Pacific Coast—it's all the same to the sturdy Flanders car."

NOW THIS IS ONLY ONE of several great feats the new three speed Flanders "20" has performed during these past few weeks. We set out to show that in this three speed, fore-door model we have a car that has not a superior in the world—and not an equal outside of our own E-M-F "30," the staying qualities, speed and hill climbing ability of which is so well known that it no longer needs demonstrating.

JUST LISTEN TO THIS: Flanders "20" has won every event she has entered—has more reliability runs, more hill climbs to her credit than any other car this season. Not a day passes but she adds one or two more victories to her credit—one or two more trophies to her collection.

Flanders "20" Wins

1. THREE PERFECT ROAD SCORES IN IOWA'S LITTLE GLIDDEN. Every Flanders "20" entered drove the long hard run without a single penalty.

2. FIRST AND SECOND PRIZES IN THE GREAT TWIN CITY TO HELENA, MONTANA, RELIABILITY RUN. 1,380 miles over the trackless prairie. The Flanders forded streams, swung through sage brush "faster than a coyote" as they say out in Montana. When the scores were all in and the big $4,000 cars showed the best they could do, the judges came to the Flanders "20" and stopped. The proof was there. So Flanders "20" came home again rejoicing, first and second prizes.

3. HERE'S THE FLANDERS "20" AT SPEED ON THE HILLS: Clipped 47 seconds off a two years' old record of 3 minutes and 5 seconds at the National Dead Horse Hill Climb at Worcester, Mass. Now the record is 1:18. Only one "30" horsepower car in the entire field drove as fast. Flanders "20" distanced everything in her class, and almost everything out of it and was the lowest priced car in the contest. Just a stock car, but she simply had the speed and power, and the second car in the Flanders' event was over half a minute behind.

4. AND YET AGAIN! Flanders "20" wins the 800-mile St. Louis to Kansas City Reliability Run. Score, 998. Two points penalty only for loose nut on fender. Four days of heavy driving in sand and mud and Flanders "20" worked perfectly throughout run. So she won again and once more defeated many cars of far greater size and price.

5. BUFFALO ENDURANCE RUN, THE STIFFEST RUN OF THE SEASON. Four days of mud in hilly Western New York, and every day calling for almost 200 miles drive. The Flanders "20" had a great chance to show her stamina and she did it, winning in her class. Only one other car out of all the entries did as well and the contesting cars ran in cost up to three times the price of the Flanders.

6. ALMOST BEST OF ALL. FLANDERS "20" WINS AT THE NEWPORT HILL CLIMB IN INDIANA. This wasn't a sanctioned meet; just a little meeting arranged by Indiana dealers throughout the state who knew how stiff a grade was in the Newport Hill and who wanted to find out how their cars really would climb. The dealers themselves drove When the astonishment died away all Indiana knew that the Flanders had again gone far out of her class and raced everything in the state that could get up the hill on any speed. Four of six events for the Flanders "20." A 90-horsepower Knox beat her 3 seconds in the free-for-all, but the Flanders "20" finished the day's play by cleaning up in the class for cars selling from $2,000 to $3,000.

7. ANOTHER RACE, this time in Des Moines, Iowa, gave Flanders "20" a chance to show her heels to the rest of them. Two specially built racing cars, a Ford and a Kissel car, both larger than the Flanders, and one of 50-horse-power, undertook to show the way in a five-mile race held by dealers. Well, they couldn't do better than second and third, for a Flanders "20" was taken out of stock the day before the race and they never caught her. First for the Flanders "20" on a half -mile track. Five miles in 6 minutes, 7 seconds.

8. TODAY THE FLANDERS "20" IS ON THE LAST STAGE OF A 1,300-MILE TRIP FROM SEATTLE, WASH, TO HAZELTON, BRITISH COLUMBIA. No automobile, no wagon even ever traversed those mountainous and tangled trails. A great prize is offered by the Hazelton authorities for the car which shall pioneer the highway one day to connect the two cities. The prize offered has been ready for two years with none willing to attempt the feat. Today the Flanders has forced her way through the dreaded path and is within easy touch of the end. The hardy drivers carry complete road making tools and in the dense forests and rocky wastes of the unknown sections of that country, hewed out their way. The car pulled through. Perhaps another page in this paper will tell you that the long journey is ended, but watch for it. The story of the Flanders "20" is a story of wonderful achievements.

WITHIN EIGHT WEEKS SHE HAS WON EIGHT important events—enumerated in the panel. In one she made three perfect road scores out of a possible three; in another, Minneapolis to Helena Reliability Run, she won first and second—all the prizes there were. And at Worcester, Mass., she won America's premier hill climbing event, chipping 47 seconds off the previous record and beating the time of several cars of four and five times her price.

IF YOU FOLLOWED THE NEWS you have doubtless been struck by the consistent performance of this car in all reliability events. To say that Flanders "20" is entered in a reliability event is to say Flanders "20" has won First—and most likely Second and Third also. Always first thru.

THAT'S WONDERFUL WHEN YOU CONSIDER that in these events, while entered only in her own class, her merit scores at the end make those of cars in the higher priced classes look cheap indeed.

TAKE THE TWIN CITY RUN—Minneapolis to Helena, Montana, over prairie trails and mountain passes, in which such cars as Packard, Stoddard-Dayton, Abbott-Detroit, Simplex, Maxwell, Cole, Krit, Hupmobile and other cars failed to finish with perfect scores, and two out of three Flanders "20's" did.

IS PRICE ANY INDICATION of the road ability, the staying qualities, the reliability and the capacity for standing hard knocks?—surely not in view of these splendid victories of this "20" horsepower $800 car.

NO, IT CERTAINLY IS NOT—we have never claimed that the E-M-F "30" was a better car than the three speed Flanders "20." The thirty is a little larger—ten inches longer wheel base, will go faster—say 55 miles per hour as against the 47 that any Flanders Touring car will go; but it won't—and no car made will—climb a hill better; it won't—and no car made will—stand rougher usage or perform so well month in month out with so little care or attention or expense.

FLANDERS "20" IS MADE OF SAME high grade steels—the best the science of metallurgy knows how to produce—by the same careful methods and in the largest plant in the world devoted to the making of one model. We make every part—"from pig iron and the raw steel bar to the finished car." And we guarantee every car for a year, giving the buyer a bond signed by General Manager Walter E. Flanders himself.

FLANDERS "20" IS YOUR CAR—it is the ideal car for the man who does not feel he can afford, or who does not care to put more than $1,000 into an automobile—whether it be the one car he and his family shall use for all purposes, or an auxiliary car for the rich man who wishes to save his big, expensive, more cumbersome touring car or limousine.

DELIVERIES—YES, THAT'S THE ONLY TROUBLE—we can't seem to catch up with the demand—can't promise you immediate delivery. August was the biggest month in our history. September will surpass it by 500 cars—shipping 125 Flanders "20" cars per day now and increasing our factory facilities just as fast as we can. Bought the original Ford plant last month and putting on 1,000 more men. This will increase our output 20 per cent. Trying our best to catch up—but people have come to appreciate this car and the demand still leads the supply.

ONLY WAY IS TO SEE YOUR LOCAL DEALER at once. Get your order in, pay a deposit, so the order will be sent to the factory and given its regular serial number—then you won't have to wait long. Every day's delay in placing the order makes two more days' delay in getting the car, for Flanders "20" is carrying everything before her, and the "tin cars" are losing ground fast. Flanders "20" has the call—but if you hurry you'll be "lucky."

ON THE IRON RANGES

FIRST TEST ON TUESDAY

Virginia Fourth Ward Special Election Means a Great Deal.

Will Show How Voters Stand on Immediate City Ownership.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alderman J. L. Kimball, who will be a candidate for reelection to his present position at the special recall election to be held next Tuesday, has issued a statement of his position upon municipal ownership. He says that he is as anxious as any other citizen of Virginia to secure water and light at the lowest possible rate and is thoroughly in favor of having the city own and operate a municipal light and water plant when a plant can be acquired or erected at a reasonable and fair cost and when the proceedings for such purpose have been carefully considered.

Mr. Kimball says in part: "I feel that the question is one that may be carefully studied and full information that the question is one that must be taken up in the right way. If proceedings are taken to condemn the present water plant in such a way that the matter would go into the courts and litigation result, it might delay the acquirement of the plant for several years or more at a heavy expense to the city, and a method must be secured whereby the plant can be secured at a fair and reasonable price. The city employed C. C. Baldwin of Duluth to give an opinion regarding the franchise, and his opinion indicates that the law is unsettled as to the power of the city to cancel the franchise of the light and water company, and we should give the matter careful thought so that the best method may be selected for the acquirement of a plant in a fair and reasonable manner."

To Start Sinking Fund.

It is said to be the plan of the city government to start a sinking fund with the tax levy to be made next month, beginning with probably $50,000 per annum and adding at least that much each year till 1918, when a sufficient sum will have been accumulated to enable the city to either purchase or build a water and light plant without bonding the city or burdening the taxpayers materially. Under the terms of the franchise of the water and light company, the city has an opportunity of purchasing the plant in 1913, but must give notice of intention to do so a year preceding or next April.

Those favoring municipal ownership in 1913 or before, if possible, have already taken steps through the initiative provision of the city charter to instruct the city council to either enact an ordinance providing for the appointment of a special water and light commission of five members to hold office for two years and to take steps to thoroughly investigate and secure municipal ownership as soon as practicable, or to call a special election this fall and submit the proposed ordinance to the voters of the city. The petition calling for the enactment of the proposed ordinance is said to have more than the required number of legal signatures necessary to call such election.

The first real test of voting strength between immediate municipal ownership people and those who take a position similar to that of Alderman Kimball will take place in the special election in the Fourth ward next Tuesday. Alderman Kimball is opposed by A. N. Thompson, whose platform calls for municipal ownership of the water and light plant as soon as conditions will permit.

MRS. NYE BECOMES PUBLIC CHARGE

Wife of Alice Man Recently Sent to the Asylum is Destitute.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Abraham. Nye and her four little children are in a destitute condition in their little log cabin, 15 by 30 feet, on the edge of the John Hafey farm near Alice. Township Recorder Calligan was appealed to and yesterday sent out a load of provisions to the place.

Only a couple of weeks ago Mrs. Nye gave birth to a baby while her husband was hiding in the woods to escape the officers who were in search of him, in connection with the burning of the home and barn of George Woods to ashes. Nye was thought to have committed the deed and after having given himself up was committed to Fergus Falls asylum.

The family is also bereft of the help and support of the oldest son, Gust, who is also in hiding from the police. He is wanted on a grand larceny charge, as a search warrant served by an officer a few days ago disclosed a small arsenal of supposably stolen guns and revolvers in his room and also a wanted suit of clothes.

ONCE SHOT MAN IN SALT LAKE

John Caic, to Be Deported From Hibbing, Admits Western Crime.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States Immigration Agent Daly of Duluth, left for that place this morning taking Rosy Gilletti, an Italian woman, arrested at the Laura location yesterday afternoon and John Gaic, an Austrian.

Caic will probably be deported to his native country after he has appeared before the United States commissioner at Duluth and the Gilletti woman will be sent to Italy.

Rosy Gilletti spent most of last night weeping and moaning in the woman's department at the village jail. She refused to be comforted and probably did not understand the real import of her arrest. She is wanted at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., by the government authorities at that place. It is said that she was brought to this country along with another Italian woman for immoral purposes.

Caic has been found out to be a worse desperado than was at first supposed, according to Chief of Police Wring he admitted yesterday to having shot a man in Salt Lake City before he came to Hibbing and to having shot a woman in the neck in the old country.

SOAPSTONE WALL IN ALMAR DRIFT

When It Is Penetrated It Is Expected the Ore Body Will Be Reached.

Tower, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Activity at the North American, Vermillion Steel & Iron, White Iron Lake, Lucky Boy and Almar shafts on the Vermilion range continues. The Lucky Boy shaft is down 160 feet and a drift is being run to the ore body, which has been shown up by diamond drills. A meeting is to be held in Duluth on Monday looking to the consolidation of the Vermillion Steel & Iron company and the extension of the Vermillion Steel & Iron company.

News of the most encouraging character comes from the Almar shaft, midway between here and Ely. The drift at the Almar has encountered a soapstone wall and it is expected that when this wall has been penetrated the ore body will be encountered. This is in line with the prediction made by Dr. Walter Harvey Weed, the eminent geological and mining engineer of New York city, who recently made a detailed report on the formation at the Almar property.

Congressman Clarence B. Miller and Former Senator H. R. Spencer made a trip over the range this week, visiting various properties, but spending a day and a half at the Almar. They returned to Duluth very enthusiastic over the prospects of the Almar. It is reported here that both gentlemen will be associated with the Almar Iron Mining company in the near future. It is also understood that J. T. Schussler of St. Paul, president of the largest tailoring company in the Northwest and who is known to Elks throughout the country, is to be elected a director of the company at the next meeting of the stockholders, which is to be held about Sept. 30. Other visitors from a distance to the Almar this week were Messrs. George A. Miller and Charles S. Smith, two lumbermen of Chicago. They were greatly pleased with their inspection and became shareholders in the company.

It is stated on good authority that the Almar company has arranged to place sufficient of its stock to provide for the development of its property into a shipping mine and if such is the case, the market value of the shares will show a rapid advance shortly. The stockholders of the company are all very loyal and are giving the directors their hearty support in the development of this valuable property. Men who are conversant with conditions on the Vermilion range are of the opinion that the Almar will be one of the first shippers, if not the first, among the properties being developed on the range.

ST. LOUIS RIVER OFFERING POWER

Electrical Expert Looks Over Proposed Plant in Locality of Aurora.

Aurora, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. W. Lindgren, general manager of the Northern Electric company, Duluth, this week visited the site of the proposed hydro-electric power plant on the St. Louis river south of Aurora. Mr. Lindgren was of the opinion that almost as much power could be developed here as at International Falls, and that a very valuable water power was being allowed to go to waste. He has had considerable experience with such plants and was of the opinion that sufficient power could be developed here to supply power for Aurora, Biwabik, McKinley, Gilbert, Eveleth, Virginia and all intervening locations.

ITASCA COUNTY LANDS POPULAR

Purchasers From Southern Minnesota and Iowa Are Getting Farms.

Grand Rapids Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—New settlers are coming into this section this fall at a greater rate than ever before. Every day there are land seekers looking for homes, and not a week passes but that some settler does not unload farm implements, stock and household goods here to locate on nearby land.

Fred Hilke, recently of Good Thunder, this state, purchased six forties in secton 36 of the town of Grand Rapids, anu this week moved onto the with his household goods, farm implements and stock which includes eight head of milch cows.

John L. Graham of Mankato this week purchased an eighty-acre farm in section 15 of the town of Trout Lake and he has returned home to pack up to remove here with his family.

Mrs. M. J. Lawler of St. Louis county has purchased a forty southeast of town, and with her two sons she will move at once to locate on the land.

Settlers From Others States.

J. Vanpatter who lives about twelve miles above Cohasset on the Mississippi river, some time ago brought in a great many settlers from South Dakota and Northern Iowa, and only last week he had a bunch of four or five young men from Mason City, Iowa, here who all bought land. This week Mr. Vanpatter was escorting Capt. Zoble, James Harathan Fred Harathan, George Hockok and G. rge Best, all of Ventura, Iowa, to whom he showed the country and what it can do. Mr. Best, it is said, has purchased the Roy Gary place above Cohasset, while the others all purchased land. Mr. Vanpatter is taking advantage of the crop failure of Northern Iowa and Southern South Dakato and Minnesota to emphasize the fact that there are never any crop failures here from drouth or other causes, and is reaping a good harvest of settlers who are disgusted with the uncertain sections.

CAVE-IN CLAIMS LIFE OF MINER

John Lipka, Recently Married, Fatally Injured in Virginia Mine.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—As the result of a small cave-in at the Franklin mine yesterday afternoon, John Lipka, aged 25, lost his life and Frank Bruska was badly bruised on his right leg. Both were drilling and some loose earth and rock fell from the side of an embankment, catching Lipka's right leg near the hip between two big rocks, which badly crushed the bone. He was taken to the Lenont hospital, where the leg was amputated just below the hip, but the shock of the injury and the loss of blood greatly weakened him and he passed away late yesterday afternoon.

Lipka was married only four months ago and leaves a young wife. The funeral will be held at the Polish Catholic church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Bruska was taken to his home on Oak street, where his bruises were attended to, and he will be able to return to work in a few days.

HIBBING WOMAN NOW PRESIDENT

Duluth Woman Is Vice President of Minnesota Librarians.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 23.—Miss Margaret Palmer of Hibbing, yesterday was elected as president of the Minnesota Librarians' association, which held its annual meeting during the last three days at St. Albans Beach, Lake Minnetonka. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Miss Francis Earhart of Duluth; secretary-treasurer, Miss Arabel Martin of Minneapolis; trustees, Miss Miriam Carey, St. Paul, and Mrs. Alice Lamb of Litchfield.

Resolutions were passed, following lengthy discussion, expressing the willingness of the state association to affiliate with the American Librarians' association, a national order. These will be sent to the latter organization and next year probably will find the Minnesota association a part of it.

At the opening of the session yesterday, Miss Mary A. Todd of the art department of the Minneapolis public library delivered an address on the use of pictures in libraries. A "Story Hour" symposium was conducted by Miss Louise Fernald of Rochester. The convention adjourned at noon.

DOES NOT NEED MONEY.

Aurora School District to Turn Back $15.000.

Aurora, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The clerk of School District No. 13 has written the county auditor asking him to omit $15,000 from the tax levy for the district, which, it is believed, establishes a precedent for the entire state.

This money was voted at the last annual meeting to be placed in the building for the new school building being built by the district. The board has found that there will be sufficient money on hand without this $15,000 and rather than having it lay idle until next year, when it might be used for other purposes, has decided to omit it from the levy. There is also sufficient money in the treasury for the erection of a two-room building at the Adriatic location.

HAULING POTATOES MILES.

Farmers Go Long Distance for Virginia Market.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Farmers are hauling potatoes to the city from points as far distant as twenty miles and are selling the tubers directly to the consumer at 75 cents per bushel. This price is considerably larger than the average price received in past years, but a large proportion of the farmers are constructing root cellars with the view of retaining most of their potato crops and selling when the prices soar as usual in the spring. Many thousands of bushels of the best potatoes in the world are raised in the vicinity of Virginia and with good roads and better marketing conditions it is possible that within the next few years this city will become one of the leading potato markets in the state.

PART OF EVELETH GROWING RAPIDLY

Central Division No. 2 Becomes Popular With Residents of City.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Fifth and Sixth wards, formerly known as Central Division No. 2, are growing very rapidly, and with the installation of water and sewers this fall that district will be one of the largest in the city. Cement walks were laid in the new wards this summer, and the improvement has enhanced the property in the outlying district considerably.

R. M. Dungan, manager of the Home Heating & Electric company, who recently purchased three lots on Cleveland street, in the new district, contemplates erecting a large two-story frame residence on his property this fall. Plans for the new structure are now in the hands of local contractors.

M. E. Nichols and others purchased lots in the new wards, and are confident that the value of the buildings and lots in the new district will increase considerably in the next few years.

The new $60,000 Adams school is proving of much convenience to the residents of the district who have children of school age, and many pupils have been enrolled in the school. A larger school will probably be erected in the district in a year or two, as the Adams school and Mesaba Mountain township hall are being taxed to their capacity.

CURSES OFFICER WHO SAVED LIFE

Hibbing Man's Ingratitude Costs Him Fine of $20.37.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Herman Hillian, a laborer, paid a fine of $20.37 in municipal court today for swearing at the policeman who probably saved his life.

About noon yesterday as the Missabe train was pulling out for Duluth Officer Dave Williams saw Hillian, considerably the worse for liquor, trying to board the train. The officer says the man would have been killed if he had not grabbed him and pulled him away from the moving train. He says that his act was rewarded with a volley of curses and when he told Hillian to desist the latter became more vile in his flow of epithets. The officer took him to jail and this morning Judge Brady after hearing the case imposed the fine stated giving Hillian at the same time some advice on the subject of gratitude.

WANT NEW ORDINANCE.

Virginia's Plumbing Ordinance Believed Out of Date.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Owing to it being the opinion of a number of local plumbers that the city plumbing ordinance is out of date and needs revision in several particulars, the plumbers' union has authorized its secretary to prepare a proposed ordinance to be submitted to the city council in the near future, remedying the supposed defects. The present ordinance was passed by the council several years ago, when the city was much smaller and when its growth was not so great, nor were there so many modern buildings being constructed as at present.

The plumbing inspector is handicapped by the present ordinance and arouses the ire of plumbers by insisting upon its enforcement; but, he has no other course than carrying out the provisions of the ordinance and hence the move to secure a number of amendments, or an entire new measure.

ONLY TWENTY VOTES AT HIBBING ELECTION.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—But twenty votes in all were cast in the special school district meeting last night. Every vote was in favor of the building of the two schools, for which purpose the meeting was held.

The two questions before the meeting for settlement were: Shall a school house costing $1,000 be erected two miles west of the powder plant near Wilpin? and the other, Shall a school be built near Browns, which is about twelve miles north of Hibbing on the Sturgeon Lake road?

Whether or not the schools will be built lies with the school board. The meeting last night was simply to obtain the permission of the voters to erect the buildings.

SAFE-BLOWERS AT KEEWATIN FOILED

Blow Door of the Postoffice Safe But Get Nothing.

Keewatin, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yeggmen were foiled in their effort to blow the safe in the postoffice in Shuirman Bros. store here early Thursday. The men gained an entrance in the rear of the store. They placed a heavy charge of nytro glycerin over the door of the safe and the explosion which followed damaged the safe to some extent and knocked off the combination. The attempt to blow open the safe was a failure, however, and a careful investigation of the premises disclosed that nothing is missing from either the store or postoffice but a gold watch.

Did Not Hear Explosion.

The attempt to wreck the safe and rob the postoffice and store was made about 2:15 in the morning. Max Shuirman, the postmaster, who is also one of the proprietors of the store, lives with his family in the rear of the store, but, although the noise of the explosion was heard for several blocks, he was not awakened until a man who rooms on the second floor of the building aroused him and then hurriedly gave the alarm to the police.

The men procured a coal chisel, a crowbar and a pick head from the section house and these tools were afterwards found.

Sheriff Riley arrived in Keewatin within a few hours after the men must have left this vicinity and he, Chief of Police Vadnais and Officer Carmody have made a careful investigation of the premises. At last reports however, no clue has been discovered.

George Kotze, who is a candidate for alderman-at-large, is expected back next week from Europe, while John Rauma, a Third ward candidate for alderman, who is visiting near Middle River, is also expected soon.

STRIPPING STOPS AT HILL PROPERTY

Mine at Marble Has Considerably Reduced Working Force.

Marble, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The working force of the Hill mine has been considerably reduced as the stripping operations have ceased and about 150 men are out of employment.

There have been 500 men employed at the mine and eight steam shovels have been in operation. At present only three steam shovels are at work and these are loading ore.

Ore shipments will be continued until about Nov. 15, at which time the three shovels now working in ore will be taken off.

Underground Work in Winter.

During the winter months the underground work at the mine will be continued with about the same number of crews that are working underground now. In this work, however, it is not likely that more than from 125 to 150 men will be employed.

The Hotel Marble, owned by the Fitger Brewing company of Duluth and one of the finest hotels on the range, will be closed within a short time, it is understood. It has been under the management of D. Butler. The hotel was patronized largely by employes of the Oliver Iron Mining company, most of whom had been employed in the stripping operations.

FERGUSON EXPLAINS.

Pledged Moose Head With Dr. Dumas for Dynamite.

Deer River, Minn., Sept. 23.—Ole Ferguson, living near here, who has been arrested in connection with the Dumas affair says that all he knows about the matter is that he gave a moose head to Dr. Dumas as security for some dynamite he secured from the Cass Lake man for clearing stumps. He says when he ran a saloon at Deer River he had a fine moose which the doctor wanted. Ferguson would not sell it, but to quote his reputed statement, "I told him it was not for sale, but that I needed some dynamite to blast some stumps on my claim and would leave the head with him as security until I paid him, if he would get me the dynamite. This he did. That's all there is to the case against me."

SLUGGED AND ROBBED,

Then Laid on Track Is Theory in Calumet Tragedy.

Calumet, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of J. Kahler, aged 47, who came here recently from New Auburn, Minn., and had been employed in this locality was found lying on the Missabe tracks, yesterday, under circumstances leading to the belief he was slugged, robbed and the body laid on the track to make it appear he had been killed by the cars. The engineer of a Missabe ore train saw the body lying on the track while the train was going at a rapid rate and before he could check the train several cars passed over the body, mutilating it.

M. Levine Receives First Prize Offered By Iron Range Road.

Two Harbors, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—This is the last day of the successful Lake county fair and while the weather is threatening the last day promises to be a memorable one.

The Marine band was out at the fair grounds all afternoon and evening furnishing music. Everything is received now of the exhibits.

The judges began in the evening to award prizes. For the big Duluth & Iron Range land department prizes: M. Levine received first award; L. D. Rose, second place, and Clarence Hillman, third place. The four other winners have not yet been decided upon. All the awards will have been made by this afternoon so that this evening everything will be made known. The grounds were given a good drenching this morning, but the rain only lasted a short time.

Fair Big Success.

The fair this year has shown quite plainly what Lake county can do. Also the crowds that have turned out have assured the agricultural association that it has the support of the people in thus advertising Lake county's resources. It has also been demonstrated that the fair quarters will have to be greatly enlarged next year in order to properly contain the exhibits. The fair has been a great success in every way.

Mrs. J. F. Whelan leaves tomorrow for Chicago, where she will attend the Catholic Order of Foresters' convention, as a delegate from the local lodge.

STOLYPIN'S SLAYER SENTENCED TO DIE

Bogroff Pleads Guilty and Hears His Doom Unmoved.

Kiev, Russia, Sept. 23.—Dmitry Bogroff, the assassin of Premier Stolypin, was tried yesterday by court-martial and sentenced to death by hanging. The court-martial was attended by twenty officials, six of them having been witnesses of the shooting, among them Minister of Justice Chtcheglovitoff. In view of Bogroff's plea of guilty, however, none of them was called to the stand, and only Col. Kuliabk, chief of the secret police, was examined. It was through the instrumentality of Kuliabk that Bogroff gained admittance to the theater to assassinate the premier.

Bogroff declined counsel. Everyone was amazed at his calmness and the firmness of his voice as he related the history of his life. He also described how he had deceived the police in getting the opportunity to assassinate the premier, but did not betray any of his accomplices. He heard the sentence of death pronounced without even a tremor.

Potato Billiard Balls.

The potato is used in France in the manufacture of imitation meerschaum pipes and ivory billiard balls. After the potatoes are peeled they are kept for six hours in an 8 per cent solution of sulphuric acid. They are then dried and pressed hard enough for use in the making of pipes. Under stronger pressure they become solid enough to be turned into balls. The French might imitate ivory, but they could not imitate golden grain belt beers, which have a delightful tang, which stamp them as standing alone. # MYSTERY IN ALLEN DEATH

Chicago Police and Government Detectives at Work on Case.

Blackmailing in Jenkins Jewel Affair Is Involved.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Chicago police, government detectives and the coroner's office began separate investigations today in an effort to clear up the mystery surrounding the death of Charles W. Allen, the millionaire leather manufacturer of Kenosha, Wis., who fell from a fourth floor window of a hotel yesterday.

The government's detectives were brought into the case because Charles Allen had made himself an object of hatred to persons said to have blackmailed his brother, Nathan Allen, in the Jenkins jewelry smuggling affair.

Get No New Light.

Detectives worked on the case all night but were unable to clear up the mystery. A post mortem examination was expected to be held during the day by the coroner's physicians to ascertain whether Mr. Allen suffered from vertigo or other illness that may have made him dizzy. Allen was last seen alive at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when a bellboy carried a pitcher of ice-water to his room. The bellboy told the police that Allen was then seated in a chair near an open window. Allen, according to employes of the hotel, had spent much time there since April 1, when he engaged a room.

Well Known in Kenosha.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 23.—Charles W. Allen, found dead in Chicago, was well known here, having resided in Kenosha almost continuously from the time of his birth, 60 year ago. He was a son of the late N. K. Allen, and with Nathan Allen owned large manufacturing properties. Among his business associates he was known as a millionaire. He is survived by a widow and three children, all living in Kenosha.

of the South American republic, represents the last word in the present day development of the 12-inch gun battleships. She is greater in point of strength and displacement than the Utah and Florida, the greatest ships now in the service of the United States government, and these two giant American fighters outrank any ship affoat in any other foreign navy. The Utah and Florida have a displacement of 22,000 tons, whereas the Moreno when completed will have 27,600.

Britons Will Build Larger.

According to the figures given out by the builders, the Moreno and Riva Davia are even larger than the superdreadnaught New York, the keel of which was recently laid in New York, and which will have a displacement of 27,000 tons. British designers are working to outstrip any of these huge fighting machines, planning the Queen Mary with a displacement of 29,000 tons.

The great strides made in battleship building will be realized when it is remembered that the original dreadnaught built by England, and which is the unit for the modern fighting ship, had a displacement of only 18,000 tons.

The Moreno will carry twelve 12-inch guns.

will furnish music at the Coliseum tonight.

The Central Trades and Labor Union recently passed a resolution prohibiting any union musicians from playing in any of the entertainments given to President Taft if the Boy Scouts took part in the entertainment in any way. The objection of the union labor men was based on the theory that the Boy Scouts organization is a budding militia movement that later will be used to suppress strikes. A compromise, however, was reached which permitted participation of the Boy Scouts and the union labor men, but the union's resolution was not reconsidered.

Governor Hadley introduced President Taft at the breakfast by saying that all parties and all factions joined in the cordial greeting to him.

Referred to Clark's Statement.

In introducing Governor Hadley, President A. O. Rule of the club alluded to the governor as "the Missouri paradox, a Republican governor who had been preaching the Democratic doctrine of states' rights to the wise men of the East."

"I suppose you have heard the policy of reciprocity is not going through," said President Taft. "I see Speaker Champ Clark has been speculating as to who is responsible. I can't say who is responsible, but I do know that I am content to abide by the result.

"I have been on the bench long enough to know that when you get a decision that hits you between the eyes, the best thing to do is to sit still. I regret that it is not going through, for it would have insured benefits to both countries."

The president then referred to the recent governors' conference at Spring Lake, N. J., which named a committee to follow the decision of Judge Sanborn through the United States supreme court. He said the governors of the states have a right to take an interest in the affairs of their states.

MUCH RELIEF FELT IN EBERHART CAMP OVER RECIPROCITY'S DEFEAT

tainly has lessened the opposition to him.

And there was a certain satisfaction in passing that out to the public. When he was asked, however, what he thought the result might have been to Minnesota, had the Liberals won in Canada and ratified the treaty on the convening of parliament, the governor closed down. He became just about as loquacious as the Panama canal or a barn. He didn't even grunt.

May Unite Factions.

The general belief among Republicans in the Twin Cities is that the failure of the pact may result in uniting the warring factions in the Republican party. Congressman Davis expressed himself this way. Among the Democrats, the belief is that a long, lean, longitudinal knife will be drawn for one William Howard Taft and he will be buried beneath the greatest avalanche of agricultural votes in 1912, this country ever saw.

"Poor Bill, said F. B. Lynch, the Democratic national committeeman. "He gets all the odium now without any of the benefits which would have resulted had reciprocity been affected."

J. A. O. Preus, former executive clerk to the governor and the present state insurance commissioner, has opposed the Canadian pact since its inception. He, too, is glad it is gone. A "regular" Republican and in line with the president, he believes the president's chances for getting the Minnesota delegation to the national convention better now than they were before Canada spoke.

The brief comment of Senator Nelson—"It is very gratifying," also indicates just how the Taft-Eberhart forces in Minnesota feel—that it smoothens the rugged path for the nation's chief executive.

The journey of Governor Eberhart to the county fairs throughout the state the past two weeks, has caused many smiles of gratification to come to the faces of those in his clan. Unquestionably, he has been met by throngs at all points where he spoke. However, in no speech has he stepped into the realm of politics, confining his remarks, rather, to consolidation of schools, building of roads and other highly exciting and inspiring topics. Need of an extra session to pass an increased gross earnings tax bill was as carefully avoided by him as the bill collector is on the first of the month by the man who is broke. Reapportionment, too, was forgotten. On his return to St. Paul yesterday morning, he said that at none of the places where he spoke, was politics mentioned.

The Congressional Outlook.

While the governor apparently is driving his craft in smooth channels, troubles are looming ahead of other near-by politicians, and there is indication of some breakers ahead for members of the national house of representatives. For instance, Congressman Stevens in the Fourth district must face a host of angered Progressives. A candidate to run against him is being drafted. Congressman Nye in the Fifth probably will have the fight of his life, too, for re-election. All indications point to Mayor J. C. Haynes of Minneapolis, a Democrat, as his opponent, and it is a certainty that if Haynes gets into the race, he will go by any plodding Democrat like a pay-car passing a tramp. Mayor Haynes has Minneapolis back of him. It believes in him. It will vote for him, and if he goes after the congressional plum, it will surprise a lot of men if he doesn't bring home the bacon. With the chances of a bitter fight between the "regulars" and the Progressives in Hennepin, the outlook certainly is rosy for the city's chief executive.

It is understood in the Twin Cities that Congressman Miller of Duluth will not be a candidate for re-election and that Senator James Boyle is to get in the race. All of which will mean a fight to a standstill between the "old guard" in Duluth, which will oppose Boyle, and the younger and more progressive element.

Will Works Run?

Down in the Second district, Senator Works, Democrat, has his eyes on the shoes now filled by Congressman Hammond, and it is not at all unlikely that if Hammond decides to run for governor, he will endeavor to succeed him in congress. Senator Works announced some time ago that he possibly would make the race for congressman-at-large, but his attitude toward the northern part of the state in opposing the reapportionment bill, was recalled and he probably has seen the "handwriting."

Just where the new Tenth district will be mapped out is causing small comment. The congressional reapportionment places the next legislature of the state in a position where it must have two apportioning bills—one for legislative districts and one for congressional districts. Few there are who do not see possibilities for much of the old-fashoned, hard-shelled, machine-like log-rolling indulged in so largely a few years ago.

Arrangements are going ahead for the big Progressive banquet to be given in St. Paul Oct. 30, when Senator Cummins of Iowa is to reply to the speech of President Taft to be delivered here five days before that date. Incidentally, too, Senator Clapp is to speak at this meeting and it will be the first time he has ever condescended to speak in the Twn Cities on the question of progressivism. He has stood on both feet and figuratively on his hands, yelling for progressive principles from one end of the United States to another, yet never a peep has ever come from him at home.

FLYERS MEET IN NEW YORK

Approximately $50,000 in prizes is to be distributed during the meet.

The management announced today that Wright brothers, who claim a controlling patent on airships, had licensed the meet at the last moment and would send aviators to take part in the contests. This reassured many of the aviators who feared suits.

The first aerial postal service to be duly authorized by the United States postoffice department was to be inaugurated this afternoon from the field. A regular branch postoffice has been established on the field, with a number of postal clerks, and the department has designated a new postmark stamp which will be placed on each letter. This reads that it is a "special aerial service" from "aerial station No. 1, Garden City, L. I."

Capt. Paul W. Peck proposes to make two flights daily, carrying about 20,000 letters each day. He will take them from the field to some postoffice on Long Island or to Governor's Island, from where the aerial mail will be transferred to the regular postal routes and forwarded to its destination.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has announced that he will witness this aerial delivery on Monday.

ed to him, and turning to his crew Fowler said:

"Might as well shoot her."

A minute later he rose in the air and began circling for altitude.

Fowler arrived over Blue Canyon at 8 o'clock. His altitude was about 4,000 feet and he began circling above Blue Canyon, going higher. Blue Canyon is twenty-two miles from Colfax, the starting place. Shortly afterward he gave up and returned to Colfax.

Rodgers Has Accident.

Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 23.—C. P. Rodgers left at 10:30 a. m. on his ocean-to-ocean flight. Rough ground prevented a good start and he came down to escape telegraph wires. In landing some guy wires were pulled out and a hole torn in the planes, making repairs necessary. Yesterday Rodgers made his longest single day's flight since leaving New York on Sunday. He left Hancock, N. Y., in the morning, and because he lost his way near Susquehanna, he was forced to fly more than 200 miles in order to reach this city, a distance of but 188 miles from Hancock.

Ward Has Quit.

Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 23.—James P. Murphy, manager for James J. Ward, announced here that Ward has withdrawn from the coast to coast aeroplane race as a result of his fall near Addison yesterday morning.

ENTIRE NEW VENIRE IN DUMAS CASE SENT BACK HOME BY JUDGE

twenty jurors to be examined for service in the Dumas arson case, filed his list. Most of the men subpoenaed were farmers living in the town of Frohn, adjoining the city of Bemidji on the east. They were: Harry Robinson, carpenter, Bemidji; James A. Martin, farmer Bemidji; Tom Mohler, log foreman, Bemidji; Charles Riley, lumberjacker, Bemidji; Robert Olson, farmer, Bemidji; J. K. Titus, carpenter, Bemidji; J. W. Peck, cruiser, Bemidji; George Smith, janitor, Bemidji; Peter Narum, K. G. Sandlund, I. O. Ungstad, Clyde "Boe, Stanley Smith, George Chambers, Nelson Willett, John Colburn, August Burr, W. S. Ridgeway and L. T. Bjella, all farmers of the town of Frohn.

The venire was called and all answered their names except Nels Nelson and John Colburn, who were delayed in arriving.

Shows Respect to Attorney.

Judge McClenahan adjourned court until 10:30 because of the death of Mrs. P. J. Russell, wife of a member of the Bemidji bar, and before adjournment cautioned the veniremen in the strongest language against allowing anything that resembled being in touch with outsiders or influences, as follows:

"Do not permit any one to talk to you about this case, and do not permit any information to reach you as to any angle of this case or any other in which you might be called upon to act as jurors. Be particularly careful to keep yourself away from any information, and do not listen to any talk.

Warning to Veniremen.

"If any attempts are made to talk to you, I will be pleased if you will inform me so that I may deal with the case promptly and effectively. Be careful."

Says He Saw Davis.

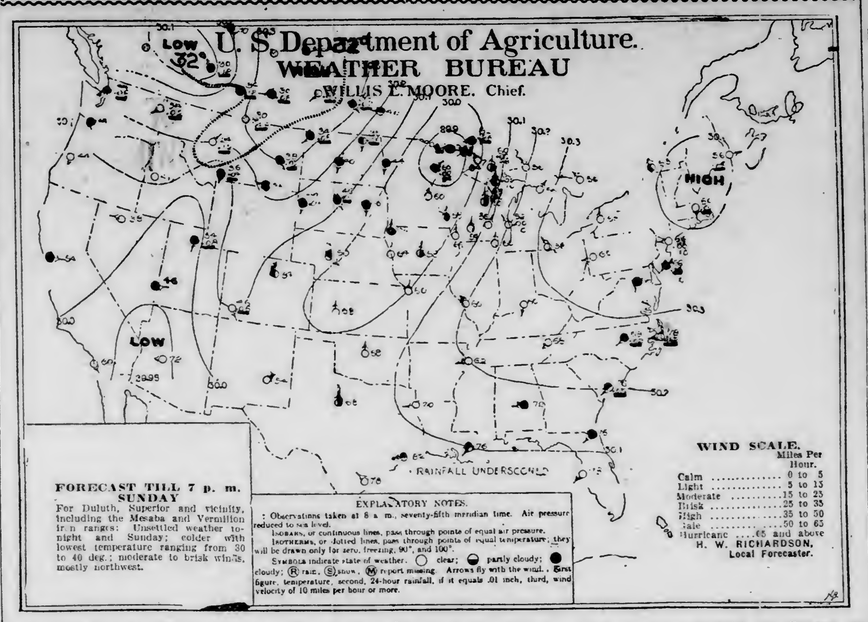
It develops that Alfred W. Mueller of the attorney general's office, is the young man who discovered Mike Davis and a band of other alleged bank robbers and desperadoes at East Grand Forks, and that it was he who caused the expedition out of Bemidji yesterday to attempt their capture. Mr. Mueller, who returned last night with Sheriff Hazen, Detective Fielding, Deputy Sheriff Norman Helmer and a postoffice inspector, said:



"I was in East Grand Forks last Saturday and at that time I saw and positively identified Mike Davis. He shows signs of dissipation and his old friends would hardly know him, but there was no question as to his identity. I came to Bemidji and informed the officers. Mr. Fielding, Deputy Helmer and myself went to East Grand Forks. We conferred with Chief Sullivan there and he and his assistants gave us every possible aid.

Plans Were Tipped Off.

"We located Davis at a saloon known as 'Little Harry's Place.' Our squad was to consist of ten men. We had planned first on making the arrest about 3 p. m. Thursday. This decision was revised and we decided to put it off until about daylight yesterday morning. In the meantime the bartender, who had no idea as to who as I was, told me that I had better beat it, that the place was to be raided.

"Who ever told the bartender got the news to Davis and his pals, for they suddenly disappeared. Our information was that these men had gatnered in a room on the second floor of the saloon and at one time there were not less than twenty of them, including such characters as Mike Davis, 'Missouri Bob,'" one of the most expert safe crackers, "Frisco Dan," "Hiker," "Slim, the Swede," "New York Red," and "Smoke." These men have no other names than these given. It is thought Davis went far He may yet be captured.

PLEASED AT WHAT HE SAW

Los Angeles Man Takes Trip Over Range and Returns Enthusiastic.

E. Avery McCarthy, a Los Angles, Cal., capitalist, who has been visiting for several days in Duluth and who yesterday took a trip over the range in W. J. Olcott's private car, Frontenac, did not try to conceal his enthusiasm for Duluth and St. Lopis county mines when he returned to the city last night.

"You have what is without a doubt to my mind the most wonderful industrial project in America," he said.

"Why the talk about the Panama canal, writers make us believe that the work of digging it is such a tremendous task, and yet up to the year 1909, only 174,000,000 cubic yards have been removed from the isthmus cut, while in the same length of time, 224,350,000 cubic yards were handled on the range. During the year 1909, the army of laborers on the canal got rid of 35,142,000 cubc yards, while the comparatively small number of iron range employes dug out 44,157,000.

"Things that of course astounded me during the tour of inspection, though familiarity seem naught to Duluthians; for instance on our way up, every fourteen minutes we passed a train of fifty cars, each loaded with fifty tons of ore, and this was only on one line of railway. This is, of course, not the first large system of mines that I have visited, but it is the first that has impressed me so with its absolute lack of ordinary mining conditions. When we think of mining communites the mental picture appears before us of a straggling settlement of shake-down shanties, with a population composed of half-starved people living in an atmosphere of filth and under conditions which could only lead to the worst forms of physical, mental and moral degeneracy. But compare that with the conditions which prevail on your iron ranges. The companies have all built neat eight and nine-room houses, painted and equipped with modern conveniences, which they rent to their employes for from $5 to $10 a month. Up to date school buildings have been erected, and child labor has been abolished. I looked upon a group of bright, happy-faced youngsters playing ball—boys and girls alike— all showing clearly the healthy vigor which is characteristc of the American child—and turning in astonishment to my host I asked: 'Why where are all the foreigners, these certainly are Americans, all children?' 'They are Americans,' was the reply, 'we have no foreign children, they are the offspring of foreign parents, but right living, good schooling, and freedom have made them as truly American as any descendant of the Mayflower emigres.' And by Jove it was true, I called them over and talked to several and there were none that I would'nt have been proud to call as my own.'

Mr. McCarthy was planning to go from here to Washington with his daughter, who is the guest fo Duluth friends, but was called back to Los Angeles.

Residents of "Darkest Woodland," (Lakeside Term) at Harvest Festival.

J. L. Washburn Thinks Woodlanders "Have Something on" Adam and Eve.

Fruits and vegetables, unusual in size and unexcelled in quality, gave silent testimony to the fertility of Woodland soil and the ability of Woodland gardeners, at the harvest home supper held at the Glen Avon Presbyterian church last evening.

The agricultural display was made incident to the supper, but the supper itself was a display that was even more enjoyed by the people of Woodland and Hunter's Park and their visitors, for everything served, with the exception of the meat and the coffee, might truly have been labeled, "Grown in Woodland."

Feasting literally, and feasting their eyes, on Woodland products, the visitors were ready to attest that Woodland is the garden spot of Duluth, with few challengers for the honor.

That wasn't all the feasting, for the corporeal feasting was followed by the incorporeal feast of reason that comes from a flow of soul, and George H. Maxwell and J. L. Washburn furnished soul enough to go around, and still retained a reserve stock for future occasions.

It was a neighborly gathering, with the proper neighborly spirit prevailing. W. C. Sherwood went into raptures over Henry Nolte's Brussel's sprouts, and Mr. Nolte, showing more ardent devotion to the doctrine of reciprocity than did the Canadian cousins, assured Mr. Sherwood and everybody else within hearing that no cauliflower was ever grown that could rival that which Mr. Sherwood proudly displayed to the assembled populace.

C. E. Roe and H. W. Coffin did a brotherly love act in pouring forth congratulations to each other. A. B. Hostetter, superintendent of agriculture of the Commercial club, although a rank outsider through his lack of foresight in not picking Woodland as a place of residence, was as welcome as the first sprouts of lettuce under glass in the springtime, for he fluttered from place to place, impartially distributing encomiums wherever he happened to be at any particular moment.

Verbal Posies.

All around the table, chests expanded as George H. Maxwell talked. Verbal posies fell from his lips and were distributed all over the place. He told the Woodland people that they were headed in the direction of prosperity, contentment, and good living and that they were setting an example that would lead thousands of other Duluthians to see the value of a life close to the soil, a back-yard garden and a chicken yard.

Mr. Maxwell expounded his favorite topic with vigor and logic. He figured the benefits of the homecroft movement out on sentimental and economic lines and he pointed out that regardless of the lines upon which the movement is furthered, its success means better living conditions, increased vigor, complete contentment and greater prosperity for the people of the city.

Mr. Maxwell said that the success of any industrial enterprise is the efficiency in its working units. The workman who is underfed whose home life is uncongenial, who has not enough fresh air and sunshine in his home, is a defective cog in the industrial machine and his family is a weak link in the social chain.

Put the people on the land, he said. Let every man have a little home of his own, with enough ground so that the sunshine may strike the four walls of his house, and so that the soil may be tilled for fresh vegetables for the table, and a few chickens may have space in which to run and thrive. Then a man will be contented with his lot, will have his cost of living so reduced that he will be able to work for fair living wages and still save something for a rainy day, and he will be independent of industrial depression through having his own home and his garden products on which to live, if the worst comes and he is thrown out of work.

Homecroftism.

Mr. Maxwell urged his hearers to further the homecroft movement in Duluth. Given a large number of workers who own their own homes and have back-yard gardens and Duluth will be in a postion for great industrial growth. The improved condition of the working people and the opportunity for others to improve their conditions will attract manufacturing plants, he said. He pointed out that Duluth's climate is a great asset, for the cool summers allow men to work at their full capacity all the year around, while in many other places the warm weather of the summer decreases the efficiency of the workers.

Mr. Maxwell expressed his pleasure over the growth of the homecroft movement since his visit here last March. He said that overproduction is impossible. No community the size of Duluth can raise too much produce within its own limits and the more people who are drawn into the movement, the more prosperous will the city be.

J. L. Washburn gave a semi-humorous, semi-serious talk in which he declared Woodland to be a garden spot unequaled anywhere on the face of the globe. "Our Eden" was his subject and he compared Woodland to the Garden of Eden, with the orrignal Eden getting a little the short end of the comparison.

Rev. J. C. Faries acted as toastmaster and his sallies were greatly appreciated by the diners. He showed an intimate knowledge of the temperamental tendencies of the people of his congregation and kept up a good-natured line of "joshing" that took well.

The exhibited products were sold for the benefit of the church and a good sum was realized by the women who arranged the affair.

"The Water of Eternal Youth"

(From Home Queen)

The beauties of the Austrian court used a lotion which was so effectual in keeping the face smooth and free from wrinkles, even in the aged, that they named it the "water of eternal youth."

Some one has recently divulged the secret of this wonderful, though exceedingly simple, wrinkle lotion, which in her gratitude she has similarly dubbed as a preserver of youth: One ounce pure saxolite (powdered), dissolved in a half pint of witch hazel—that's all there is to it. Any woman can get these ingredients at her drug store, put them together, and use the solution with entire safety. To bathe the face in the same brings immediate results, even in case of the deeper wrinkles and furrows. This is also effective for hanging cheeks and double chin.

THE CONFLICT OF LOVE AND FAT

The average man will "jolly" with the stout girl; but he steals glances over his shoulder at that Miss Slender. He would sooner hold the hands of the latter in a fatuous silence than really enjoy himself with the other. Such is the power of line. Just a line—from chin to toe, or nape to heel—that's all. But it rings the merry marriage bell.

Fat women should not repine—but refine—their own lines by means of that phenomenal—the Marmola Tablet. No exercising or dieting is necessary. Simply take one tablet after each meal and at bedtime, and in a little while the overplus of fat—the coarseness of aspect—will disappear. The figure will become slight enough to permit of a maidenly contour, a pure outline, being fashioned with corset and gown. Then victory—if not revenge.

Although Marmola Tablets often take off uniformly a pound of flabby fat a day, they are quite harmless (being made of the famous fashionable prescription; ½ oz. Marmola, Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water.) Consequently, even timid ones are safe in using them, for no ill—not even a wrinkle or stomach ache—will follow their use; seventy-five cents secures a large case at any druggist's or by mail from the Marmola Co., 491 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

We "struck" it right on Union Suits this season.

They're certainly made to fit—and fit to please.

Fine quality ribbed suits in white or ecru from $1.50 up.

And that $1.50 suit is certainly a dandy. We wanted a garment made especially for us to sell at that price—something that we knew would be the best value ever offered in union suits for one fifty. Never mind the time and trouble it gave us—we have it and we want you to see it.

When are you coming in?

You can get the pure wool—lisle or silk and wool—linen mesh—if you prefer.

If you don't wear union suits, we have many, many styles of the regular under garments.

Economical in price!

CANADA ON THE BACK TRACK.

The result of the Canadian election goes a great deal deeper than the mere defeat of a wholesome if timid attempt at freeing trade over the border line from some of the absurd tariff restrictions that now hamper it.

By rejecting the Liberal government and landing the Conservatives in power Canada has, apparently, turned itself bag and baggage over to the very kind of tyranny that the United States is now struggling to free itself from—the tyranny of government by and for special privilege.

Canada was, therefore, at the parting of the ways in a deeper sense than President Taft realized when he uttered the phrase that was distorted by the Conservatives into a telling campaign slogan.

The day before election the Indianapolis News made this striking comment on the situation: "Canadian manufacturers and special interests have delivered their mandate to the people of Canada on the eve of election. They are commanded to vote against reciprocity under penalty of the factories and railroads being shut down for good. The act of the E. B. Eddy company at Ottawa yesterday, in closing its factory and marching its men out to hear an anti-reciprocity orator, recalls the feudal ages, and the notices posted that if reciprocity carries there will be no more work hark back to the dark days of American politics. Thus far the issue has been reciprocity. By marching its employes out to hear a political speech of any kind, and by posting notices of suspension unless the people vote as they say, these interests have given Canada another issue. The question now is whether the industrial, financial and railroad interests are going to be dictators of Canada. The United States serves as a warning. By such methods and domination these interests wrote our tariff laws and clamped burdensome taxation on us that has crippled the nation and clipped its wings in world industrial expansion. By such domination they have controlled government, brought on us our trust evil and corrupted men and government. The revolt has come. Our whole intent now is to shake ourselves free of the domination that threatens Canada today. The irrational Kipling has warned Canada that her soul is at stake. It certainly is."

And Canada, in deadly fear of the impossible bogey of annexation, fled for refuge under the wings of the Canadian brothers of the vested interests that have plundered the American people under a tyranny as evil and oppressive as any in the history of the world. Canada now lies open to their marauding, and by the time another election rolls around they will have riveted its chains so tightly that escape will not be easy.

WHERE IS THE GAIN?

The president in his discussions of the trust question, like a great many others, seems to take it for granted that the existence of monopoly in industry is the chief danger to guard against, and that if by force of law competition can be re-established all will be well again.

And perhaps if the corpse of competition could be set upon its feet and made to live again by the mere action of law all would be well again. But can it? And is there anything inherently evil in a monopoly?

Just for the sake of argument, let us suppose that there is nothing evil in monopoly. There are plenty of proofs of it. The postoffice, for instance, is a complete monopoly except as one of its silly omissions allows the express companies to take away one of its most profitable lines of business. But the postoffice, in spite of its being a monopoly, has done no harm and much good. The reason is that it is a public monopoly and not a private monopoly. Here is a distinction that should not be overlooked.

There is nothing inherently evil in monopoly, any more than there is anything inherently evil in a tree from which a highwayman may fashion a club with which he beats out a pedestrian's brains. In both there is the danger of evil if it comes into evil hands.

Because highwaymen may carve clubs out of trees and do violence with them is no reason why there should be a law against tree-growing. Because commercial highwaymen may abuse their power and use monopoly to rob the people is no reason for a law against monopoly, unless it is shown that it is impossible for the people to gain the admitted advantages of a centralized industry, and eliminate the admitted evils of centralization, by regulation or—if that fails—ownership, as in the case of the postoffice.

The president now appears to be against government regulation of industry because that is "state socialism." If government regulation is the right method, calling it names won't destroy its usefulness.

The main thing is not that an industry shall provide employment and wages for its workers and profits for its owners but that society shall be served with the commodity dealt in by that industry. Society is entitled to have that industry organized in such a manner as to enable it to serve it most efficiently. The main thing is its service. And that service must be efficient and as cheap as it can be made. Competition kept prices down, and unregulated monopoly, bolstered by the protective tariff, put prices up although it reduced its own costs. If competition can be restored by law, well and good. If it can't, time spent in trying to restore it is wasted. Regulation in the interests of society must be adopted, no matter what names are applied to it.

The president takes his stand on the attempt to destroy monopoly and to revive competition by law. The oil trust, for instance, has been convicted of the crime of monopoly and sentenced to dissolution; which means that its property is to be divided into a number of separate corporations, and that these corporations are to be sternly commanded by the law to compete. Will they compete? And if they compete will the stronger not kill off the weaker corporations, grow together again and re-establish monopoly in another form? Monopoly is the legitimate child of competition; and competition artificially created by law is no less likely to give berth to a new monopoly, if it really competes, than the natural competition of yesterday.

It is not monopoly against which the fight should be aimed, but the evils of unfairly high prices and unfairly low wages, which will be quite as great under an artificial competition created by judicial decree as they were before.

SUPPOSE.

The Portland Oregonian, apparently pleading Taft's cause with some subtlety, says that if La Follette should be nominated it would mean the disruption and defeat of the Republican party.

There is so much to its argument that it is worth while giving it here, after which it will also be worth while to look at the other side of the picture and speculate on what will happen if La Follette is not nominated, and on whether that will be any better for the Republican party.

Says the Oregonian: "Suppose La Follette should win the Republican nomination for the presidency in 1912. Suppose that radicalism—pure, unadulterated and uncompromising radicalism represented by the Wisconsin idea—should thus control the Republican platform and the Republican organization. Is there anyone so blind to the real condition throughout the United States—political, social, economic, industrial—as to have the remotest opinion that he could be elected?

"We should see the campaign of 1896 over again, with La Follette in the place of Bryan. There would be widespread alarm among the conservative elements, which, throughout the East, North and West, are represented mainly in the Republican party, and which in the last analysis are largely the blood, bone and sinew of the country. They would not support La Follette. They might not go to the Democratic nominee, but La Follette would lose them. Where would La Follette get his votes? From the Democrats? No. Impossible. The Democrats have not been so united, enthusiastic or hopeful for years. They would be for their nominee, whoever he is.

"If La Follette shall be nominated, the Republican party will be irretrievably demoralized and hopelessly wrecked. So would be La Follette, Bourne, Bristow and all the progressives. The former might not to them appear so great a calamity; the latter would doubtless seem so. Their best chance is to be out of the locomotive when the Republican train leaves the track."

Well reasoned, logical and undoubtedly true.

But will the Republican party be in much better situation if such counsels as these prevail, and La Follette is defeated and Taft nominated on a conservative platform by an organization which has skillfully managed it so that Republican platforms are meaningless and untrustworthy?

The Oregonian argues that if the radical wing of the Republican party prevails the conservative wing will throw the switch and ditch the Republican train.

But if this is true—and nobody can doubt that it is—is it not also true that if the conservative wing of the Republican party prevails the radical wing will throw the switch and ditch the Republican train?

La Follette will not be nominated. Taft will be. Though La Follette and his followers appear to have burned their bridges behind them by their brave and true indictments of Taft and the conservative organization that is back of him, no doubt when Taft is nominated they will profess adherence to his cause, much as Bryan professed adherence to Parker in 1904 and Aldrich to Roosevelt in the same year. But this formal yielding to party loyalty will not affect the rank and file who are back of La Follette; nor will it affect the great and growing independent vote which is the salvation of the nation. Taft will get the votes of those who wish a conservative and reactionary president. The votes of those who do not want that kind of a president will go where they may with comfort to their consciences.

RECIPROCITY AND THE FARMER.

The American farmer, particularly in the Northwest, was supposed to be against reciprocity because he feared that letting down the tariff bars would admit a flood of Canadian farm products that would lower American markets, to his injury. We do not believe that nearly so many American farmers hugged this fear as some people asserted; but unquestionably there were many.

It is a pity, therefore, that there will be no chance to demonstrate that they were wrong in their belief, which had been ground into them by a generation of Republican stumpspeakers who told the farmers that they must support the protective tariff system because the tariff on their products profited them—as though the tariff could affect the price of farm products in a country that exported farm products.

It may be that some of those who have been warning the American farmer of the dangers of reciprocity will point triumphantly to the fact that wheat went up in American markets yesterday, and dropped slightly in Canadian markets. If they do this it will be to cover up the much more important fact that the result in Canada showed that the Canadian farmer did not believe that he would benefit by reciprocity as much as he must to injure the American farmer.

The readjustment in the grain markets is easily accounted for by the fact that for several weeks prior to the election the markets had been practically at a standstill, awaiting the doubtful effects of the ratification of the treaty, which most people confidently expected. Now that the elections have been held and the issue decided, the wheat markets of both countries are readjusting themselves to the normal order of things, which process involves necessarily more or less sharp changes in prices.

Though no supporter of President Taft, nor likely to be, The Herald has believed and still believes that he was right in his advocacy of reciprocity, and that the only criticism that could be made of the compact was that it did not go far enough. And The Herald still believes that if there had been a chance to demonstrate its workings, reciprocity would have proved itself no enemy of the farmer, but his friend.

THE CHANGES OF SIX DECADES.

The New York Times celebrated its sixtieth birthday the other day by getting out a special edition which was a notable compendium of political, economic and newspaper history.

Sixty years is a long time in the life of an individual, but a short time in the history of an established newspaper. As the Times points out, neither those who wrote it nor those who read it in its beginning are writing or, with few exceptions, reading now. Much water has gone under the mill. Mighty changes have taken place; and none of these are of more interest and significance than the changes in the newspaper business.

In a newspaper sense, the greatest change that has taken place is that from the newspaper as a personal organ to the newspaper as an institution in which personalities are submerged.

Sixty years ago the Times was Henry J. Raymond, as the Tribune was Horace Greeley, as the Springfield Republican was Samuel Bowles and as the Evening Post was William Cullen Bryant and later Parke Godwin. Now, though the Louisville Courier-Journal is still Henry Watterson and the Portland Oregonian but lately was Harvey W. Scott, these exceptions prove the rule that the newspaper is no longer a personal organ but an institution that represents collective thought and talent and energy and enterprise; and that the individual, however powerful his influence, is sunk in the newspaper.

And this change, notwithstanding the loss of picturesqueness it involves, is right, and makes for greater newspapers and greater newspaper influence. For the newspaper goes on from generation to generation; the man is mortal, and at best has but a few years of mature powers in which to say his say and stamp his influence upon his time, and then must join the innumerable silent multitude.

The Herald has pleasure in congratulating the Times on its long and influential history, but more especially on the fact that its sixtieth birthday finds it with a larger circulation, a greater prosperity and a wider influence than it has had at any period in its useful career. Clean, advanced, free—it is a splendid and commanding individuality among the best newspapers of the world.

THE LAKE COUNTY FAIR.

Heartiest congratulations to Two Harbors and Lake county on the highly successful county fair which ends today. It is a good county fair, one that would do credit to counties that have been in the farming business a good many more years than Lake county has; and it is a convincing evidence both of the work that has been done in the past and of the solid future of agricultural development that is to come.

The success of this fair, the fifth Lake county has held, is important and interesting because of the splendid showing it makes, but more so because of what it stands for: the hard work of getting people interested in farming in a region where at one time farming seemed impossible, the abundant success that has rewarded that work, and the solid foundations that have been laid for an agricultural development that will prosper Two Harbors, Lake county, Duluth and even the state of Minnesota itself. For these things credit is due the men who have ventured their all in clearing the wilderness and starting farm homes, and to the pioneers who have argued and pleaded and demonstrated until success was assured; men like Thomas Owens, George Munford, John Dwan, George Spurbeck, L. D. Rose, W. B. Woodward, H. C. Hanson, A. J. Giroux, G. W. Small of the Two Harbors Journal-News and others.

Duluth is proud of the enterprise and achievements of its neighbor, and wishful that it may take from this year's success new hope and courage. New energy is hardly possible, for the Lake county agricultural boomers have used theirs right up to the handle, and seem capable of keeping it up.

WHO WAS THE MARPLOT?

It is reported from Washington that some of the Republican politicians, anxious to redeem the administration from the humiliation of having its one ground for appeal to the country shot to pieces by the result of the Canadian election, are blaming Speaker Champ Clark for the success of the annexation bogey in the Canadian campaign.

That is ridiculous, and the supporters of the administration will find no profit in such distortions of the facts.

It is true that Speaker Clark, when the pact was before the house in the regular session, spoke half jocularly and half seriously his hope that some time Canada and the United States would be one nation. It is true that he shouldn't have said it, and probably true that he afterwards regretted saying it. It is also true that his talk was quoted to some extent in the Canadian campaign.

But the fact is that Speaker Clark's maladroit enthusiasm did not do half the harm to reciprocity that was done by some of President Taft's thoughtless and well intentioned statements.

The Montreal Star published constantly several of these sentences, headed "The Keynote of the Election." President Taft said, unfortunately, that "the bond uniting the Dominion with the mother country is light and almost imperceptible," and that Canada was "coming to the parting of the ways." He didn't mean annexation, or anything like it; but the Conservative orators and editorial writers said he did, and they rang the changes on these phrases constantly throughout the campaign. The London Globe, jubilating yesterday morning on the rebuke to the United States, said that Laurier said reciprocity did not mean annexation but Taft said it did; and the Canadian people believed Taft.

So the attempt to pluck some consolation out of the calamity by blaming Champ Clark for it is absurdly like a very sooty pot reproaching a fairly clean kettle for its blackness.

And to think that the next Canadian parliament will be a Borden-house!

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

LAST TRIBUTE TO MINOCQUA CITIZEN.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In behalf of the citizens of Minocqua I wish to correct the erroneous reports concerning the death of R. E. Hoover of this city. This report was sent to the various newspapers by some starving newspaper reporter from Rhinelander who evidently was laboring under a dramatic delusion, for when he heard the accident occurred he proceeded to make the rest as dramatic as possible. He undoubtedly was a consistent reader of the yellow journals. The people of Minocqua were greatly irritated to have the public forced to take such an erroneous conception of one of the most brilliant characters of the country and Minocqua's foremost business man and citizen. Mr. Hoover was a brilliant scholar and a man in every sense of the word. A man whose character has never been shadowed—a man whom no one could honestly say lacked any of the essentials of a man. The report that Mr. Hoover was inebriated at the time of the crime and also the reports that Mrs. Hoover sustained injuries to the amount of three broken ribs resulting from a blow by the deceased and that the fatal weapon was a shot gun are absolutely false and the evidence derived at the inquest held here yesterday clearly showed that Mr. Hoover was not under the influence of liquor, that Mrs. Hoover did not sustain the slightest injury and that a shotgun was not used as the fatal weapon, but a rifle. These reports were looked upon as simply ridiculous by the people of this vicinity. The corroborated evidence clearly showed that during an altercation at the supper table both father and son became angered at each other. The son testified that the father after threatening to clean out the family, left the room and the son, fearing his mother in danger, ran to his beat and on returning during the heat of passion and with a design to effect the death of his father, he met the deceased who was defenseless and fiendishly deprived the dearest friend he had of his life. Thus was the sad finis of Minocqua's foremost citizen. A man who was dear to all and whose enemies were as scarce as the leaves in mid-winter. A man who had toiled incessantly for years to make his business and his little village prosper, and if every one whom this man had done a kind favor for during his beautiful life had laid one little flower on his beautiful casket this man who passed through life with such a beautiful character would be sleeping beneath a wilderness of flowers. Then when his long-standing wish had been granted and he was about to enjoy the fruits of his toils and hardships, the curtain of life is pulled down and the last scene has come to a most sorrowful ending.

Sincerely yours,
R. J. CANNON.
Minocqua, Wis., Sept. 21.

Fined For His Industry.

Empire Gazette: There are some queer things about our system of taxation, says the Johnson (Kan.) Republican. Here is an example: Once upon a time the editor of this paper became possessed of the laudable ambition to save up a few dollars, he purchased three lots and then plan some property which had been taken in on mortgage by an Eastern investment company, the Republican says further.

The house was in such bad repair that it was not fit for occupancy. The cellar was full of stagnant water, weeds grew rankly about the house, the porches were rotted and sagging, the house unpainted. The lot was a couple of feet above the sidewalk and the earth had washed and caved, making it impassable. The place was an eyesore and a menace to health; we wanted a home and saw its possibilities.

It was located in a good neighborhood, and from it we had a beautiful view over a pretty valley. Being rather handy with tools we went to work before and after office hours. We repaired the porches, painted the house, sodded and terraced the yard and drained the cellar and put in curbing and parking. We worked early and late, until at last we had, as many people told us, one of the prettiest homes in the town—and then the assessor came around and doubled our taxes.

We were fined because we had worked hard and converted disorder into order, ugliness into beauty, and had wiped out a plague spot in the neighborhood. It is also true that the owner of a few vacant lots adjoining our place immediately advanced them in price but neglected to cut the tall weeds which grew on them. It may be added that his taxes were not increased, notwithstanding the fact that he held his lots at a higher price.

We have told this story because the statement itself ought to cause someone to do some hard thinking. There surely is something radically wrong with a system of taxation in which a person is fined for merely being industrious.

Back to Europe.

New York Times: Steamship men and those who study industrial conditions are watching with considerable interest the outgoing tide of steerage passengers from this port. Already the number outgoing for the year has exceed by 75,063 the number that went out in the same period of 1910, and now that the season of frost is at hand and outside work will practically stop for several months, the tide will be swelled by the great army of laborers who return each year to their homes in Southern Europe to await again the coming of warm weather. The exodus is, steamship men say, to be expected, but they are seeking a reason for the present excessive movement in the steerage. Not since 1908 have so many aliens departed from the port in the same time. In that year conditions were unusual, for it was a period of unrest in the financial world.

Incoming figures show a falling off in all classes. The number of those arriving in the steerage does not equal by 240,862 those who came in during the first nine months of last year.

These figures show the eastward movements of passengers in cabin and steerage up to Sept. 8 as compared with the figures of the last four years:

| | First Class. | Second Class. | Third Class. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1911 | 82,245 | 93,344 | 291,705 |
| 1910 | 90,454 | 89,489 | 216,642 |
| 1909 | 80,203 | 76,321 | 180,409 |
| 1908 | 77,903 | 84,973 | 517,766 |

So far 57,532 first class, 152,287 second class and 542,599 steerage passengers have arrived—a far less number than in 1910.

A steamship man, speaking of the outgoing steerage travel, said that the movement must forecast a reduction of labor, especially outdoor labor, by some of the great employers. The movement, he said, had been slow, but nevertheless continual and always noticeable. Most of those departing are natives of the Southern countries of Europe. Italians lead in the exodus. An exception to this statement in the sailings of the last ten days is the steamship Lituama, bound for Libau, which took out 1,097 steerage passengers. Among the other vessels departing last week and their steerage —third-class census—were as follows: Europa, 1,131; Sant Anna, 949; Taormina, 724, and the Kaiser Wilhelm II, 512.

Sartorial Note.

Galveston News: The reason a man needs a lot of new clothes when he gets married is because they will have to last him a long time.

Not All Succeed.

Atchison Globe: One hears a great deal of the country boys who make good in the great cities, but there are a number of others who go there and get less publicity.

Puck: Suburbs—What a vacant expression that fellow Jones has!

Citious—Vacant! Why don't he rent it?

Baltimore American: "Pop, is it 'X' that is an unknown quantity?"

"I have always found it so, my son, whenever I tried to borrow one."

Toledo Blade: The Loser—Do you think it's wicked to play poker?

The Winner—Yes, the way you play it.

Washington Herald: "I won't play poker with that fellow any more. He bobbed up on the last round with four aces."

"What's wrong about that?" "I dealt him four queens."

Toledo Blade: Husband—Excuse me, dear, but don't you cook much more for dinner than we can use?

Washington Star: "Does the public of Crimson Gulch remember my previous visit?" asked Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"It does," replied Bronco Bob.

"And it is waiting to receive me with open arms?"

"Not exactly open arms. It looks more like a case of concealed weapons."

Abominable Snobbishness.

Louisville Courier-Journal: There is a story going the rounds of the press, credited to the New York Times, in the effect that the battleship Michigan has as its mascot a bull terrier that wears a solid silver collar and will not associate with enlisted men.

A paragraph from the story follows: "Mutt's a peculiar dog," said the bo'sun's mate, 'and unless you wear shoulder straps don't speak to him. If you do there will be trouble sure. He's as particular as an admiral about whom he associates with."

The snobbishness of the American navy has been the theme of comment from time to time, but is it possible that even the manners of a dog are corrupted from evil association with naval officers? Few Americans will believe, or want to believe, such a tale.

The essential difference between the love of a dog and that of a human being is that it takes no account of social position, worldly goods, imposing appearance, reputation, habit or even amiability. There are house dogs that are coddled into softness like spoiled children and lose the nobility of the dog who roughs it. There are lap-dogs that become dyspeptic and disagreeable from overfeeding and lack of exercise, and acquire dispositions that make them objects of contempt to every one save the owner. One of the type made a well-known character in a once popular novel, "The Open Door," and nobody finished the book without cherishing a desire to kick the dog in the presence of the Duchess and see both of them yelp. But snobbishness has never been charged against a dog before now. If the sentiment exists in the beast of "Mutt," the reflection is upon his associates. Of dogs as a class it may be said that their democracy is as complete as their loyalty to their owners is unswerving. Ouida in "The Dog of Flanders," pictured a dog of no especial distinction who possessed the qualities of the average mongrel, and Bill Sykes' dog was as true to his owner as if he had been a belted earl. It was a common cur that was found a short time ago at a lonely cabin in the mountains of Oregon, where he had faithfully watched the body of his dead owner, an old trapper, for several months and had almost starved to death attempting to find enough food without going too far from the cabin or deserting his master for too long a time. But if these three dogs, two of them prominent in fiction and one of them deserving such honors that his example of devotion might be put between cloth covers instead of being allowed to vanish in the yellowing files, had been dogs of high degree, neither of them would have asked who the parents of the peasant boy of Flanders were, or whether Bill Sykes had a good reputation in London, or what clubs the Oregon trapper belonged to. Nor would any other decent dog in Christendom.

The officers of the Michigan stand charged with abominable snobbishness, and with having infected an animal of a noble breed with the germs of a disgusting malady. They should disprove the allegation or quietly drop into the deep blue sea an animal who is at once a reflection upon the navy and a blot upon doghood.

Secretary Fisher Indorsed.

Outlook: Mr. Fisher is peculiarly fitted to work out some scheme under which it shall be possible to leave the actual working of the mines, and even of the railways, to private individuals on terms which shall give these private individuals an ample profit and shall secure the development of Alaska's resources, while at the same time —as in Chicago—absolutely safeguarding the interests of the public. This is, of course, the most desirable outcome. But if even Mr. Fisher, with all his ability and experience, is unable to devise a workable scheme of this nature, it will probably be necessary for the national government to operate the Alaskan railways. It has been suggested that it may even be necessary for the government to operate one or more of the Alaskan coal fields; but this last experience should certainly not be tried until it has been clearly shown that it is impossible to operate them to advantage by private action under government control. The Outlook, in expressing these various views, is also voicing Mr. Roosevelt's opinion. No more important domestic question confronts the country than this question of properly safeguarding and at the same time developing our great natural resources. As the Outlook has before pointed out, a mistake in tariff legislation may be remedied, but a mistake which leads to the loss or alienation of natural resources cannot be undone.

It Got Monotonous.

Success Magazine: A yellow Negro out in Kansas City decided that by barbering in the day time and fighting at night he could easily attain to great wealth. His first essay in prize fighting was against a shifty black with a good ring record. At the tap of the bell the black professional planted a straight left on the amateur's nose, and repeated the process some hundred times. By a superhuman effort the yellow barber came to a clinch, and his voice rang high in agonized protest:

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

The "Thinking in Bed" Habit.

J. C. Stubbs, director of traffic of the Harriman lines, has announced that he will quit the railroad business on his sixty-fifth birthday which occurs next year. He proposes to retire to an Ohio homestead, already selected, and spend the remainder of his life in the peaceful pursuits of a country gentleman.

The reason given for the retirement of the physically healthy and mentally efficient man is worth considering. Mr. Stubbs has seen his chief fall on death in middle life and has resolved to escape a like fate himself, if that be possible. He has determined to throw off the ardous cares of his profession before they prove too much for him.

Says Mr. Stubbs regarding the late Napleon of the railroad world: "Thinking in bed killed Harriman. He worked all day and thought out his problems at night." Whether this diagnosis covers all the facts in the case or not it is at least too true to be overlooked. We get a picture of a man, working at high pressure all day, still wrestling with his enormous problems after his quiet hours of toil had properly closed. When the rest of the house was quiet his restless mind was still planning campaigns.

One shrinks from thinking how many thousands of Americans are doing practically that sort of thing. They are carrying over their cares and troubles into the hours meant for refreshment. The head that wears a crown is not the only one that lies uneasy. Many a plain citizen finds himself scant of vitality today because he tossed half of last night in the attempt to formulate his plans or think out his problems.

If we fancy that we gain some light for our path in those still hours when the brain seems especially active, the practice means heavy loss in the long run. Nature will eventually take up a quarrel with us for the slight put upon her. Sleep, which we have denied and refused, wreaks her revenge by deserting us altogether. And of all sufferers, those from insomnia are perhaps most to be pitied.

There are some things which we should not, as a habit at least, think about after 10 o'clock at night. We should not, for instance, dwell upon our failures. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt have crept into the day. We have played the fool in this way and in that. Our mistakes should not be allowed to drive sleep from our eyes. With a prayer for forgiveness and a mighty resolve to do better tomorrow we should drown these things in oblivion.

We need not plan anxiously for the demands of the day that is coming.

"Take no thought for the morrow," said the great Teacher and Friend of men, "for the morrow shall take thought for the things itself; sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." A public man who had taken his own responsibilities very hardly once said to Mr. Gladstone, himself in the thick of a political crisis, "But don't you find you lie awake at night thinking how you ought to have acted?" Mr. Gladstone turned upon his interlocutor, and said, with a look of wonder. "No, I don't; where would be the use of that?" Where, indeed, is the use of it—for any of us?

Happy the man who can, at bedtime, quietly turn the key on that chamber of his brain holding his fears, his worries and his regrets and give himself up to "tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep." Having made his peace with heaven, his one duty is to rest, without fear and without reproach.

Worry, as both the physiologists and the moralists are telling us, is unalloyed waste. And how shall worry be conquered? Being a spiritual malady it must be attacked with weapons of the spirit. A resolute attitude of the mind will help. And then there must be cultivated and a spirit of trust in the great disposer of human lots, who suits the burden to the back, who designs the day for work and the night for rest, and who "giveth His beloved sleep.

THE PARSON.

Getting There All Right.

San Francisco Star: St. Thomas college at St. Paul, Minn., is one of the largest military schools in the United States. It is a catholic institution and is the pride and hope of Archbishop Ireland. One of the pupils is a Filipino boy.

One day not long ago the archbishop wished to speak to one of the professors and called the college on the telephone. The Filipino boy answered the ring.

"Is this St. Thomas?" inquired the archbishop.

"No; it's Pedro," replied the youth.

"Is this St. Thomas college I am speaking to?" demanded the archbishop.

"No: it is Pedro," the youth explained.

The archbishop sighed and then slowly and distinctly said to the youth: "This is the archbishop. I wish to speak to Prof. Jamieson."

"Who you say you are?" asked the Filipino.

"The archbishop, the archbishop," the churchman repeated with rising voice.

There was a short pause and then Pedro said: "Spell it."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A great man doesn't feel he needs flattery; he feels he can afford to give it.

If a man is rolling a barrel down hill he can grow! because it isn't shorter.

A man fond of toasting health and wealth stands a better chance of losing both.

The most that any one can hope to get out of life is a sure introduction to death.

A man who thinks his wife ought to make her hats would have a fit if she offered to make his ties.

Wynken, Blynken, and Nod.

Wynken, Blynken, and Nod one night
Sailed off in a wooden shoe—
Sailed on a river of crystal light,
Into a sea of dew.
"Where are you going, and what do you wish?"
The old moon asked the three.
"We have come to fish for the herring fish
That live in this beautiful sea;
Nets of silver and gold have we!"
Said Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

The old moon laughed and sang a song,
As they rocked in the wooden shoe,
And the wind that sped them all night long
Ruffled the waves of dew.
The little stars were the herring fish
That lived in that beautiful sea—
"Now cast your nets wherever you wish—Never afeard are we;"
So cried the stars to the fishermen three:
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

All night long their nets they threw
To the stars in the twinkling foam—
Then down from the skies came the wooden shoe
Bringing the fishermen home;
'Twas all so pretty a sail it seemed
As if it could not be,
And some folks thought 'twas a dream they'd dreamed
Of sailing that beautiful sea—
But I shall name you the fishermen three:
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

Wynken and Blynken are two little eyes,
And Nod is a little head.
And the wooden shoe that sailed the skies
Is a wee one's trundle-bed.
So shut your eyes while mother sings
Of wonderful sights that be,
And you shall see the beautiful things
As you rook in the misty sea,
Where the old shoe rocked the fishermen three:
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

A Hinckley dispatch says the people there were fighting forest fires all night and this morning, but all danger of destruction has passed. A Pine City special says terrific fires are now raging near there, over $15,000 worth of timber having been destroyed. The loss to farmers will be heavy from destruction of dwellings and farm buildings. Two schoolhouses were burned, the pupils barely escaping with their lives. The fire is approaching Pine City and 500 men are fighting it.

A PRINCE AND A CHIEFTAIN

By SAVOYARD.

He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth;
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent.

Perhaps as much in love as in admiration they called Allen G. Thurman "the old Roman." The appellation would better fit Roger Q. Mills. Thurman was dominated by his uncle, "Sam Bill" Allen, who forced him to condone if not advocate "rag money." It probably cost him the presidency, for had it not been for his speech of 1875, clamoring for greenback repudiation, it is not unlikely that "the old Roman" would have been president despite the Paynes, John R. McLean, the tariff ring and Standard Oil. In forensic debate in the senate Allen G. Thurman never met his equal in the opposing ranks, much less his master; but

Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Mills was made of sterner stuff. They called Roscoe Conkling the American Coriolanus; Mills was equally lofty and for principle's sake he would have welcomed the ostracism—exultingly surrendered place and power and wealth and fame.

* * *

The great Texan was a disciple of Thomas Jefferson. He saturated himself with the philosophies of the Sage of Monticello as Thackeray did with the history, the traditions, the letters and the manners of the golden age of Queen Anne's time. Turn him to any cause or policy treated of by our profoundest political thinker and Mills could elucidate the spirit of it "familiar as his garter." He put that test to every political creed and plan, was inexorable in the application of it and merciless in the solution of it. There was no compromise in him. He was a good hater, proud as Lucifer, brave as Hector, and stood four square to every wind that blew.

He entered public life at this capital, Dec. 1, 1873, as a member of the Forty-third congress and simultaneously with the re-entry upon that theater of Alexander H. Stephens, Lucius Q. C. Lamar and John Young Brown. Ben Hill, Davis Wilkerson and Joe Blackburn appeared two years later, and John G. Carlisle, Thomas B. Reed and William McKinley came four years later. At that time the G. O. P. marched under the banner of shirt and loyalty purged from all legislative corruption, cleansed from all political sin. It was the era of Credit-Mobilier, Sanborn Contracts, Loot and Stocking, Gen. Average, Freedman's Bureau, and all and singular other knaveries that plagued the body politic and were on constant expedition for an appropriation.

* * *

Mills had been not only a stout soldier, but brilliant in the field and was where valiant men were found, both in the Army of Northern Virginia led by Lee, and in the Army of the Tennessee led by Johnston and Hood. A native of Kentucky, he went to Texas, when he was yet a youth and was a capable and successful lawyer when the call to arms came. An exceptionally handsome man, he was as eloquent as he was brave and as dashing in the forum as he was splendid in battle.

And now Mills was an actor on a theater for which he was bounteously endowed by nature and formidably equipped by study. With a powerful understanding he combined a deep and fierce sense of justice, a vigilant and a fanatic honesty, a copious and a dramatic eloquence, and a courage that was at once defying and flawless.

* * *

After the most famous and grandly fought filibuster the house ever knew had defeated Ben Butler's infamous force bill, Mills joined the majority faction led by Morrison in the Forty-fourth congress, which would have given the country tariff reform if the dispute over the presidential succession and the death of Speaker Kerr had not displaced the tariff as the paramount. In that contest Mills played a brilliant part, seconding Proctor Knott in opposition to the eight to seven electoral commission. There was no greater constitutional lawyer in the land than Knott. He saw the situation clearly and said: "Why throw away a victory you have already won? The Democratic house will declare Tilden elected. The Republican senate will proclaim Hayes elected. That amounts to no election, and Article XII of the Constitution then prevails, the election is thrown into the house, and the Democratic house will choose Tilden." Had the Republicans hold the Democratic cards they would not have lost a trick; but the Democrats followed Randall and Hewitt instead of Knott and Mills and they did not take a trick.

There never was a more dramatic scene in a legislative body than that when Mills took the floor to oppose the electoral commission. With clarion voice, magnificent attitude and flashing eye he began:

I feel as one who treads alone
Some banquet hall deserted.

The effect was electrical, but the flat had gone forth. The Democrats were bewildered and walked right into the trap set for them.

* * *

Randall was thrice elected speaker after the death of Kerr, and packed the ways and means committee so as to make it impossible to tinker with the tariff. When Randall was the caucus nominee for speaker the last time Mills bolted, and that same day Pig Iron Kelley bolted Garfield, the Republican caucus nominee for speaker of the Forty-sixth congress. Randall was too much of a protectionist for Mills and Garfield was too much of a free trader for Kelley.

But when the Forty-eighth congress was organized Carlisle beat Randall for speaker in the Democratic caucus, yet Randall was powerful enough to beat the Morrison bill of that congress and he also defeated the Morrison bill of the Forty-ninth congress. Morrison was defeated for re-election in 1886 and Mills became chairman of ways and means of the Fiftieth congress. He brought in a bill providing for free raw materials and tariff for revenue only on the finished product ready for the ultimate consumer and passed it, though Randall mustered nearly two-score Democrats in opposition.

When Mills brought in the bill and took the floor to discuss it McKinley was recognized and hoped that the Republican side would allow the chairman of the ways and means committee to make his speech without interruption. "I invite interruption!" roared the Rupert from Texas, and he always did. When Harrison was elected president McKinley supplanted Mills as chairman of ways and means and brought in a bill revising the tariff up, an inveterate Republican habit.

* * *

The country repudiated the McKinley tariff in 1890 even more emphatically than it subsequently condemned the Payne tariff in 1910. Mills made a tour of New England, pleading for free raw materials and tariff for revenue only on the finished product, with the result that New Hampshire and Rhode Island sent solid Democratic delegations to congress. Only one Republican came from Connecticut, and the Massachusetts delegation contained a majority of two to one of Democrats. Thus for the first time in the history of the Democratic party a majority of congressmen from New England were Democrats, the Democrats having sixteen and the Republicans eleven. And there is not the slightest doubt that the Republicans would have had the majority if Mills had not stumped New England.

In that congress, the Fifty-second, the Democrats had the biggest majority any party ever had in that body, and Mills was the logical candidate for speaker, and speaker he would have been if he had allowed them to elect him. He was a candidate and his whole heart was in it, not for any personal vanity, but because he believed he incarnated a great issue. When the caucus was in session, the first evening, Carlisle, a senator, and Morrison, an ex-member, were in Mill's room. Mills was prostrate on a lounge and they thought him asleep. Sam Donelson rushed in and said that a certain member, P——, would vote for Mills if he got a place on rivers and harbors. "All right," exclaimed Carlisle and Morrison, "tell him he shall have it." "what's that?" yelled Mills. "Tell him no such thing. I absolutely refuse to have any slate." It was magnificent, but it wasn't politics. It was Roger Q. Mills from crown to heel, from skin to marrow.

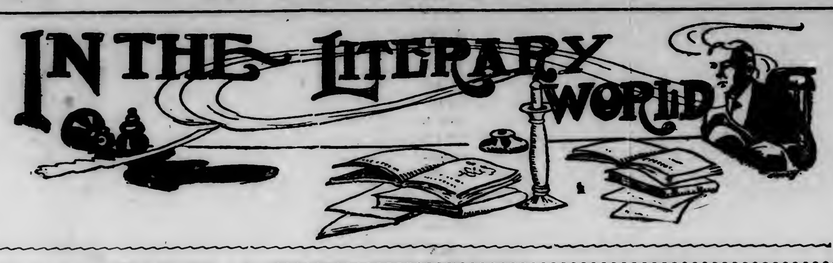
Crisp was chosen speaker, and except that Mills was the exponent of a great idea Crisp was the much more capable man for the place. Springer was made chairman of ways and means and brought in numerous bills providing free raw materials, the first wool, for which Mr. Bailey, of Texas, voted, as he voted for all the others.

On the issue of Millsism Cleveland was elected president. The Wilson bill was Millsism incarnate; but it was plastered over with party perfidy and party dishonor in the senate by Gorman of Maryland, Smith of New Jersey, and Murphy of New York, and Cleveland allowed it to become a law without his signature. Then the silver question came on to shove the tariff out of its paramountcy, just as the disputed presidential succession had in 1877.



Mills was elected senator, in which body he served until 1899. He entered public life poor, and he retired from it poor, and never statesman had cleaner hands or clearer conscience than his. He might have been a millionaire had he not scorned dirty money. But he died a wealthy man, wealth legitimately acquired by the fortunate development of some landed property he owned in Texas. He was a very great man, and his like is not in public life today.

And the King said unto his servants, Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?

IN THE LITERARY WORLD

THE GLORY OF CLEMENTINA. By William J. Locke, author of "Septimus," etc. New York: John Lane company. $1.30 net.

We get a hint in the beginning that if Clementina—painter of portraits at a great many pounds apiece and thirty-five years old—would groom herself a little she wouldn't be unattractive at all. But— "Her coarse, black hair straggled perpetually in uncared-for strands between fortuitous hairpins. Her complexion was dark and oily; her nose had never been powdered since its early infancy; and her face, even when she walked abroad, was often disfigured by a smudge of paint. She had intensified and perpetuated the crow's feet between her eyes by a trick, when concentrating her painter's vision on a sitter, of screwing her face into a monkey's myriad wrinkles." And her dress was in keeping. Such is our heroine—our truly Lockeian heroine.

And our hero—saints preserve us! "Ephraim Quixtus, Ph. D., was a tall, gaunt man of 40, with a sallow complexion, raven black hair thinning at the temples and on the crown of his head, and great, mild, china-blue eyes. A reluctant moustache gave his face a certain lack of finish." Such is our hero—our truly Lockeian hero.

Of course there are other heroes and heroines, like Tommy and Etta; but in spite of their charming love story the discriminating readers—who shouldn't, by any means, miss this delightful book—will retain chiefly in their affections the splendid womanhood of Clementina, the quaint charm of Quixtus, and that trio of sad dogs and human wrecks Huckaby, Billiter and Vandermeer.

How Quixtus, gentlest and kindest of human beings, became convinced that the world was a hollow mockery and that he was surrounded by tricksters with fell designs upon him, and decided to revenge himself upon the world by the most completely diabolical means imaginable; how he was aided in that devilish purpose by Billiter with subtle purposes regarding his person and purse; how the one man whom he determined above all others to blast left him impotent and abashed when he died, leaving a dainty, fairy daughter to Quixtus and Clementina; how the plot thickened around gentle Quixtus; how Clementina, aroused at last, emerged from her chrysalis of paint smudges and dowdiness in a butterfly blaze of glory to sweep the deck with baffled conspirators; all these help make up the story.

Whimsical, quaint, humorous, with subtly irresistible touches of character-drawing and deft, unfailing skill at massing of incident and working out of plot, it is Locke at his best. And Locke at his best, in our opinion, is about as good entertainment as anybody is putting into English these days.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS. By Kate Douglas Wiggin, author of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," etc. Boston: Houghton-Mifflin company. $1.25 net.

It is hard to imagine a better recipe for finding joy in living than that to be found in a book of people Kate Douglas Wiggin gets into her books. Though human, and with human failings, they are so delightfully and irresistibly dear and wholesome that to read a book like this is a tender experience in heart-warming sentiment—without sentimentality. Mrs. Carey, wife of a naval officer, is left a widow with four children and no means to support them with. They find a charming old house in a tiny New England village and make it their home. The fledgling of these young characters, the bringing out of her shell of selfishness of a supercilious young cousin, the splendid motherhood of Mrs. Carey and the deft revelation of the village characters, make up a story of great charm and interest. We wouldn't have missed Ossian Popham for a good deal, and we don't know when we enjoyed ourselves better than at Nancy's coming out party in the Hamilton barn. Mrs. Carey is the ideal mother, as Rebecca was the ideal child.

REDEEMED. By Mrs. George Sheldon Downs, author of "Katherine's Sheaves," etc. New York: G. W. Dillingham company. $1.25 net.

A husband, tiring of his wife and becoming fascinated by an opera singer, gets a divorce and marries the prima donna, who tires of him after years, when his wife is winning her way and will not marry him, John Hungerford discovers that he threw aside what he would like to get back, but can't. She helps him redeem himself, however. The story is told in the most conventional manner. The heroine has a "refined face," a "proudly poised head," and "a wealth of hair which lay in bright profusion above her white forehead" whose fit ought to be, of course. A strong ethical purpose and some power at story telling redeem many of the faults of the book.

Each story tells how a fire was started, how it could have been avoided, and how it was put out. While each story is interesting for the story alone, the book should have a good effect in view of the present interest in the enormous annual waste by fire from preventable causes.

THE BORDER BOYS ON THE TRAIL. By Fremons B. Deering. New York: Hurst & Co. 50 cents.

There is little left of the romantic Western life of which our forefathers delighted to read and in which they not infrequently took a part. The author of this series has, however, taken to himself modern conditions in this interesting section of the country in a vital way. The pages of this book throb with the strenuous outdoor life and pastimes of the ranch and range. The adventures of the ranchers and the boys and the strange strategy of Black Ramon, the Mexican cattle-rustler, make interesting reading. The story is thoroughly healthy in tone and appeals to manly standards.

Of Books and Writers

Among the more important Scribner publications set for September are the two notable works on art, "The Classic Point of View," by Kenyon Cox, and "Art in France," a new volume in the "Ars Una; Species Mille," international series of art manuals, by Louis Hourticq, inspector of fine arts in the city of Paris; Dr. William Newton Clarke's attempt to make plain the principles governing Christ's life and teachings, "The Ideal of Jesus;" Admiral Chadwick's two-volume work, "The Spanish-American War," which, though independent of his earlier volumes, "Diplomacy," comes under the same head—"The Relations of the United States and Spain;" a complete account of the development of football, from its very origin to the present year, "Football;" The American Intercollegiate Game," by Parke H. Davis, member of the Intercollegiate Rules committee.

* * *

To their well-known series of literary masterpieces, The Remarque Editions, the H. M. Caldwell Co., Boston and New York, have added three new volumes, "Ambition" and "The Beauties of Nature" by Sir John Lubbock, and "A Little Book of Eastern Wisdom" by Rev. Claude Field, M. A., a notable collection of epigrams, quotations, etc., from the immortal philosophers and sages of ancient times.

Some time ago, after thorough investigation, it was estimated that a New York family consisting of a man, wife and three children under fourteen, could maintain "a normal standard of living" on an annual income of $900. Speculation at once rose as to the number of families whose income equaled that sum. Scott Nearing, the economic writer of the University of Pennsylvania, determined to settle the question once for all, and after many months of labor he has incorporated the results of his studies in a book entitled "Wages in the United States," published by the Macmillans. The evidence which he obtains warrants the conclusion that a large portion of American workmen are unable to maintain an efficiency standard of living. Three-fourths of the adult males and nineteen-twentieths of the adult females actually earn less than $600 a year; or, more in detail, one-half of the men are earning less than $500 a year, three-fourths less than $800, nine-tenths less than $800, while less than ten per cent receive more than that figure. Of the women, one-fifth earn less than $200 annually, and three-fifths less than $325, while only one-twentieth more than $600.

The first novel of the long list of fiction which the Macmillan company has announced for fall publication is to appear Sept. 20. It is entitled "The Believing Years," and is written by Edmund Lester Pearson. The story has to do with the adventures of a group of country boys during the summer vacation.

On the same day a book for children is also to be published, Edna Turpin's "Honey Sweet," a sympathetic chronicle of the adventures of Anne, a little orphan girl, and her rag doll.

Following these two works of fiction, Richard Washburn Child's "The Man in the Shadow" will be published on the 27th inst. In this book are collected some of the best short stories of this author, who is generally recognized as one of the strongest writers of short stories among the younger generation of American authors.

The peculiar intimacy which readers sometimes claim with a favorite author, and which frequently leads to amusing results, is again exemplified in a letter received by Holman Day, author of "The Skipper and the Skipped" (Harpers). A woman writes to him: "After reading your work I feel acquainted with you, feel that you are good and kind." With this introduction she asks that he recommend a convent boarding school for her little daughter, and then suggests that she and the author of "The Skipper and the Skipped" collaborate in a literary enterprise, sharing the royalties—she to supply the story and he to contribute his name.

* * *

The following letter was received by the Harpers not long ago: "Inclosed please find application blank of Mark Twain's complete works on approval. I am very fond of reading, and my life has been so full of trouble since my marriage four years ago, I feel the need of Mark Twain's kindly humor to offset my troubles at this time."

"I am sure that Americans will like 'Havoc,'" says E. Phillips Oppenheim, in writing of his next novel which will be issued Oct. 7 by Little, Brown & Co. "It is a story of international intrigue founded on a plot related to me in a Parisian cafe by a secret service spy of one of the great powers. I regard it as one of my best novels thus far." Mr. Oppenheim, since his return to England from his American visit, has resumed his novel writing at his country home on the shores of the North sea.

The Ball Publishing company will issue on Oct. 2 a book on sociology by Arthur Ponsonby, M. P., entitled "The Camel and the Needle's Eye." Mr. Ponsonby was formerly private secretary of Prime Minister Campbell Bannerman. As may be inferred from the title the book treats of the problems of the unequal distribution of wealth. The same firm will issue on the same date "The Kasidah of Haji Abdu El-Yezdi," translated and annotated by his friend and pupil, "F. B." Kasidah, in Arabic, means couplets, and the poem is after the style of Omar Khayyam. F. B. are the initials of Frank Baker the pseudonym of Sir Richard F. Burton, the translator of the Arabian Nights. On the same date will appear "The Blew Book," by Augusta Wind, illustrated by Jack Goss; a book of limericks.

Roy Rolfe Gilson, the author of "Katrina," and "The Wistful Years," has just finished his novel, "Ember Light," which the Baker & Taylor company are publishing.

* * *

George Bronson-Howard, author and playwright, whose latest book, "An Enemy to Society," is to be published this fall by Doubleday, Page & Co., returned to New York the first part of September after having been on tour with his play "Snobs." Mr. Howard will personally supervise the rehearsals of the production of "An Enemy to Society," which also will be put on as a play about the same time as the book is published.

Although in London they say "You know, everybody has left town, and London is no more than an empty shadow of itself at this time," Mrs. Corra Harris, author of "The Circuit Rider's Wife," and "The Recording Angel" (the latter to be brought out this fall by Doubleday, Page & Co.) and her daughter, Mrs. Harry Leech, write that the British metropolis has been a kind hostess and that they have been able to see a great deal of English life. While Mrs. Harris remains in London, Mrs. Leech is making a tour through Scotland and Ireland.

* * *

Among the the fall publications of Doubleday, Page & Co. is "The Transformation of Krag," by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., a book that is expected to cause considerable controversy among clergymen and psychologists. Against his will the chief character of the book goes through a complete psychological change which the reader is led to believe comes from the man's soul.

Among the Magazines.

Scribner's Magazine for October has a brilliant colored cover by Franklin Booth, and a frontpiece in color—"October Hunting"—by Philip R. Goodwin. A real contribution to our knowlege of a great man is furnished by "General Grant's Letters to General Beale." These letters are the living memorial of a friendship which began in California in the early 50's, and lasted to the end of General Grant's life. The letters begin with General Grant's travels in Scotland, in 1877, and they follow the course of his life around the world and back to his old home at Galena, and then to New York and Long Beach. The picture presented by these letters is of a kindly, direct, simple, and forceful man whose opinions were founded on the clear insight of his nature. The new serial, "The Turnstile," which begins in this number, is by the well-known English novelist, A. E. W. Mason, author of "The Four Feathers" and "The Broken Road." This remarkable novel opens on a ranch in the Argentine, and gives a picture of life in that far-away country. The scene, however, soon shifts to England, and a great deal of the exciting story centers about parliamentary life. The author himself has been in parliament. Mrs. Wharton's serial—"Ethan Frome"—is concluded in this number with a powerful and tragic episode.

* * *

The American Magazine for October publishes the first installment of the autobiography of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin. It deals with the early life and first political struggles of one of the greatest fighting Liberals of this generation. It is crammed with adventures and vivid with intimate pictures of great men. Fiction is headed by announcement of H. G. Wells' new serial novel "Marriage," which begins in the November number. Mr. Wells stands at the head of contemporary novelists and students of the age, and "Marriage" is a startling analysis of matrimony by the one man who realizes its relation to modern society. In this number is also a dramatic newspaper story by Donald Hamilton Haines; a new and powerful tale of a girl who couldn't get work, by Edna Ferber; one of James Oppenheim's most vivid stories, and a fascinating contribution to W. J. Locke's adventures of "Aristide Pujol." "Kin" Hubbard and "Ed" Howe, perhaps the best characteristically American humorists now living, also contribute to the number.

* * *

The October Woman's Home Companion contains the first chapter of a new serial, "The Poor Lady," by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. It is a story of modern American life, and is chiefly concerned with two women—one, an ambitious and unscrupulous wife; the other, fine, high-minded and womanly. In the same number a well-known financial authority writes an article of interest and importance to every woman. He describes the snares set by dishonest business concerns to catch women investors, and tells many stories of real life illustrating his points. Other notable articles are: "Experiments in Spending," "The Girlhood of Madame Schumann-Heink," "The Moving-Picture Show," "Money-Making at Home" and "Women Painters of America." Splendid fiction is furnished by Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, Julia Truitt Bishop, Ernest Poole and Barr Moses.

* * *

"Passing the Love of Woman," by H. F. Prevost Battersby, in October Ainslee's, is a story of remarkable dramatic power and interest. Two men stationed at an Eastern army post are loyally attached to each other, and one of them becomes enamored of a woman who seems in a fair way to blight his career. The other, in order to check this, assumes a role of wild dissipation, even at the sacrifice of the good opinion of the woman with whom he is in love, in the hope of having his friend accept active duty at a distant post and take him as aid, thus removing him from the dangerous fascination of the woman he loves. The story flashes with brilliant bits of conversation and description of life in the Far East, and is one of those rare gems with which Ainslee's entertains its public.

* * *

The 10 Story Book for October has a number of first-rate sketches, "from grave to gay, lively to severe," but not so very severe. This magazine is intended to furnish a bright little "pick-me-up" for busy men and women, or weary travelers. Its stories are original, originally illustrated. This month "The Riddle of the World" (a woman's heart) carries the reader from New Orleans to the pyramids of Gizeh, with action (not overdone) all the way. There are some funny stories.

* * *

"Calla," by Inez G. Thompson, opening novelette of the October Young's Magazine, combines in its principal character the calm of the mountains and the nervous energy of the city. Calla is born in the country and, at the death of her mother, is left under the care of her rigid relatives who force the girl, by their pettiness, to seek a wider world. How she becomes the bride of a chivalrous young boy who brings her to the city and how she gradually develops from a crude, shy girl into a fascinating, deep-souled woman makes a story of rare charm. The husband and wife are but children, loving, and not realizing that they love, jealous, and not knowing what causes the pain, bewildered by the actualities of existence but never completely daunted and at last finding the joy of a great and enfolding devotion. The story is sprinkled with comedy, touched by tragedy and sparkling with life.

* * *

Gardner Hunting's serial story of Chicago life and business ethics—"The Little Fortune,"—now running in The Youth's Companion, is up to the mark of those we gloated over in the good old times of J. T. Trowbridge and Charles C. Coffin.

* * *

In the October number of Popular Mechanics Magazine there are 265 articles and 264 illustrations. Many of these articles describe new devices, others present new and easier ways of doing old things, and still others discuss the progress of the age and its problems. In aeronautics, the features of special interest are: Melvin Vaniman's attempt to cross the Atlantic ocean; development of the hydro-aeroplane; new aviation records and deaths and an automatic aeroplane stabilizer. Oscar P. Austin, chief of the United States bureau of statistics, discusses the subject of "Wastes" and argues that we, as Americans, are not such a wasteful people as is generally believed. Francis Buzzell, in a profusely illustrated article, describes a log "mansion" built near Chicago by an artist. The dock and harbor facilities to be provided at Panama are described in interesting detail. An article of more than passing interest tells of the "fly swatting" contest conducted at Washington, D. C., in which a 13-year-old boy had 383,400 dead flies to his credit.

* * *

The October Strand contains an excellent supply of fiction including stories by W. W. Jacobs, Richard Marsh, Leonard Larkin, Florence Warden, Lloyd Williams, and other well-known writers. Among the articles is an unusual item entitled "When the New Zealander Comes." It is an attempt at a forecast of London 3,000 years hence and it is excellently illustrated with drawings showing St. Paul's cathedral, the tower, the houses of parliament, the Law courts, Westminster abbey, and other well-known London buildings, in ruins. The author intimates that 3,000 years hence the chief article of exportation from England will be cabbages. An illustrated article dealing with the life of William Gillette is contributed by Wendell Phillips Dodge.

* * *

In the October Wide World Magazine appears a striking article entitled "Flight Days in a Burning Mine." Readers will recall the Cherry Mine disaster of Nov. 13, 1909, when nearly 300 men lost their lives. The narrative in the Wide World gives the experiences of a man who, with nineteen others, was imprisoned in the burning mine for eight days and lived to tell the tale. Driven away from the shaft by flame and smoke, the little band found the deadly "black damp" closing in about them and retreated to the farther recesses of the workings. Here by the advice of their heroic leader, they literally buried themselves alive, hoping against hope that rescue would come before the fresh air gave out. Finally even the solitary lamp refused to burn in the foul atmosphere, the men's brains began to give way from the fearful strain and death stood beside them. The story is told by one of the survivors.

* * *

George Pattullo's sketches of life in the Southwest, which are appearing in the Twice-a-Month Popular Magazine, deserves special commendation. They are artistic as well as thrilling; they have atmosphere and charm; and above all they are realistic. The stories are written around the sheriff of Badger, a very human fellow, quick to answer a call for sympathy and equally quick to "pull his gun" when a bad man cuts loose. "Telepathy" is the title of Mr. Pattullo's story in the first October Popular. "I heard you calling me," whispers the girl. But the sheriff declares he never said a word. It is one of those haunting little tales that cling to memory.

* * *

"Dr. Wiley and Pure Food" is the title of a story in the World's Work for October by Arthur Wallace Dunn of the long antagonism between "interest" and sanitary legislation at Washington. Mr. Dunn tells of the fates of some of the previous pure food bills that were submitted to congress before the pure food and drugs bill that was passed in 1906. There were plenty of them introduced, but a quietus was invariably put upon them by the corrupt packers' friends in congress, who found ridicule their most effective weapon. The Paddock pure food bill, for instance, became a standing joke under the name of the Paddock "poor feud" bill, and the Conger lard bill, introduced a little later, was rendered utterly harmless by Senator Zeb Vance, who made a paraphrase of a famous quotation. "Mr. President," he said, "the Conger lard bill is dead. 'Tis grease, but living grease no more!"

* * *

Writing in the issue of Harper's Weekly for Sept. 16, under the title "Boosting the Dinner Bill," Frank P. Ward describes the profitable business of running a restaurant. In the same number Edward Hungerford tells of the new science of railroading, what the staff system means, and what it is accomplishing. Charles Johnston continues his series of national humor articles in "A Scoffer on Mount Olympus." "American Opportunity in Europe" is the title of an interesting article by Godfrey L. Carden.

HE IS KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE, TOO

IRVING BACHELLER

In the commencement address which Irving Bachelier delivered at Spartansburg, S. C., his subject was "The Cheerful Yankee." At the close of the exercise one woman shook hands with Mr. Bacheller, declaring, "You seem to be a new kind—I've only heard of damned Yankees before." His latest book, "Keeping Up With Lizzie," tells how an entire village strained socially and financially in order to keep up with the extravagances of the grocer's daughter. College tuitions, European trips, new houses and automobiles become as contagious in Lizzie's home as measles and whooping cough. The story has been widely commented upon in press and pulpit, and is now being dramatized.

DULUTHIANS ARE MOST COURTEOUS TO TOURISTS, SAYS ONE OF THEM

"No Trouble to Show Goods" Seems to Be Motto of Every Resident of Zenith City in Dealing With Strangers.

"There is probably no town in the United States where the citizens, street car conductors, policemen, newsboys or others who are continually on the streets are more obliging in directing strangers about the city, than in Duluth."

That is what a tourist at the Spalding hotel said yesterday as he paid his bill at the desk and stopped to finish his cigar and prolong his visit with the clerk, with whom he had struck up quite a friendship.

"I've done a pile of traveling in my time," said the stranger, "and I notice a great many things about a city that others might not observe.

"For instance, when I get into a town I always want to visit the principal points of interest. I always ask. Sometimes the answers of hotel clerks are as short as the tail of a well-bred bull pup. It seems a hardship to talk about their town, and they have every appearance of nursing an in-grown grouch when they are reminded of it.

"It is different in Duluth. Everybody seems to have all sorts of time to talk about the city. The hotel clerk will get more friendly if you appear to be interested; the policeman seems to realize that after all he is useful in the community when he is asked for directions; the citizen is pleased to walk several blocks to put you on the right car; the newsboy forgets to answer a whistle to tell you where the postoffice is, and the street car conductor will instantly swallow his mouthful of lunch to tell you which side of the street a certain number is located on.

"Now, all those are good points, are they not?"

He was reassured by the clerk, and after watching the smoke curl up above his head for a moment, the man continued.

Caught the Fever.

"When I arrived in the city I wanted to see everything at once, so enthusiastic was everybody in telling me about the principal points of interest. I was inspired by their enthusiasm; it didn't seem as though I could begin my tour of inspection soon enough. I am going away now and while I haven't seen it all, I have seen enough to make me gurgle with enthusiasm about Duluth every time I have a chance.

"I tried several people out on the proposition of directions, deliberately tried to make them tired of me but each time it seemed less trouble than the first.

"For instance: I got into the habit of buying my cigars each day at a certain one of your cigar stores. In this store they keep a variety of postcards and I noticed a guide of the city on one of the shelves labeled 10 cents.

"Now it would have been an easy matter at my third or fourth visit for the clerk to refer me to this guide as the only proper way of finding out what I wanted to know about getting about the city. He made no attempt to force it on me. I should never have known that he had it if I hadn't seen it. He was as pleasant the tenth time I asked him questions as to how to get about the city as he was the first time.

"How different, not to say refreshing, this is after experiences in other cities. Why, one near-sighted old fellow tried to explain to me how to get over to Minnesota point and fearing that I did not fully understand him, took a leaf from a note book and spent several minutes writing out the directions.

"In other places the policeman looks bored, the newsboy looks at you in disdain and asks what part of Europe you are from; the citizen snaps that he is a stranger himself; and the street car conductor says he has not been long on this run.

"Now, growth and prosperity are going to come to a city like Duluth where everybody is so accommodating, cheerful, optimistic, obliging, patient, friendly, and ——" for want of a larger vocabulary of adjectives, he stopped.

"Another thing, your city is so well laid out that after a few trips about town any one can find his way about. It's easy to remember that the avenues run north and south and the streets east and west.

"I'll tell you right straight here that it all made a big hit with me. I know something about cities and never have I met a bunch of people who are so, well—what I said.

Chicago's Ignorance.

"Now down in Chicago the other day I was surprised at the ignorance of the people about their own town. I tried to get out to the Cub baseball park and I'll bet I asked at least six people before I got the directions I wanted.

"I wanted to go out to a certain park and although I was with a man who thinks he knows his city from one side to the other, we had to ask a dozen policemen and several pedestrians before we received our directions.

"Of course, Chicago is a big town, but even at that the people ought to know their town. Every person I asked directions of in Duluth knew just what to tell me and I got no bum steers, either.

"There's a lot of difference in cities and I like Duluth for what I have been telling you about.

"Furthermore, I'm a Duluth booster and glad of it."

He snapped his watch, picked up his grip and started in the direction of the station, leaving a trail of blue smoke and a bunch of interested people who had been glad to hear pleasant things about Duluth uttered by a stranger.

EVEN THE NEWSBOYS ARE PERFECT LITTLE GENTLEMEN.

DULUTHIANS WILL EVEN QUIT WORK TO BE POLITE TO STRANGERS.

TEACHING CHILDREN HOW TO PLAY IS NEW UNDERTAKING AT THE FRANKLIN SCHOOL

Teaching children how to play may seem at first blush to be a line of superfluous endeavor.

"How absurd!" the grown person says. "Playing comes as natural to children as breathing. When they get together, they play. Teaching them not to play would be much more difficult than teaching them to play."

F. N. Burrall, principal of the Franklin school, says that the supposedly omniscient grown person isn't nearly so omniscient as he believes he is.

"Children don't know how to play," said Mr. Burrall. "We have recess every day, and until we started teaching games, many of the children went out, stood around the playground until the bell rang and returned to the school room without having derived any benefit from the recess except that derived from having been in the open air.

"This year, we are making a feature of teaching children how to play. The teachers go out with the children, teach them games in which every child can participate, and arouse interest and action. We believe there is opportunity for good work in that direction and we believe we can make the recess periods much more beneficial than they have been in the past."

One wonders what have become of childhood's devotion to pom-pom-pull-away, one-old-cat, prisoner's goal, duck-on-a-rock and the other games that made playtime pass all too quickly in the days gone by. Mr. Burrall says the old games have their devotees, but there are other games in which better exercise may be obtained, in which more may take part and by which the objects of the recess period may be better served

PRODUCTION YET BELOW CAPACITY

New York, Sept. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today says:

Looking at the situation as a whole, it is apparent that the volume of general business is still much below producing capacity, and there is little speculative anticipation of possible future wants. What is not so clearly appreciated is that the everyday requirements of the American people, even on a more economical basis, are increasing with the normal growth of population, and that slowly but surely the gap between capacity and consumption is being bridged.

That capital is halted in entering upon large enterprises by the signs of the world unrest, which appears now in one and then another country, causing disturbance to the international markets, is plain enough, but business men are apparently learning to adjust their affairs gradually to these unsettled conditions and to do business while big problems are being solved.

Mill operations in iron and steel are quite well maintained, since new business shows no marked shrinkage, and it is estimated that the leading interest is working at about 75 per cent capacity. Further concessions in price are noted on virtually all finished products, although in the wire trade manufacturers are now asking slight advances over the recent low level. Numerous moderate-sized orders for rails are reported, the total volume reaching about 15,000 tons, while some 50,000 tons are pending, of which 30,000 tons are under negotiation for Argentina. Dullness still prevails in foundry pig iron. The improved call for dress goods and men's wear has been stimulated by the need of goods that were not ordered at the usual time and are now required for immediate use. Clothiers show more confidence and are increasing their orders, and fully 90 per cent of the looms in men's wear in New England are busy. The demand for woolens and worsteds in suitings for fall is steady. Agents can sell popular lines at advances, but staples are steady. Export trade in cotton goods has been very satisfactory.

Prospects for a continuance of the demand are considered bright, owing to the limited stocks abroad and at the mills.

New England manufacturers of footwear are quite busy on orders for prompt delivery. Staple lines are now receiving chief attention, and this adds to the strength of the market.

Trade in leather is only moderate.

COLONY WILL NOT SUCCEED

Colored Attorney Says There Is No Demand for Institution.

Claims Plan Is Impractical and Will Prove Failure.

To the Editor of The Herald:

There has been much discussion lately among both the white and colored people of this city over the question of a negro colony in Duluth.

As a colored citizen, an attorney at law practicing here, and being in touch with all classes of colored people here, I feel it my duty to say something on the subject.

According to advertisements in the daily papers, it seems that Mrs. F. G. German and others are trying to establish a negro colony somewhere at Lakeside in this city.

A negro colony is neither desired by the negroes or white people of this city. It is not desired on the part of the well-thinking negroes for a number of reasons, a few of which are the following:

First: All property owned by negroes located in what would be known as a colony, would be taken out of the real estate market to all but negroes. The average colored man's salary is less than $100 per month. Unless property in such a location was sold upon the monthly payment plan a sale of the same would be almost impossible; besides this, the price would be greatly reduced, while the taxes and assessments would be proportionate with the property in other localities.

Second: It is not necessary. The majority of the better class of colored people in this city own their property, and the few who do not, will in time. Besides, the average white man believes that all colored people are of one class, and where houses are built to rent or to be sold to colored people exclusively, those handling the property are more than likely to be looking for profit and therefore would be less likely to discriminate in favor of the better class of negroes, and the good ones would have to suffer for the wrongs of the lower class.

Third: The Zenith Co-operative association, a corporation, organized by colored people, was organized more than five years ago for the purpose of handling real estate generally and not for colonization purposes. It is not a building and loan association, and has no powers, under its charter, expressed or implied, to further such a scheme.

Lastly, the negroes themselves would have to be consulted. After a careful interview with a number of them, I have not found one who would live in a colony, if his rent was furnished free. Yours truly,

"The relations between the United States and Japan have been put on a perfect basis and there is nothing more to wish for in this regard," he said.

After hitting on several spots which proved to be wrongly calculated, Prof. Cogshall, chief astronomer of Indiana university, has picked on this as the center of population under the last census. It is on West Eighth street in Bloomington, Ind., on the premises of the Showers furniture factory. A stone pyramid is to be erected on the spot by Mr. Showers.

BUTTE & SUPERIOR STARTS BUILDING CONCENTRATOR

Nearly All Material Will Come From Basin Reduction Works.

East Butte Opening Up New Ore Bodies of High Grade.

Butte, Mont., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.—Workmen are engaged at the Butte & Superior property making the necessary excavations for the erection of the new concentrator. While none of the material has yet arrived, one of the local officials said a few days ago that by the time the ground was ready the material would be on hand. The machinery to be used will be practically all taken from the Basin Reduction works and will be removed in such a way as not to interfere materially with the treatment of the ore, although during the removal there will necessarily have to be some curtailment of the production. All the modern and up to date machinery in the Basin works used by the Butte & Superior company was placed there by the company, and under the agreement can be removed. The lease on the Basin works expires early in the summer of next year, and it is expected that the concentrator will be ready for use early next spring. It will be of 500 tons capacity and will be so constructed that units can be added at any time. It is understood that according to the present decision of the Butte & Superior company, after the lease expires, the Basin Reduction works will be abandoned so far as the treatment of Butte & Superior ore is concerned, and if it is found that it is desirable to treat more ore than the capacity of the concentrator an addition will be made at once. The Butte & Superior company is at present shipping 400 tons a day and this amount could easily be increased, as a very large amount of ore has been blocked out. The company is said to be earning net around $30,000 a month.

Raven.

Except by leasers little work is being done in the Raven mine. On the lower levels nothing can be done until the water is removed from the 1,300-foot level. The leasers working on the upper levels are doing a lot of development work and are getting out some high grade silver ore. Within sixty days a large new compressor will be installed, and then the mine will be unwatered and development work commenced on a large scale, as the company has now considerable money in the treasury.

East Butte.

The East Butte company is opening up some new ore bodies on the 1,000-foot level which are said to run around 7 per cent copper. Up to recently this level was never explored, and the work now going on shows that it is equally as rich as on the 800, 1,200 and 1,400-foot levels. On all these levels a large amount of ore is being blocked out. The company is maintaining a production of about 1,000,000 pounds a month from its smelter, and no effort will be made to increase this output until the market conditions considerably improve. All the ore treated at the company smelter, practically come sfrom the East Butte mines, the only custom copper ore being received coming from the Butte-Alex Scott. A new blast furnace is being installed which will, when completed, make three, but this new furnace will not be completed before next spring, and by that time it is hoped that the market conditions will have so far improved that the mine output can be increased and consequently furnish enough ore for the putting in commission of the new furnace. The big dust chamber, 300 feet long and more than fifty feet wide, will be completed about the first of the year. This dust chamber, which contains three flues, is for the purpose of saving all the fine copper dust which is now lost through the stacks. The company figures on quite a saving in the cost of production by the construction of this dust chamber. In speaking about the mine a few days ago Manager Rohan said that the property was never in better condition than at present and that with the new furnace ready for use the production could be increased to around 2,000,000 pounds a month.

Butte Central.

Work has been started on cutting a station on the 1,000-foot level of the Ophir mine of the Butte Central Copper company, the shaft sinking to that depth having been completed a few days ago. After the shaft has been lowered about thirty-five or forty-five feet to provide a dump and the station is completed, an electrically operated pump will be installed on the 1,000-foot level, and the cross-cuts will be run for the purpose of opening up some of the rich bodies of ore which Superintendent McConnell claims exist at that depth. The company is confining its shipping operations to the 300-foot level at present.

Curtailing Production.

Some papers and publications still continue to discuss the copper curtailment agreement, so called, and point out that it expired on Aug. 1 and wonder whether it will be continued. In view of the fact that the porphyry mines are running with a full head of steam. President John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated Copper company, while in this city a few months ago, made it very plain in a statement to the press that there would be no increase in production until market conditions improved and this can be depended upon, irrespective of what the so-called low cost porphyries are doing.

In some quarters there appears to be a belief that the various companies operating throughout the country entered into a hard and fast agreement to curtail the copper production for six months and that the time of the existence of this agreement expired on Aug. 1. This is not so. There was never any agreement entered into and orders issued for a general curtailment. When the demand for the red metal decreased through the consumers buying from hand to mouth, and consequently the surplus commenced to pile up, the various producers realized that it would be the height of folly to go on producing at full capacity when the market did not warrant such a course, so each on his own account commenced to reduce the production, and this reduction will undoubtedly continue by the big producers as long as the market remains in its present condition.

The porphyries may be producing a whole lot of copper, but the owners of the properties are tying up their money, as they cannot produce copper a cent cheaper today than the Anaconda company and make a reasonable profit on their investment.

Moulton Mine Closed.

It has been found impossible to treat the silver ore in W. A. Clark's Moulton mine at a profit and after experiments under different processes the mine has been closed. Previous to the decline in silver the Moulton was a money-making proposition and it was thought that with the modern methods of treating silver ore the mine could be again operated to advantage. A shipment of fifty tons was sent to Salt Lake for experimental purposes, but after a very extensive series of tests the conclusion has been reached that the ore cannot be handled at a profit.

North Butte.

An attempt was made to compel the North Butte Mining company to pay taxes on new property and improvements in addition to the tax on the net proceeds of the mine. The difference would have amounted to over $20,000 and the company, contending that it was unjust, took the matter into the courts and won.

Barnes-King.

The Barnes-King company has had a judgment of $5,000 recorded against it in an action for damages through a man falling down the shaft of the mine. The man who sustained the injury sued for $30,000 and the jury awarded him a verdict of $5,600. It is altogether likely that the company will appeal the case.

Pilot Butte.

The crosscutting from the Black Rock mine of the Butte & Superior through to ground at a depth of 1,300 feet under the Pilot Butte shaft will be completed in about another two weeks, which is considered record breaking time. Immediately on the completion of this work a crew will start upraising to meet the shaft sinking party, and before the first of the year Supt. Sheehan says the two parties will meet. No effort has yet been made to definitely determine whether the rich body of copper encountered when running thee crosscut is in Elm Orlu or Pilot ground. In going from the Black Rock to the Pilot ground a small piece of Elm Orlu ground had to be cut through, and while it is not certain it is believed that the ore body is in Elm Orlu ground.

Davis-Daly.

F. Augustus Heinze has been devoting his time for several days going through the workings of the Colorado mine of the Davis-Daly company, but he yet declines to make any statement as to the quantity of ore in sight or the quality of the rock being taken to the surface. He says that in the course of a couple of weeks the company will be sending 100 tons a day to the Washoe smelter, with results which will prove very satisfactory. When asked concerning the condition of affairs in the Ohio company in Utah, he refused to discuss the matter further than to say that new machinery was being added and that everything was running along smoothly.

BIG OUTPUT AT CRIPPLE CREEK

Increase of $516,422 for Eight Months Over Last Year.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 21.—The Cripple Creek 1911 output, as officially reported by managers of ore treatment plants, is as follows:

| Month. | Tons. | Value. | 1910 Value. |

The 1911 tonnage exceeded that for the first eight months of 1910 by 89,086 tons. The principal increase is in the cyanide or low-grade ore ranging from $1.50 to $6 a ton. The smelter grade and the mill or chlorination ores have remained practically the same, being the capacity of the plants to handle the product.

The dividend-payers for 1911, together with their total disbursements, are as follows:

|---|---|---|
| Acacia ..... | $ 14,389.89 | $ 133,899.40 |

The eleven public companies disbursing dividends this year have paid out to date a total of $22,485,798.39, or about half of the reported amount. This is exclusively of close corporations, private firms, lessees and individuals. The grand total of profits realized from the $291,605,959 produced by the world's greatest gold camp to date approximates $79,000,000, exclusive of sums reinvested in permanent improvements.

The 1910 total production was 804,573 tons of ore, worth gross $15,878,567. This year's production will be close to

ZINC REDUCTION PLANT AT NELSON

New Process Revives the Zinc Industry in British Columbia.

A. Gordon French, a prominent metallurgical chemist, announces that the French Complex Ore Reduction company, limited, will erect a plant at Nelson, B. C., for the treatment of the zinc ores of the Nelson and Slocan districts on a commercial scale by his new process.

In additon a factory will be built for making dry batteries from zinc and the black manganese oxide, which is a by-product of the process, also a mill for the manufacture of pigment from the pure zinc obtained from the complex ores.

Mr. French has operated a demonstration plant of five tons capacity the last twelve months under the management of George Fletcher, with highly satisfactory returns. He will not divulge any details of the process until certain patents have been secured, but it is given out that it results in saving the zinc in pure metallic form and manganese oxide in the same condition of chemical purity.

Figures produced by Mr. French indicate that the process will make profitable the operation of many properties in the district which are at present lying idle owing to the heavy penalty placed upon complex zinc ores by smelters. The company will ship the residue of the ores, containing the silver, lead and other mineral values to Trail or some other smelter near Nelson.

The demonstration plant is turning out zinc and black manganese oxide, largely from the complex ores shipped to Nelson by the Snyder electrical zinc smelter, which was built there in 1908, but which did not prove the success that was anticipated.

Advertising serves the double purpose of creating a demand and telling where it may be supplied.

OBSTACLE TO MERGER

Remaining Case Against Calumet & Hecla to Be Heard Thursday.

Favorable Showings Have Been Obtained By the Contact Company.

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Circuit Court Commissioner Marsch will hear the arguments in the Turner case in which the Calumet & Hecla Mining company is cited to show cause why a temporary injunction recently issued by Judge Wiest of the circuit court for Ingham county restraining the company from proceeding further in the proposed consolidation should not be made permanent. The Turner case was the third of several actions brought by dissatisfied shareholders in opposition to the merger planed by the Calumet & Hecla, and is the big and remaining obstacle in the way of a consumation of the merger plans at this time, a similar action brought by G. M. Hyams and a second by F. W. Denton et al being decided in favor of the Calumet & Hecla company. The hearing before Commission Marsch is set for Thursday, Sept. 28.

Old Colony.

The Old Colony Copper company has made a further disclosure of what is generally thought to be the extension of the St. Louis lode, but the drill borings here show little encouragement. This is in Drill Hole No. 9 which has reached a depth of 800 feet, and having served its purpose will be abandoned.

Contact.

The Contact Copper company continues engaged with exploratory work in the territory just east of the old Elm River tract. This land is held under option by the company which also holds the control of the Elm River tract. Several drill borings have been made and some favorable showings of copper ground obtained in a horizon believed to be identical with that opened in the acreage of the Lake North Lake and Indiana companies to the south and ten to twelve miles distant. The No. 7 drill hole is down 652 feet.

Adventure.

The Adventure Consolidated Copper company is actively engaged in shaft work with the object of reaching so-called No. 2 Lode by a crosscut on or about the 1,500-foot level. This depth has practically been reached and cross-cutting will be under way shortly. On the 1,000-foot level a cross-cut and drifts in the No. 1 Lode and a second unnumbered lode discloses good ground in the latter and a rather indifferent showing in the No. 1 Lode. The No. 2 Lode is expected to make a good showing and is in some quarters looked upon as the most likely in the Adenture acreage.

Mayflower.

The Mayflower Mining company is getting considerable encouragement in No. 15 Drill Hole which is down over 1,300 feet through several copper bearing lodes and beds. The deposits for the most part are narrow and a drill boring is not the most satisfactory determination of their character and value but the frequency of their occurrence and the several that have yielded cores carrying copper in very fair quantities would warrant further investigation by means of shaft and underground openings. No plans to this effect have been announced, but may be expected following the completion of present exploratory operations.

New Baltic.

The New Baltic copper company is drifting north in two separate and distinct veins of which one designated as west lode is revealing a most remarkable showing of copper. This is in the drift at the 950-foot level and about 1,050 feet from the shaft, the openng disclosing a width of about twenty-five feet in the copper shoot with the breast of the drift still in copper. The drift in the east lode at this depth is not showing copper and is in general unpromising. About 300 feet of work has been done here. The property is equipped with a small steam hoist, air compressor and all of capacity sufficient for present operations to a depth of about 500 feet. The management of the property is vested in Hayden, Stone & Co.

South Lake.

The South Lake Mining company is down forty feet in the shaft which is being sunk to reach the several so-called South Lakes lodes. The ledge has not been reached, but is expected at about sixty feet. A heavier pump was recently installed to handle the water which has been making quite freely in the shaft and no further trouble from this source is anticipated, the pump in a test, freeing the shaft of about twenty feet of water in less than three hours.

HEAVY COMSTOCK LODE OUTPUT

Showing for August at Rate of $2,500,000 for the Year.

Virginia City, Neb., Sept. 23.—The production of the Comstock district for the month of August, according to the Virginia City Chronicle, is undoubtedly the largest single month reported for several years; the figures of the gross ore values give a total of $177,656, which, wit hthe extraction of the various leasers, including that on Chollar and Potosi, brings the grand total to approximately $217,000.

The heaviest producer in the list has been Mexican, the gross value of the ore hoisted from that property being close to $94,000, which is nearly equal to the record month of that mine. The Ophir company is second on the list and has taken out ore valued at the impressive sum of $62,-000, which is a little above the average of that mine for recent months. Crown Point in Gold Hill is third on the list, and stoping there yielded close to $16,000. Union Consolidated fourth on the list and is credited with $5,220, having joined the producing class after many years of non-productiveness. The estimated output of Chollar, Potosi and other leasers, including producing claims in the Flowery and Brunswick, is $40,000.

WILL COST ONE MILLION

Cleveland-Cliffs Company's New Power System on Marquette Range.

Will Work Great Reduction in the Cost of Operating.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—At an expenditure which will exceed $1,000,000 there is being installed by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company a hydro-electric power system which will serve all of that corporation's mines on the Marquette range, a district in which this big independent concern is the largest operator. The work is in progress in the vicinity of the city of Marquette. The Carp river is being harnessed. Eight thousand horsepower will be developed. It is estimated by the engineers. The project is the second of its nature upon which Cleveland Cliffs capital nas embarked. A waterpower plant was built at Au Train falls, in Alger county, a year ago. This plant is smaller than that now being constructed and the electrical energy it develops is used, not in mining operations, but in manufacturing, for which purpose it is transmitted to the village of Munising.

The Carp river project is the most important of its kind ever undertaken in Upper Michigan. Much important and costly preparatory work has been done. This has included the installation of a great amount of electrical machinery at mines and shops, the construction of transmission lines and the establishment of two large central generating stations, equipped with steam plants and which will serve as auxillaries. Prior to the institution of operations at the river, itself, General Manager M. M. Duncan and Master Mechanic O. D. McClure devoted much time to an inspection of waterpower systems in this country and Europe. The plans and specifications of the engineers were prepared under their direction. Construction work has been much hampered because of a scarcity of labor. It has been progressing steadily the past few months, however, and it is the expectation the plant will be completed early next spring.

The dam harnessing the river will be approximately four miles from the power station. The difference in elevation is 600 feet. The site chosen for the power station is a mile from the point at which Carp river emptles into Lake Superior and is at the foot of a high hill known as Mount Mesnard. The dam is of reinforced concrete construction. It will be 120 feet in length and fifty feet wide at the base. The river ruis through a long gorge 100 feet in depth at the site of the dam and with the latter many feet in height a vast quantity of water will be impounded

Reduce Operative Costs.

While the waterpower project and the steam turbine auxiliary plants at Nagaunee and Princeton will cost the comapny an enormous sum, it is anticipated that this money will be returned with good interest in time, as it will mean a great reduction in the cost of operating. As soon as the waterpower plant is in commission some forty steam boilers will become idle. Only three men will be needed to operate the water plant, two in the power station and ine at the dam. Besides reducing the operating expenses, the new system will furnish much more satisfactory power than the steam equipment. In time every engine and pump in the mines and shops will be operated by electricity.

While it will not be the only one of its kfnd in the upper Michigan mining districts, the waterpower plant of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company will be the largest. As long ago as 1877 the Republic Iron company, now a subsidiary of the Cambria Steel company, installed a hydro-pneumatic plant on the Michigamme river, with transmission of about one mile, to furnish power for the operation of the Republic mine, Marquette range. In 1882 there was installed the hydraulic works which now serves the Steel corporation's big Chaplin mine at Iron Mountain, Menominee range. This plant is at the Upper Quinnesec falls of the Menominee river, three and one-half miles distant from the city. A few years ago the Victoria Copper Mining company installed a system whereby power for the operation of its mine is obtained from the Ontonagon river. In 1906 the Penn Iron Mining company, controlled by the Cambria Steel company, harnessed the Menominee river at Sturgeon falls and erected a hydro-electric station of 3,500 horsepower capacity, the transmission from which is three to five miles. All of these plants are in successful operation.

New Mining Town.

A little town which a few years hence will be the domicile of several thousand people is springing up at North Lake, four miles west of Ishpeming, where one of the newest mines of the Cleveland Cliffs company is being developed. More than a score of buildings have been erected the past two years. A score of other structures are in course of erection. These include fifteen double and two single dwelling houses, a miners' "dry" of large capacity, a warehouse and a laboratory with accompanying sampling house. Streets are being graded and are supplied with curbing and plots for shade trees and grass. The town will be a model, similar to the Cleveland Cliffs company's pretty proportions and the mine now being opened will in time be an important producer. The property entered the shipping list a few weeks ago. Such ore as is being produced is coming from No. 2 shaft, the deposit in the No. 1 shaft not yet having been reached.

The United States Steel corporation has added two diamond drills to the number it has had in commission in the Republic district of the Marquette range. Six are now in operation. Four of these are in service near the Riverside and Standard properties and two are puncturing the ground in the vicinity of Trout creek, six miles south. The Riverside and Standard were operated as mines on a small scale in the early days of the range. The Steel corporation reopened the Riverside a few years ago, but soon after the workings were pumped out, buildings erected and other preparatory work completed the lease was surrendered. It was assumed at the time that the underground showing was a disappointment. The property produced a good quality of ore when originally opened. The veins were narrow, however, and the mine in those days was unprofitable.

There has just been erected at Ogle-bay, Norton & company's Montreal property, in the Wisconsin portion of the Gogebic range, the largest hoisting plant that has ever been installed in an iron mine in this country. The engine is of 2,500 horsepower. The shaft of the engine is forty-three feet long and eighteen inches in diameter and is one solid piece of steel forgings. The Montreal mine in time will be one of the deepest if not the deepest in the Lake Superior iron region. It is bottomed now at 2,000 feet and the management plans to sink it at least 1,000 feet deeper. The monster engine is not any too large for the work it will have to do.

BIG TONNAGE AT THE INSPIRATION

Has 30,000,000 Tons of Ore of Two Per Cent Grade.

The latest revised figures on the ore reserves of the property of the Inspiration Copper company, which for the past three years has been developing a large low-grade porphyry ore body near Globe, Ariz., show that to date a total tonnage of 30,000,000 tons of ore of a 2 per cent copper grade have been opened up. In addition, development in the next six months is likely to still add further to this tonnage. The final figures on the reserves are given at 29,453,100, which, being estimated to contain thirty-nine pounds of copper per ton, will eventually show a yield of 1,150,-000,000 pounds of copper.

Engineers under the direction of C. H. Repath are now engaged in getting out plans for the new 5,000-ton mill. Mr. Repath has also under his supervision the building of new plants for the United Verde company at Jerome, Ariz., and Calumet & Arizona at Douglas, Ariz. He has also had under his charge the building of the Washoe works at Anaconda and the Tooele plant of the International Smelting & Refining company in Utah.

Development in the mine will naturally be slower until the plans for the surface equipment, especially the surveys for railroad tracks, etc., are more complete, as upon these plans the location of the main hoisting shaft depends, which in turn affects the grade of the drifts in the mine. As soon as these surveys are completed, the sinking of the hoisting shaft will be commenced and the grading for the mill will be started shortly thereafter. The production of the Inspiration mine will amount to about 45,-000,000 or 50,000,000 pounds of cop per annually.

TWO STRIKES ARE REPORTED

In the Baltimore and Comet Mines Near Boulder, Mont.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 23. — Two strikes have been reported from the Baltimore and Comet mines near Boulder, thirty miles from Helena. In the Baltimore mine, which lies three and a half miles north of Boulder and south of the old Comet camp, eight feet of steel galena ore has been encountered in a tunnel which the owners, all Boulder men, have been running. The lesses of the Comet in High Ore gulch, are removing ore from the upper workings and shipping it to the smelters. The Comet has reached a depth of 1,000 feet. Throughout the '80s and early '90s the Comet produced in gold, silver and lead about $12,000,-000, all of which was taken from a depth of 600 feet or less.

Operations in the vicinity of Hassel have continued since the recent strike in the Clark mine, which Joe Broderick and associates are operating. W. D. Green, a metallurgist, is examining the Silver Wave mine, and a representative of Easterners has inspected the Woods mine on Eagle creek.

The Libby district, the home of the Snowshoe mine and one of the best mining districts in the state, continues prosperous. The Snowshoe has been giving employment to about 100 miners. The tunnel at the new camp is 1,100 feet below the camp on Snowshoe creek and 700 feet below the lowest present working on Snowshoe creek.

William E. and A. J. Williams report a strike on their property in the Silver Butte district near Libby. They own a group of six claims lying between the property of the Vermillion Gold-Silver-Lead Mining company and the Silver Butte Mining company. The ore is gold and silver, the greater value being in gold. Assays of outcropping ran $18, and assays made when the tunnel reached a depth of twenty-five feet ran $108. The tunnel is now in thirty-five feet.

Several train loads of ore have been coming from the mineral belt south of Libby, most of the tonnage being concentrates from the Snowshoe mine. The Snowshoe has 2,000 tons of concentrates on hand and the mill is running day and night.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Another Step to Straighten Columbus-Hidden Fortune Merger.

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 23.—On Oct. 10 a foreclosure sale of the property of the Columbus Consolidated Mining company will be held here to satisfy a judgment for $502,000 in favor of the Continental Trust company of Denver. The sale is really another step in the work of straightening out the affairs of the Columbus and Hilden Fortune properties, which were merged over a year ago. The coming sale includes both the Columbus and Hidden Fortune properties and it is expected that the same interests will bid in these properties and further secure their right to them.

The Trojan Mining company has joined the list of regular producers in this section that ship their bars to the local United States assay office. Heretofore the company has been shipping most of its ore to Denver for treatment, some going to the Lundberg, Dorr & Wilson mill at Terry, but since the Trojan's mill, purchased from the American Eagle Mining company and remodeled, has been in operation, the product can now be brought to Deadwood. The New Reliance Mining company, which only recently commenced operations in Annie Creek, is also shipping its bricks to the Deadwood assay office, which increases the volume of business here. The receipts for the first week of September at the government assay office here were larger than at any time in its history, sixteen bars being received, ranging in value from $4,000 to $33,000. The production from the Black Hills mines now, exclusive of placer gold, is exceeding a rate of $10,000,000 a year, by far the largest in its history.

A horse whim and pump are being installed on the Jungle property in the Custer Peak section for further development. The shaft has reached the 100-foot depth and has penetrated some fine copper carbonate. The copper ore taken from the 65-foot level is richer than any heretofore found on the property and can be used in the Osterman smelter at Galena.

Arrangements are being made by the Shermans, J. C., Frank and Charles, to resume work on the Anna Queen in the Custer Peak district as soon as pumping facilities can be obtained. The shaft is down ninety feet, at which depth the vein which showed free milling gold in a quartz rock assaying $25 a ton was recovered. This vein was first found at a depth of thirty-five feet, but was lost in a fault and has widened out appreciably at the lower depth.

"I CAN'T QUIT" IS CRY OF THE DRINKING MAN

Neal Treatment Is the Help He Needs.

Ethical Aid Which Takes Away Liquor Appetite—Given at the Neal Institute.

Those who have never felt the gnawing, craving desire for liquor cannot understand why many a man who honestly tries to stop so quickly falls back into old, excessive drinking ways.

"I can't quit," is the despairing cry of many a victim of alcoholic bondage.

Advice isn't what is needed by a man who is "on fire" with desire for liquor. He needs the right kind of medical help — the Neal treatment which is saving hundreds every month at three score Neal Institutes in American, Canadian and Australian cities.

Superior possesses one of these recognized international lighthouses for the saving of drink victims struggling in the breakers of persistent, resistless appetite.

What is commonly known as "drink appetite" is really the craving caused by the accumulated alcoholic poison in the system of the drinker. Nature cannot expel this poison unaided. More drink but temporarily satisfies. The Neal Treatment —a harmless vegetable remedy taken internally, and administered by regular physicians with positively no hypodermic injections — neutralizes, then elliminates this poison and destroys all the old appetite, no matter how long the victim has been indulging in drinks.

At the Superior Neal Institute guests enjoy all the privacy and comforts of home, hotel or club. Names are never divulged. Home treatment can be arranged for those who prefer it.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE LYCEUM

Vaudeville will be presented at the Lyceum for the second week commencing Sunday matinee. As the feature attraction for the week Charles Warron and Harry Seymour will present their hilarious travesty, "Quo Vadis Up Side Down." While the far-cite does not resemble the famous religious play yet the features contained in it would have made Nero laugh, it is claimed. "The many funny situations throughout the whole performance create the most laughable effects imaginable, while the humorisms are clear and original to a superlative degree," says a recent criticism. Messrs. Warren and Seymour need no introduction to the theater-going public of this city as they have appeared here with some of the biggest productions that have ever visited this city and they have made a reputation for themselves as comedians from coast to coast. In speaking of "Quo Vadis Up Side Down," the Cincinnatti Inquirier said: "Vaudeville is said to afford a greater opportunity for originality than any other form of amusement and as we are all born with a desire to behold something new continually, hence the popularity of vaudeville. Vaudeville has seen many original and clever skits in which the sole object was to cause laughter but it remained for Messrs Warren and Seymour to present the original in the highest degree. They are presenting a travesty at the Empress this week called 'Quo Vadis Up Side Down,' which is without a doubt the most humorous thing ever presented at that popular theater. Yesterday it had three large audiences on the verge of convulsions and it almost stopped the show at each performance. Words are inadequate to describe this clever piece but those who see it will long remember it as about the funniest thing they have ever witnessed."

One of the most novel musical virtuosos that ever came to Duluth is Luigi Dell 'Oro with his accordion and foot organ. He is rather corpulent and the effort of playing is such that he leaves the stage in an almost exhausted condition. Those who have seen him do not wonder at this for there is "something doing every minute he is on the stage," as the performers say. He is a native of Lecco, Lombardy, and as a boy showed marked musical talent and at the age of 8 years commenced playing the piano and soon became an excellent musician. When but a young man, Dell 'Oro was assaulted by foot pads while on the way home one night and was stabbed on the head and right hand with a result that his right thumb became stiffened so that piano playing was out of the question so he then turned his attention to the accordion. The instrument which he uses is the only one of its kind and was made especially for him. It contains 170 different reeds and each key is double. The harmonipede or foot organ is one of his own invention. Dell 'Oro is a composer as well as a musician and has appeared before some of the noted personages in Europe. His repertoire is said to be very evenly balanced, consisting of both popular and classic selections.

The winsome prima donna, Mondane Phillips, is making her return appearance in Duluth with this bill. Miss Phillips will be remembered for her notable success in "Havana," which toured the Pacific coast and Northwest last season. She has entered vaudeville with a series of clever imitations taken from life, giving them in a manner that is peculiar to herself. Miss Phillips has a stunning figure, a pretty face and a fetching smile which wins her audience from the start but better still she has a voice. Miss Phillips's vaudeville debut is also marked for the originality with which she presents her various specialties. She goes through the greater part of her performance without leaving the stage. It removes the stiffness of singing and marching off and on again in the stereotyped manner.

"New surprises are always welcome in vaudeville but rarely does one behold such an extraordinary athletic and gymnastic exhibition as the one presented by Burgos & Clara," says a Milwaukee critic. "These artists were seen here several years ago but since that time they have appeared at the New York and London hippodromes and have developed a really wonderful acrobatic specialty. They appear in western costumes with a most superb scene and effects." Their work consists of lariat throwing, head and hand balancing, and other acrobatic and equilibristic exploits. They have become great drawing cards in the East and should meet with the approval of the Duluth patrons of vaudeville.

As the extra added attraction, La Verne Barber's Players will present the rural playlet, "The Man Who Knew." Real rural comedy dramas are rare. Eliminating the imitations, there are two or three classics. All of these required a cast of not less than twelve people, usually four acts and nearly three hours to tell the story. According to Eastern critics, in development of plot, dramatic climax and artistic ending, La Verne Barber in his "The Man Who Knew," has succeeded in creating and sustaining an interest equal to that gained by the most famous rural comedy dramas, and this he has done in exactly eighteen minutes with just four people. The story of the play hinges on the heart theme of love for home and loyalty to rural ties against the lure of the city's wiles and ways. The story is told in a new and refreshing manner, is one wherein a country boy, about to be lured from his sweetheart to a distant metropolis by the wiles of a clever city girl, is saved just in the nick of time by accidentally overhearing the pathetic tale of an older man's mistake. This confession is dramatically forced from the lips of Uncle Clem, a country storekeeper, stage driver, and general all-round rustic character, of a rather unusual type. The part of Uncle Clem is played by the author and producer of the sketch, La Verne Barber. Miss Helen Mansfield artistically portrays the part of Mabel Vanderlin, while the parts of Nell Henning, the village belle, and Billy Murray, the country boy, are in the capable hands of Miss Madeline La Fere and Thomas Patton. Eastern critics are lavish in their praise of "The Man Who Knew," and speak of it as one of the hits of the season.

The moving pictures are of the usual high order. A matinee is given daily at 2:30 and night performances 8 and 9:30. Seats may be reserved one week in advance by either 'phone. A special school children's matinee is given every Saturday at 2:30. Special attention paid to the entertainment of ladies and children at all times.

The improvements at the Empress are progressing rapidly and when that theater opens its doors on Saturday, Sept. 30, the public will have an opportunity of witnessing vaudeville performances in one of the prettiest and most comfortable theaters in the Northwest.

AT THE ORPHEUM

It will be almost a straight comedy bill that the Orpheum will present next week.

Two of the biggest comedy acts on the circuit at the present time are featured on the bill. These are the cast of Edward S. Reynard & Co., and the Arlington Four.

The ordinary ventriloquist is content to appear before the drop curtain with one or two dummies, which he sets on his knee and proceeds to carry on a more or less humorous conversation with them. It is generally less humorous, for the vaudeville patrons have grown weary of such acts. Edward F. Reynard is a ventriloquist, but he presents no such act as this. He is called "the ventriloquist with a production," for during the progres of his act an entire sketch is given with the assistance of his automatons, which are claimed to surpass in engenuity of construction, anything of the kind ever seen on the circuit. He carries no less than five assistants, and while the work of Reynard out in front provides the laughs, the work of these five busy assistants behind the scenes is no less important to the success of the act.

The opening scene shows a farmyard and a corner in a country village just before the break of day. A chore boy sitting on the edge of a well opens the fun, and Mr. Reynard carries his audience through the day with the automatons representing funny country folk. There is a fire department run, and other odd features, the finale showing the meeting and the fighting of the neighbors' cats on the housetops, and their untimely end at the hands of the enraged inhabitants. All of the incidents are acted out in a realistic manner by the automatons, who talk by reason of the ventriloquil powers of Mr. Reynard. It is easily the biggest ventriloquist act the Orpheum has yet shown, and it is claimed to be one of the biggest comedy hits on the entire circuit.

Another big comedy hit is expected to be provided by the Arlington Four, composed of Messrs. Leever, Lee, Manny and Roberts. They are a singing and dancing quartet of messenger boys, who sing popular songs, and introduce some dancing and comedy that are claimed to be out of the beaten path. This messenger boy quartet is well known in vaudeville, and was a great favorite with Orpheum circuit patrons a few years ago, although it has not been seen in Duluth.

James Augustin and Annie Hartley are "barrel jumpers extraordinary." They have invented a number of difficult jumps, including backward jumps, forward jumps, jumps blindfolded, and jumps taken singly and together. They somersault from one barrel to another, and each one is placed higher than the one before. It promises to be a novelty in the line of athletic feats.

A sketch by the editor of Munsey's magazine and presented by a company headed by Gilbert Miller, the son of the famous actor, Henry Miller, ought to be a good attraction in the sketch line. The sketch entitled "Coralled" will be presented next week by the Gilbert Miller players. The sketch is written by Robert H. Davis, the editor of Munsey's and the author of "The Family" and "The Welcher." Gilbert Miller is the son of the actor-manager, Miller, and the elder man is said to have personally supervised the production. A strong company of players supports Mr. Miller. The story deals with an incident in a Western mining camp, and the cast of characters includes an out-of-doors Western girl, a young man, "The Keno Kid" and the sheriff. The company carries its own scenic equipment which is said to be adequate, and the playlet has received some very favorable criticisms along the vaudeville path.

Lynch and Zellar are two young men who are claimed to have boiled a long club juggling act down to a very few minutes, by working at top speed throughout their allotted time on the stage. They have been given the title of "The Bang Bang Boys" on account of the celerity with which they work, and they don't waste any time in preparations after they appear before the footlights.

Orpheum patrons will remember Miss Jane Boynton, who appeared here last season with the team of Boynton and Burke. She has a new act and a new partner this season. Miss Ivy Davis is her team mate this year, and they present a double pianologue. Her new partner is claimed to be not only of very attractive apperance, but a very clever pianist as well. "They have cleverness, personality and appearance in their favor to start with," said a Chicago critic, in speaking of their act. Several of the songs used were written by Miss Boynton.

Two types of perfect physical manhood are Kramer and Spillane. They are called "The Herculean Gymnasts," and they will present an act consisting of hand balancing, muscle posing, lifting and general gymnastics. Sam Kramer is claimed to be the most wonderfully developed man in America, physically. He was for a time physical director of the Alliance Athletic club in New York city. In spite of their huge muscles, they are claimed to be supple and agile.

The motion pictures are becoming one of the most popular features of the Orpheum bills, since the new service was inaugurated. The pictures show current news happenings from all parts of the world.

Monday evening a party of Minnesota National Guard officers will attend the Orpheum, and the orchestra has arranged a special military overture for next week in their honor.

For the week of Oct. 1 there will be another double headline bill, with Willa Holt Wakefield as the feature act, and Rolfe's Rolfonians, a big musical act, as the second headliner.

COMING LYCEUM ATTRACTIONS

Probably no other star in light or comic opera ever enshrined herself so permanently in the hearts of theatergoers as did Grace Van Studdiford, when she appeared in "The Golden Butterfly." And now, after an absence of two years, it must be very gratifying to her to return to the scenes of her former great triumph and be greeted by crowded houses everywhere. Her present vehicle, the Parisian comic opera bouffe, "The Paradise of Mahomet," was declared by Metropolitan critics to be even better than the notable, "The Golden Butterfly."

Miss Van Studdiford will appear at the Lyceum theater Saturday, matinee and night, Sept. 30, when her glorious voice, with its wonderful sweetness of tone, will be heard in a number of selections, the musicianly qualities of which can be imagined, as they are the work of the famous French composer, Robert Planquette.

Harry B. and Robert B. Smith Americanized the book and lyrics of this imported offering, which enjoyed a run of two seasons at the Theater des Varieties in Paris prior to its successful presentation at the Herald Square theater in New York city last season.

The two scenes of "The Paradise of Mahomet" are laid in Constantinople and are redolent of the sensuous luxury of the Orient. It is said that Manager Daniel V. Arthur has provided a production of regal splendor.

The plot treats of the attempt of a young prince to frustrate the plans of a shrewdish aunt to marry off her beautiful niece to a designing Englishman. With the aid of a gypsy girl who is in love with the Englishman, and his American chauffeur, the prince administers a sleeping potion to the entire wedding party and carries the prospective bride away to his palace. Then to reconcile her to her presence there the beautiful maiden is told that she has died and is in Paradise. Search is instituted by her for her former husband, who is supposed to have been drowned and whom the prince masquerades to represent. Complications ensure immediately, but, of course, in the end true love triumphs.

There are many songs in "The Paradise of Mahomet" that lift it well out of the category of the usual musical offerings. Some of the best numbers naturally go to Miss Van Studdiford, who, in the role of Bengaline, sings "My Wedding Day," "When His Eyes Look Into Mine," "Forgive and Forget" and "The Rose of the Orient." Among the topical songs are "I've Got to Give Her Her Own Way," "I Can't Get Enough," "When the Cat Comes Back" and the sensational hit of the piece, "There's Something About You, Dear, That Appeals to Me." The last named song quickly became a favorite last season with New York theatergoers, who welcomed it as the legitimate successor to "Every Little Movement" and its predecessors.

Prominent in the cast are Laura Burt, John J. McGowan, Florence Rother, Edward Mora, Florence Kolb and Hudson Freeborn. As in all of the companies that Manager Arthur sends on tour, an exceptionally well trained and beautiful chorus is a feature of the performance.

Joseph F. Sheehan, with a company comprising the foremost artists on the American stage, will be heard at the Lyceum theater Monday evening, Oct. 2, in the world's famous comic opera, "The Love Tales of Hoffmann," which is said to be the greatest comic opera the world has ever heard. Not only in New York and Chicago and other cities in this country, but in London, Paris, Berlin and other music centers of Europe it has caused the greatest enthusiasm. It was first given in this country by Oscar Hammerstein at the New York Manhattan opera house, and is said to have been the turning point in that great impressario's career. It is one of the few comic operas that has ever been given at Covent Garden, London, and every time it is produced there the performance is sold out weeks in advance. "The Love Tales of Hoffmann" is in a class by itself. It cannot be called a grand opera, neither is it strictly speaking a comic opera, being rather a combination of the two. Hoffmann, a dissipated young poet, is discovered in the opening scene leading a drinking chorus in a wine cellar. Some one suggests that he entertain his fellow revellers by telling the story of his three love affairs. The poet consents and the following three acts show the enactment of his story, each act depicting one of his love affairs.

The music is of a kind that is hummed and whistled, the opera appealing alike to music lovers as well as the average theatergoer seeking entertainment. For the epilogue the scene returns to the tavern. Hoffmann, his story ended, begins a jolly drinking song, at the close of which he falls senselessly intoxicated across the table.

The company with which Mr. Sheehan has surrounded himself is without doubt the most notable ever heard in English opera in this country. In addition to the great tenor himself, who will sing the role of Hoffmann, the drunken poet, the cast includes the greatest artists on the American stage today. Miss Gladys Caldwell, the prima donna soprano, is conceded to be one of the foremost English singing sopranos on the American stage. Many competent critics compare her colature work with that of Tetrazzini. Miss Marion Walker, who plays the role of Niclausee, the boy friend of Hoffmann, is the famous contralto whom Mr. Sheehan secured last season from the Metropolitan Opera company. Charles Swickard, who was for years leading baritone of the Tivoli Opera company of San Francisco, is not only a great singer but is one of the finest actors on the operatic stage. Francis J. Tyler, a former Henry W. Savage star, is another notable member of the cast, which includes a half dozen others of like caliber. The chorus is worthy of special mention and is said to be, both in voice and looks, the finest chorus in America singing in English opera.

By special arrangement "The Bohemian Girl" will be sung on Sunday night, Oct. 1.

• • •

The amusement seekers of today like to see on the stage those things with which they are familiar in real life. No more convincing proof of this truism can be found than in the continued prosperity of "The Fortune Hunter," now in the third year of phenominal prosperity. "The Fortune Hunter" comes to the Lyceum soon.

• • •

The Kirke La Shelle production of "Checkers" opened its season at Finlay, Ohio, Sept. 14, going from there up through the Copper country, that is, over the C. A. Marshall theater circuit, playing Duluth and direct to the Pacific coast. The company numbers twenty-five people, including Dave Braham in his original role of "Push Miller" and Hobert Cavanaugh.

• • •

Walker Whiteside and May Irwin are on the books for early appearance at the Lyceum theater.

• • •

The company that will tour the West under the management of the Authors' Producing company in Charles Klein's "The Gamblers" opened their season on Sept. 15 at Asbury Park.

• • •

Ralph Ramsay, who plays Hezekiah Jenks in the Western company of Edgar Selwyn's comedy, "The Country Boy," is the son of Ralph Stuart, the well-known leading man. Mr. Ramsay made his debut on the stage in "The Third Degree," playing Howard Jefferies, Jr.

• • •

The characters of James Forbes' newest comedy, "The Commuters," are taken from men and women who ride to and from the city on monthly tickets. "The Commuters" will be seen at the Lyceum theater this season.

• • •

The first road tour of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," as planned by its producers, Cohan & Harris, will be one of the most comprehensive contracted for a theatrical organization in recent years. Duluth is included in the tour.

• • •

Montgomery and Stone will make a tour in what is understood to be the most popular of their successes, "The Old Town." They take with them their complete New York company and one of the most elaborate productions seen in the West.

• • •

Lyman H. Howe's moving pictures of various places in the world will be seen at the Lyceum again this season.

AT THE AUDITORIUM

Never before in the history of skating in Duluth has anything proven so popular in the roller skating line as the big masquerade and skating carnival held at the Auditorium rink Thursday evening. The big rink was crowded with skaters, and the balconies overlooking the spacious hall were filled to overflowing with interested spectators. Roller skating has taken hold here, both because of the popularity of the sport and also because the skating is held in a rink that has every modern convenience. One visit to the Auditorium makes the visitor want to go again. Tomorrow the grand march, both in the evening and afternoon, will be back on the boards, with special music for the occasion. Next week come the Vernons.

VAUDEVILLE FREIGHT

(By Bert Levy.)

I sit by my window at the Spalding looking down at the Pullman where the rest of the bunch are asleep on the siding. A nearby poster reads, "International Vaudeville," and in close proximity is a train of cars labelled different kinds of merchandise, perishable and otherwise.

Duluth—asleep and hugging the green hillside is as blissfully unaware of the existence of the human freight as it is of its carloads of eggs, butter and bacon and it occurs to me that a word or two of the man who lands at your door every Sunday, artists, fresh from the markets of the world, would prove of interest.

The Orpheum—Octopus like spreads its arms all over the world, till it is almost impossible for a man or woman to do some new stunt in Berlin, Moscow, Vienna, Paris, London or Des Moines, Iowa, without having to repeat at some time in the future in Duluth. Like a vast network of rails penetrating all countries, the Orpheum railroad must carry its passengers through this city and very few of its citizens dream of the vastness of the organization which has made the juggling of clubs, the turning of

The Man Behind.

The moving spirit, the power behind the throne of this organization is Marton Beck and a signed set of rules on each dressing room door reminds the artist that he watches over the personal conduct of each performer and that the use of the word, "dam," "slob," or "sun of a gun" on any of his stages, or his other misbehaviour in the streets of the city is visited with severe penalties.

I have been asked to write a characteristic sketch of the man, whose presence in the theater at Budapest, or in Hamburg, Dresden, Paris or London has caused the whole bill to "limber up" and do their best. An acrobat, missing a trick in his presence despairs of getting the Orpheum time and many are the stories told of Beck's sudden appearances in out-of-the-way corners of Europe, causing consternation among the performers when his presence became known.

The man who made the Orpheum is of medium height, stout well set up and exhibits a face which characterizes the one word, determination. It is this determination which has blazed a trail of Orpheum theaters right across this continent and caused them to flourish—fed as it were, by the best vaudeville food—shipped and railed by his trusted lieutenants from the Steppes of Russia, the provinces of England, from every little hamlet in Europe, in fact from anywhere where human beings grow.

Presently the fruit, eggs, ham, bacon, etc., in the freight yards below will be distributed throughout the now sleeping city. And presently the human freight will be distributed in the form of laughter and tears, each individual on the bill striving not only to please the citizens but on his mind is the effort to please the man—the power behind the throne; who keeps tab on each round of applause, each bow, each encore, per medium of local managerial reports.

Vaudeville a Business.

Vaudeville, now adays is a business, the artist being the salesman, the manager the merchant. The salesman making the best record is esteemed the most valuable to the merchant. The performer registering the best results is accorded the position of a standard act and is in demand accordingly.

Of course, the manager educates the public just as the merchant puts forth a new stove or a unique towel rack, and Martin Beck has stood sponsor for Vesta Victoria, Alice Lloyd and other artists of like caliber whose work was an unknown quantity in this country until he introduced them and educated the audiences to appreciate them.

A strong trait in Martin Beck's character is his organizing power. It is this characteristic of the man that sends officials of the Orpheum circuit to stand by while the artists and their baggage leave by the late night trains for their next stand. He leaves nothing to chance and even before the performance starts on the first day of the week, stage managers chronicle on special forms the next week's movements of all performers, their baggage, their place of residence, etc., for the artistic mind is notoriously careless of "next week" and though an artist balances a billiard cue on his eyebrow with marked precision fourteen times a week he is very apt to forget the amount of excess baggage he carries or the hotel he resides at.

Run on Time.

It is hard to convey the lay mind the fact that a vaudeville entertainment is run on "train schedule" time, i. e., that a performer goes on the stage and leaves it by the tick of a watch. The business like way an Orpheum show is run is as methodical as a cash register. In fact the time that an act goes upon the stage in Duluth is set in the main Orpheum office in the Putnam building, Times Square, New York city and that time is rigidly adhered to. The misuse of a word, a piece of stage business considered to be offensive is carefully eradicated and it is chronicled in every Orpheum house where the artist may appear in the future so that there is no danger that the erring one may report his offense. A blessing, introduced by Martin Beck is the obliteration of song plugging, so that now it is impossible to be tortured for twenty consecutive weeks with, "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly," or "Alexander's Rag-Time Band" in addition to having it hurled at you in the dining room.

The Orpheum circuit is perhaps the only circuit in the world where one mind, one man dominates. A stroke of Martin Beck's pen can give a performer his entire circuit without consulting local or individual managers. In the East there are large circuits but they are made up of different elements all conducive to the admission of personal feelings and opinions which break up a performer's route. No so in the West, where the solidity of the Orpheum circuit makes for the peace of mind of the performer, the smoothness of his traveling, the guarantee of clean theater, sanitary dressing rooms and efficiently trained staffs and courteous treatment—all supervised by Martin Beck, a man of rigid discipline, whose vast connections and mammoth operations in the amusement field make him forgetful of mere personalities and cause him to tabulate artists as pawns, his theaters being the chess board.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

New York, Sept. 23.—John Cort, with his natural aggressiveness of purpose, breezed into New York yesterday from a four months' tour of the West. With the exception of a three weeks' camping expedition into the Olympic mountains, the president of the National Theater Owners' association has exercised his customary business activity since his departure.

Mr. Cort, who, as manager of the Northwestern Theatrical association, controls the booking destinies of practically every theater playing traveling companies west of the Missouri river, has just made the transcontinental trip from San Francisco, where the new Cort theater, one of the finest in the continent, has recently been completed at a represented investment of nearly $1,000,000.

"Theatrical conditions in the West never looked better for the present season," said Mr. Cort. "This, of course, is the result, for one reason, of the general prosperity that embraces the country. Another reason is the great advancement that has been made in things theatrical and musical within the past few years, particularly since the amicable settlement of the booking arrangements between the independent and syndicate forces, is the progress that has been made in the building of commodious and properly equipped theaters from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific coast. It is really remarkable the amount of money that has been expended in this direction. Within the past three years alone we have built an average four theaters a year, not one of them costing less than $300,000, so that now there is not a city of real importance but has at least one playhouse that would be a credit to any city on the continent.

"Then, too, the play patrons of the West are 'live wires' as to the quality of attractions. They demand the best and are always willing to pay the price, and don't think for a minute they do not know who is who in music and drama. They do not rely on what some one else tells them, but on what they themselves know from constant perusal of the daily papers and periodical publications. The demand of readers of magazines has been so great for theatrical news that there is scarcely a publication of prominence but has been forced to devote considerable space to this sort of news in order to maintain standard circulation. The enlightenment thus received places the amusement seeker in a position to select the best.

"There was a time, not so very long ago, when almost any sort of a company in a play with a good reputation in New York could go South and West and 'clean up.' Now it is different. While the original company may not always be demanded, one fully as capable is necessary to get the money. They draw their own comparisons in such instances and are usually correct in their estimate.

"The West is undoubtedly the most profitable field in the country for stars and plays of high repute. It is seldom one hears of a crop shortage out there. The country has developed so rapidly in every respect, particularly in farming and fruit raising, which, with the unlimited means of irrigation and the even climate, is an assured success.

Need More Plays.

"We must have more plays. The field is wide open for new producing firms, and the greater number of plays produced the greater number of stars, as a result, will be developed.

"Often one hears the remark that there are too many theaters in New York. I cannot see it that way. This is the greatest theatergoing city in the country, if not in the world, and if a play is not patronized it is because it has not sufficient merit. However, my strongest argument for more first-class theaters in New York is, a play without the stamp of New York success has little to commend it to theatergoers all over the country. We must, therefore, have more plays and stars with good New Yorks records.

"Another interesting feature that has received small notice from producers and players, as well as the general public, is the development in 'try-out' productions by the excellent stock companies permanently located in the cities in the West. Los Angeles is most prominent in this. Such plays as 'The Spendthrift,' 'The Fox' and 'The Arab' received their first presentation in that city. Several others in San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane and Salt Lake City. These companies will in the future 'try out' many plays that will later be seen in New York. The policy of all this, of course, is the advantage of getting some idea of the quality of the play at a very nominal cost to the producer and give the author full opportunity to correct any oversight on his part before it is passed upon by metropolitan critics.

"We are now planning a new move that promises well. It is my intention to keep the first-class theaters in the large cities in the West open the entire year. To do this I propose to arrange for a number of the most prominent stars—real stars—to play engagements of from two to six weeks in a repertoire of their most successful plays in each city. The summer season in the coast cities is almost as good as that of the winter. Besides giving us a possible very good profit the move will offer employment to a large number of players and theater attaches.

"The season has opened up remarkably well all through the West and I anticipate the most profitable year we have ever experienced out there."

Ethel Barrymore will give the first performance of her new play, "The Witness for the Defense," at the Taylor opera house, Trenton, N. J., tomorrow night. Miss Barrymore's company, which is now definitely selected, will this year include A. E. Anson, late of the New theater; W. L. Abingdon, Leslie Faber, Lumsden Hare, W. S. Phillips and Miss Annie Esmond. "The Witness for the Defense" is in four acts, its scenes are divided between India and Sussex, Eng., and it is the newest work of A. E. W. Mason, the English novelist.

Henry Savage has placed Frank Keenan under contract for the most important role in "The Million." The role is of the protean kind. In the first act Keenan will portray a burglar; in the second he assumes the disguise of a second-hand clothing dealer and a police officer, while in the last act he masquerades as a negro minstrel.

Frazee & Lederer are to star Louise Dresser in a new musical play. The piece is a musical comedy version of "Miss Black Came Back," in which May Irwin once starred. Various new scenes have been added to the original manuscript and George W. Lederer and Junie McCree are authors of the present version.

* * *

Word has been received in the offices of Henry Savage that the London premiere of "The Great Name," with Charles Hawtrey in the feature character, was given an enthusiastic greeting and fulsome press praise.

"The Outsiders" is the title given by Charles Klein to his new play which will be produced by the Authors' Producing company in November. The theme is taken from incidents in everyday life as gleaned from the daily newspapers.

Liebler & Co. have added the name of Dorothy Donnelly to their stars. A contract has been signed extending over a term of years, during which this actress will appear at the head of her own companies. The first vehicle for Miss Donnelly will be a comedy by Edward Sheldon, who wrote this comedy for Miss Donnelly, and it is well liked by the actress and her new management. It is called "Princess Zim Zim," and is the tale of a Coney Island snake charmer.

On Thursday evening in Detroit Grace George will make her first appearance as Beatrice in Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." Associated with Miss George in the important undertaking will be the Playhouse company, including Lyn Harding, Jane Corcoran and other well-known players. This will be the second production designed for the long repertoire season at William A. Brady's playhouse in New York, and a third will be made before the formal opening. "Just to Get Married," an English comedy by Cicely Hamilton, has already been presented with success in Pittsburg and Cleveland, and after "Much Ado About Nothing" is added "The Earth" by James Bernard Fagan, will be made public.

The Irish players from the Abbey theater, Dublin, who have come over to America to show us what an "institution" really means, have divided their entertainments into what they call "First Program," "Second Program," "Third Program," "Fourth Program." The first will consist of "A Few Words by Mr. Yates," the "Shadow of the Glen," a comedy in one act by J. M. Synge, followed by "Birthright," a tragedy in two acts by T. C. Murry, and concluding with "Hyacinth Halvey," a comedy in one act by Lady Gregory. The second program will have "The Well of the Saints," a play in three acts by J. M. Synge, and "Spreading the News," a comedy in one act by Lady Gregory. The third will offer "Kathleen na Houlihan," a tragedy in one act by W. B. Yeats, and "The Playboy of the Western World," by J. M. Synge. The fourth program will produce "The Eloquent Dempsey," a comedy in three acts by William Boyle, and "Riders to the Sea," a one-act tragedy by J. M. Synge.

Ian Maclaren, the English leading man, who makes his first American appearance in this play; Elsie Leslie, Margaret Dale, Herbert Standing, Marguerite St. John, Alexander Calvert, Oscar Ayde, Lelia Repton, Charles Carey and Francis Reeve are the principals of the company. It will be noted that with the exception of two of the women, the entire cast is English. Mr. Arliss's season in "Disraeli" opens Monday in Pittsburg. The week following he begins an indefinite engagement at Wallack's theater, succeeding "Pomander Walk," a play by the same author.

* * *

Henry Arthur Jones's "The Ogre," a new three-act comedy, was presented for the first time at the St. James teater, London, on last Monday by Sir George Alexander. The play is said to be more original in its treatment than its theme, in the latter respect being reminiscent of Sardou's "Divorcons."

* * *

A new comedy, called "The Fatted Calf," is to have its premiere up New England way early this month. The play is from the pen of Arthur Hopkins. Is the cast are Frank Sheridan, Robert McWade, Jr., Julia Hanchette, Lowell Sherman, Marjorie Wood, Mary Cross and May Malloy.

EMPEROR LOWERS THE BARS

Marriage Regulations Governing Members of Russian Imperial Family Changed By the Czar—Due to Persistence of Young Princess.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—The marriage regulations governing the members of the imperial family have been changed in an important particular by a recent imperial decree. Hitherto the statute concerning the imperial family incorporated in the fundamental laws prohibited members of that family from marrying any but persons belonging to a ruling or sovereign house. The only escape from this rule was in having a recourse to a morganatic marriage, involving a permanent estrangement from the imperial court.

The emperor has now lowered the bars for the more remote issue of emperors. Granddukes and granddutchesses only are henceforth prohibited from marrying outside reigning houses. As the grandducal title appertains only to grandsons or granddaughters of emperors, in the male line, and to daughters only, in the female line, and not beyond, princes of the imperial blood, as the more remote issue is called gain liberty of marriage.

It is thought that the immediate occasion which led to this change was the case of Princess Tatiana Constantinova, daughter of GranddUke Constantinovitch, and sister of Prince John, who recently married Princess Helene of Servia.

Princess Tatiana fell in love with an officer of the Hussars, Prince Baggration-Mukhransky, an intimate friend of her brother. Prince Bagration, who is son of a lieutenant general, and bears a family-name distinguished in Russian military annals, is highly thought of at court, and the persistence of the young princess was successful in overcoming the statutory obstacle to the romance. The two were married on Sept. 6.

A form of polygamy frequent and officially tolerated in Russia has been read out of existence by a recent senate interpretation regarding the status of converts to the state church from among a dissident sect, the old-believers, numbering millions of adherents. The senate rules that old-believers, who are legally married according to the regulations of their sect, may not contract a new marriage, upon embracing orthoxody, until their first union is legally dissolved. Under these circumstances, declares the senate, marrying a new wife, before the old one has been divorced, will be regarded as polygamy, and so prosecuted, under the law.

The practice hitherto has been to allow a new marriage, under the circumstances, and consider the old marriage non-valid for orthodox converts, though old-believer marriages, as such, were sanctioned by the law of 1874. The effect of the practice was to encourage old-believers to join the state church, with this particular end in view. In those cases, the old marriage was considered void, and all marital and paternal obligations annulled. Orthodox missionaries made use of this temptation. The flagrant injustice to thousands of dissident wives, leading in many cases to hardships and to suicide, at last forced the authorities to action.

STRENGTHENS THE SOCIALISTS

Thousands of German Workmen Show Their Opposition to Any Warlike Settlement of the Moroccan Negotiations.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The Morocco issue has greatly strengthened the hands of the Socialists since the government is not thought to have covered itself with glory in the negotiations, and the main object of the recent demonstration at the suburb of Treptow was to keep public attention concentrated on this.

Two hundred thousand Socialists of Berlin marched out to Treptow, covering from five to eght miles, according to the section of Berlin in which they live, and stood for several hours under, a broiling sun to show their opposition to any warlike settlement of the Moroccan negotiations. Four hundred and fifty heat prostrations requiring medical attendance were reported.

The question at issue was scarcely a vital one, as a peaceful issue of the negotiations was generally anticipated, but the order of the day was implicitly obeyed by the Socialist army, and the thousands of workmen cheerfully gave up their weekly holiday and endured great discomfort to show their loyalty to their party and its leaders. Speakers stands were erected at a dozen points, and from these a resolution of protest was proposed and, as is always the case at Socialist demonstrations, unanimously adopted.

This absolute discipline and loyalty of the Socialist followers attracted scarcely any comment in the Berlin papers, so frequently has it been manifested, political opponents have no hope of the Socialist organization breaking down in the coming reischstag elections in spite of the death or ageing weakness of some of the prominent leaders.

The power of the Prussian Agrarian or "Junker" party and its leader, the "uncrowned king," Dr. von Heydebrand, has again been strikingly illustrated by two speeches of Emperor William, who, high-placed as he is, nevertheless finds it necessary to pay close ear to the music of the land-holding party which has long dictated the tariff policy of the empire.

His majesty's speech at Hamburg, in which he referred to the necessity of strengthening the German navy was mainly devoted to a eulogy of commerce, which he described as the breadth of the national organism, without which it would be but a lifeless corpse. The Agrarians felt themselves affronted by this exaltation of commerce, though nothing has been said or insinuated in disparagement of agriculture, and a campaign of such vigor was started in the Agrarian press that his majesty found it expedient, in a speech delivered a few days later at Stettin, to pay an equally high tribute to the virtues and importance of the bucolic life.

After much discussion of the Hamburg speech, the German press has concluded that the reference to strengthening the navy did not portend any change in the German naval program, as supposed abroad, but only emphasized the importance of keeping up the present rate of progress in building up a strong sea force.

Emperor William, in spite of the great developments of wireless telegraphy, still makes extensive use of personal messengers to convey his desires to his secretaries of state and diplomats when he is in foreign parts. As a matter of fact, on his recent northern trip he gave orders that only the most pressing matters of state were to be communicated to him by wire, owing to the danger of messages connected with the complicated Morocco negotiations being picked up by unauthorized persons.

The messengers who convey the imperial messages and state documents are specially selected army officers, who before being recommended for their post of trust must provide the fullest evidence of their fidelity and trustworthiness. They are first chosen by their immediate commander, who, after years of personal contact and observation, pick them out as being possessed of rapid decision, fearless energy, bravery and hard-riding powers. Then they are attached for a period to various embassies abroad, where they are kept under surveillance, and finally they come into close personal attendance on the emperor. Thereafter their freedom is practically at an end, for they must be prepared at a moment's notice to leave for any part of the world by the quickest route.

They are entitled to claim the best separate cabin on any German steamer and an entire compartment on any railroad train on making known to the officials in charge that they are on an imperial mission. Their baggage is not liable to customs inspection at any frontier, as they have the diplomatic privilege. They carry documents from the various embassies to the foreign office in a leather satchel, but letters from the emperor to a foreign sovereign or from a foreign prince to the emperor are always conveyed in a secet hiding place on their person.

The importance of the moving pictures as an educational factor has been recognized to such an extent in Germany that they are now largely untilized in the elementary and continuation schools in town and country for instructional purposes. The exhibition of films dealing with interesting subjects takes place under the auspices of the Society for the Spread of Popular Education, which posses an extensive collection and is subsidized by the various local educational authorities.

The pictures have been found to make such a lasting impression on the scholars that they are being called for in constantly increasing numbers, and the society has decided to found a circulating library of films to be sent to each school in rotation. Magic lantern slides are also in great demand for the same purpose, and the society, which has branches in every district of the empire, possesses 179 series comprising over 11,000 pictures on various subjects which are constantly in circulation.

SETTLEMENTS NOW TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

Growth of Movement in United States Since 1886—Establishment of First Settlement in England—Scope of Work of Settlements.

By ROBERT A. WOODS,
Headworker South End House, Boston.

(Exclusive Service the Survey Press Bureau.)

The settlement movement in this country signalizes this year its twenty-fifth birthday. In 1900, thirteen years after the first one was started in the United States there were 103 settlements. Since 1900 the number has doubled every five years, so that there were 413 settlements in 1910.

The movement developed in England as one of the results of a joint effort for improving social conditions made by men associated with the universities and the Church of England on the one hand and workingmen prominent in the trade unions and co-operative socities on the other. Among the experiments which preceded the settlement were the working men's college, established in 1854; the systematic promotion of university extension lectures by Cambridge in 1867, and the experience of Edward Denison, who lived in lodgings in East London in 1867 and worked under John Richard Green. It was even proposed, at a meeting held in the home of John Ruskin, to gather a group of men to join Denison. Toynbee Hall, the first settlement, was opened in the East end of London on Christmas eve, 1884, Samuel A. Barnett, vicar of St. Judes, was its head for twenty-five years. The settlement was named in memory of Arnold Toynbee an Oxford tutor who had had followed the example of Edward Denison.

The first American settlement was the Neighborhood Guild, now the University settlement, which was established by Stanton Colt, one of the lecturers of the New York Society for Ethical Culture in August, 1886. Dr. Coit tells how difficult it was to persuade a truck man, who had been engaged to move his goods to Forsyth street, that there was not some mistake in the address. Dr. Jane Robbins and Jean Fine founded the first women's settlement in November, 1888, in a tenement on Forsyth street, opposite the Neighborhood Guild. They were dispossessed without warning in April 1889, mainly because of the too constant wear and tear on the stairs. In 1889 the College settlement in New York and Hull House in Chicago were founded within a few days of each other. Both were started with the English tradition. The South End House in Boston was founded by Prof. William J. Tucker of Andover Theological seminary.

A number of neighborhood houses have sprung into existence almost spontaneously. The Henry Street, or Nurses' settlement, was founded in 1893 by Lillian D. Wald shortly after she graduated from one of the New York training schools for nurses. Moved by the wretchedness she discovered in treating a sick woman, she determined to take a tenement and devote herself to the service of such need as she might discover. While searching for habitable quarters she discovered the College settlement. Mr. Ruths of Baltimore, a printer by trade, started neighborhood work to meet the problem of amusing his children and their friends. In a short time he had the neighborhood at his doors. A settlement in Chicago was started by a Russian woman, the wife af a physician, who tried to meet some of the social needs which her husband's work was constantly revealing. An interesting piece of neighborhood work was the experiment of Mr. Jerome while district attorney in taking up his residence on the East side of New York.

The most cursory study of the "Handbook of Settlements," recently issued as one of the Russell Sage foundation publications, brings out the strongly individual character of the various settlements. A settlement may be said to be made up of a group of people who live in a neighborhood in order to understand the social life of the quarter, supplement it to the best of their ability, interpret its virtues and needs to the larger social whole, and awaken and organize its citizens to attempt the solution of their own problem.

As an incidental part of their work nearly all of the settlements have been influential in obtaining some form of municipal improvement, such as playgrounds, public baths, public libraries, improved streets, housing and sanitation, and more humane administratio nof public charity. Settlements have also assisted in creating public opinoin in favor of the labor union at its best, in enforcing the laws concerning the labor of women and children and in various ways making it less easy to exploit the more helpless members of the community.

Because the state is the instrument of social reform, the settlement must ultimately organize by states and a beginning has been made in this direction. Nationally the settlement has had a very real share in developing the present campaign against child labor, in promoting the movement for industrial education, the vocation bureau, the national study of the labor of women and children, etc., and is still specifically interested in immigration, in carrying the idea of neighborhood co-operation into town and village life, and in a widespread and progressive propaganda for the further humanization of politics and industry.

FACE TO FACE WITH THE FACTS

Any system of personal cleanliness is incomplete that does not include a sanitary hair dressing.

Don't neglect the hair. Its proper care is far from being the least important part of the toilet. There is no portion of the person more liable to accumulation of germs and dirt, yet the hair is most frequently neglected.

People consider themselves models of bodily neatness when they bathe regularly, clean their teeth diligently, devote hours to manicuring and industriously conserving their complexions while they seldom or never pay any attention to the condition of the hair and scalp. Besides being open to the charge of uncleanliness, these people are still more unfortunate because by their carelessness they are really aiding time in the destruction of their beauty and youthful appearance.

Newbro's Herpicide

The consciousness of having the hair and scalp sweet and clean brings a feeling of pleasing self-assurance. HERPICIDE is a real scalp prophylactic and its use produces one of the most apparent evidences of personal cleanliness.

Besides keeping the hair and scalp in an absolutely clean and highly sanitary condition all the time, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE eradicates the dandruff and prevents its accumulation by destroying the germ that causes it. It is also an effectual check to falling hair.

GREAT MEN OF EUROPE

Continent Has Produced Some Wonderfully Muscled Giants of Mat.

Every Country of Old World Has Had Its Champion.

(BY BRUCE.)

For some reason, the wrestlers of the old world have for years stuck to the Graeco-Roman style of wrestling. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the old world has in the ranks of its wrestling fraternity some of the most magnificently developed men that have ever engaged in any form of athletics. The wonderful physiques of these European wrestlers has been the wonder of the American people who have witnessed the various wrestling contests in the United States.

For years wrestling has been immensely popular across the ocean. Gradually the catch-as-catch-can game is beginning to take hold in Europe, probably because the champion of the world is a catch-as-can product, and also because the big matches between wrestlers of the old world and the greatest wrestlers of this country, are invariably contested in the Lancashire style, which is the method best enjoyed by the fans of the United States.

In studying the European situation as it exists today on the other side of the briny deep, it will be found that there is hardly a country that has not at the present time, or has not had in the past, some champion whom the people of that particular have been intensely proud.

In Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Russia, Finland, Germany, Austria, Poland, Turkey, and many other countries, almost too numerous to mention, there has been a champion, some wrestler who stood out above the best of his countrymen. Therefore the great tournaments, so popular in Europe, have in the past brought together the best wrestlers and some of the greatest specimens of physical manhood that could be found in all the great extent of the old world.

Perhaps it has been the method of Graeco-Roman wrestling that has brought into play the immense strength of the European champions. Certain it is that men like Zbyszko, Hall Adali, the first Yousuf, Hackenschmidt, Sampson and others, have been athletes outclassing in brute strength alone the wrestlers that have been produced by the United States.

What Will Result Be?

What will be the result of the future international contests, should the giants of Europe become greatly skilled in the science of the Lancashire game? It may mean the world's championship will be taken back across the ocean, to be contested for at some of the big tournaments.

Eliminating Hackenschmidt, for he is done for, Zbyszko and Jess Pedersen stand out among the men from Europe. There is also Yousuff Mahmout, one of the greatest wrestlers in the world, and the giant Cossack, Ivan Romanoff, who is in this country at the present time. All of these men have the reputation of being wonderful athletes.

Taking each country and studying its greatest wrestler, it might be said that Zbyszko is the greatest man Poland has ever developed, that Hackenschmidt was Russia's greatest wrestler, that Jesss Pedersen is apparently by far the greatest of the Scandinavians, Raleovich of the Italians, though past his prime, Raoul le Boucher, the greatest of the French, and Frederick Pilakoff, the giant Finn who made his American debut last season, the greatest wrestler that Finland has pryoduced.

These giants of Europe are a most interesting study to the man who contemplates athletics with enthusiasm. Many of them have been men of education. Zbyszko is a well educated man and speaks many of the languages of Europe. Most of these giants have the continental faculty of learning languages and most of them fluently converse in three or four languages. They have traveled widely, many of them, and it is a highly interesting experiment to sit down with one of these giants, making his living by the strength of body and limbs, and interrogate him about Monte Carlo, Vienna, Paris, Berlin and the cities of the continent.

In America we are constantly adding to our population by the great and unceasing exodus from the many countries of the old world. For generations the word America has had a magic meaning to these peoples, who have looked upon this country as a land of freedom. It is only natural that many of these people should keep in touch with many things at home, and it is a fact that they read with interest of the big wrestling tournaments contested annually in the larger cities of Europe.

Names Mean Much.

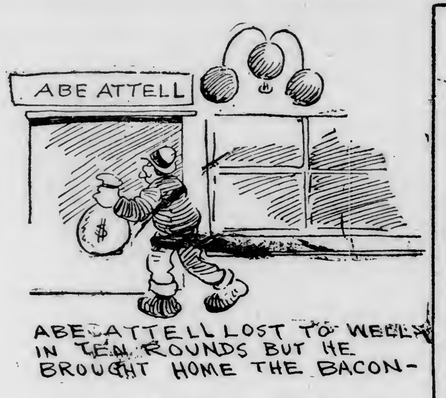
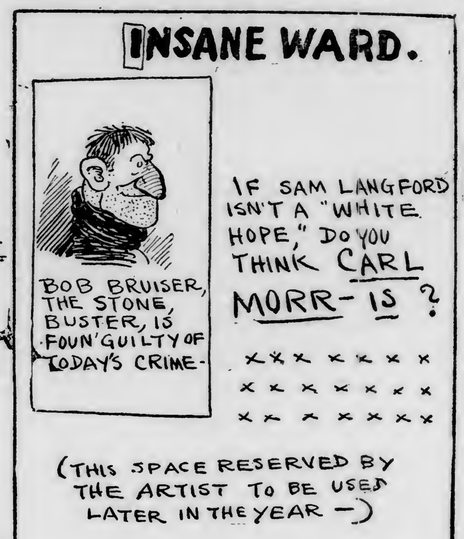
To these people the names of Zbyszko, Henry Eberle, John Puhl, Alex Aberg, George Lurich, Nicolai Petroff, Giovanni Raicevich, Jess Pederson, Paul Samson, Hjlmar Lundin, Tuomisto, Pilakoff, Michael Hitzler, Raoul le Boucher, Yussif Mamout and the other lesser lights, mean much, for they are, or have been in the past, the stars of the great game of wrestling in the old world.

The game of wrestling is bringing the best men of the world together. In this country we have seen some of the best of the grapplers of the old world. The big tournaments eliminate all but the best, and consequently those who come over here are generally the greatest men of Europe.



Jess Pederson has won several of the big tournaments of Europe, notably the one at Paris, and Zbyszko has won many in different parts of the world. Hackenschmidt played more to the music halls of the continent, during the past few years, than to the hard and gruelling wrestling bouts where man after man is beaten out. Pilakoff won one of the big tournaments in South Africa, while in Turkey Yussif Mahmout won many a hard competition. Padubny won some big matches and was at one time considered one of the greatest wrestlers of the age. He has been out of the wrestling game for some time.



It was the rise of a great American wrestler, Frank A. Gotch, that brought before the eyes of the world the possibility of the big international matches. So far the wonderfully muscled men of Europe have been handicapped by not being so familiar with the catch-as-catch-can rules. The Graeco-Roman style forbids holds that are taken below the waist. This has led the foreigners into being less skillful in defense of their limbs.

But the American style of wrestling is proving immensely popular on the other side of the sea, and the time is probably not far distant when the European wrestler will become a skilled athlete in the execution of the dangerous leg holds that have made Gotch a wonder on the mat.

WEAKER TEAMS ARE DANGEROUS

Pennant Hopes Often Killed Through Victories By Tail-Enders.

Generally the runner-up in each American league pennant race can blame some certain club for its failure to land the championship. This year, Detroit figures that New York has prevented the Tigers from playing for the world's championship. But that is only the turn of the wheel of baseball fortune. It was only a few years ago that New York was knocked out of the pennant by the Tigers, while a year later the Yankees were the stepping stone upon which the Detroiters leaped into first place.

Going back as far as 1906, when the White Sox achieved much fame by being hitless wonders and also by taking the Cubs into camp in the post-season series. Chicago won the American league championship through ability to win games from Boston and Washington, taking 19 out of 22 from Washington. The Naps, who finished a good third to the White Sox, won only 14 out of the 22 from the Red Sox. Had they done as well as the White Sox against the team from the Hub they would have been even up at the finish. New York was the runner-up that year, and lost out because of the inability to win a game in its last series at Detroit.

Detroit won the pennant in 1907 with a percentage of .613, just six points ahead of the Athletics. The Tigers won that time because they had much the better of the argument with New York, the city that has apparently put Detroit out of the race this season. The Tigers won 13 and lost 9 with the Yankees, while the Athletics could win but 9 out of the 19 with New York. The Athletics, however, were much stronger against Chicago and Cleveland than the Tigers were, winning 26 games from those two Western clubs, as compared with 20 victories for Detroit.

A Great Finish.

The season of 1908 was the great finish between Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago, the marks of the three clubs being .588, .584 and .589. It was Washington that put Cleveland out of the pennant by winning 14 out of the 22 contests, after Cleveland had won 13 games from Detroit and 14 from Chicago. The White Sox's bid for the pennant that season was acquired by virtue of finding Boston an easy mark. The White Sox won 16 from the Hubites, while the Naps won but 12 and the Tigers 11.

That same year was memorable for the great battle in the National league, an extra game being necessary between New York and Chicago to decide the pennant. Where the two Western batteries fattened their marks was at the expense of St. Louis, Chicago winning 19 and Pittsburg 20 from the Cardinals. New York, however, was able to tie up both Chicago and Pittsburg, while the Pirates took 12 from the pennant winning Cubs.

In 1909 Detroit acquired its margin of 24 points over the Athletics by reason of its long string of victories over St. Louis and Chicago, taking 33 games from the two clubs in question, while the Athletics were able to win but 24 from the same two. Philadelphia, however, found Washington much easier than did Detroit.

Woman Scout at Work.

Washington is the first city to come across with a woman baseball scout. She lives in Lowell, Mass., and has written several letters to McAleer concerning ball players in the vicinity of where she lives, and Mac sends Mike Kahoe, the old red catcher, up to see them work. He lost one man. She recommended Wolfgang, whom the St. Louis Browns grabbed. McAleer is thinking of sending her out on the road.

FIGHTERS MUST HAVE GAMENESS TO SUCCEED.

What is the greatest asset that a boxer can have? Some will say that "the punch" brings home the money. Others will declare that "cleverness" will win in the majority of cases. Still there are many followers of the game who will point to Battling Nelson's record and maintain taht "stamina" is the most desirable quality that a pugilist can possess.

The fighter without "the heart" is like a bird without a song. Take the champions of today and those of yesterday and it will be found that courage was the foundation upon which each title holder built his success. The few exceptions only prove the rule.

Billy Papke unquestionably would have been one of the greatest middleweights the world ever knew had he possessed the heart of Nelson. Time and again Billy has been charged with lacking courage, and there are a full half-dozen spots in the Kewance man's record to show that he, to put it in the most charitable way, has not the aggressiveness that goes with a champion.

Nelson Illustration.

Battling Nelson has neither cleverness, speed nor a punch. His wonderful stamina backs up as strong a heart as ever beat in a fighter's breast. It was the heart that kept Nelson at the top of the lightweight division for so many years, and it is the shell of that same heart that now causes Nelson to cry that he is ready to meet the top-notchers when all the sporting world knows that old Mother Nature has relegated the Dane to the "has been" class.

Bob Fitzsimmons had the punch, also he had the heart and it was the latter that carried him through the early rounds of the Carson City affair when Corbett was hitting him almost at will and brought him through to a victorious finish.

Game little Frankie Conley's heart carried him through a thirty-round beating at the hands of Monte Attell and brought him a decisive win in the forty-second round.

There are countless cases where the man with the heart has been beaten by a superior opponent, but the record books make no mention of a faint-hearted battler who ever gained and held top-notch prominence.

Speed and the punch may be developed, cleverness may be learned and polished by experience, but a man must be born with the heart to ever become a champion or a near-champion.

PITCHERS NEED CARE.

Flingers Can Be Spoiled By Too Much Mound Duty.

"The present baseball season has provided some interesting pointers on the best metho / of handling pitchers, and at this writing McGraw seems to have the palm," says Right Wing in the New York Post. "Pitchers who made great reputations last year and the year before, notably Babe Adams and King Cole, may have fallen by the wayside, while Marquard, who had so many months of preparation, has amply justified McGraw's faith in him. Cole and Adams were worked to the limit of their ability at the very start of their diamond careers, and Alexander is having the same experience this year. Marquard, through careful handling, was better prepared to stand the pace, and I am inclined to think that despite his already remarkable record, his best days are ahead of him, and that he will be heard from next year and for many moons thereafter.

"In the days of 'Pop' Anson it was the custom to send a new twirler straight to work, and other managers have followed the Anson recipe, but the method used in Marquard's case would seem to be the better. That he was hard hit the other day when he apparently had made sure of his game can be laid less at his own door than at the door of an always uncertain, and for that reason, fascinating game. Even a tail-end team will hit the ball at some time or other. There was a day some years ago when Yale university knocked Mathewson out of the box."

MACK FAVORS CHANGE.

Lean Athletic Leader Says Baseball Rules Are Antiquated.

As a member of the rules committee of the American league there is no baseball figure in the game who watches the rules closer than Connie Mack. Mack finds many flaws in scoring rules and is an advocate of the suggestion to get more uniformity in scoring.

"Very often the scorers overlook the spirit of a rule and interpret it by the letter," said Connie the other day. "They can hardly be blamed, for as at present arranged the rules of baseball are presented in an antiquated and unwieldy form. Many of them should be rewritten and made to conform with the modern game. For instance, in the last 10 years the game has undergone a big change. Compared with 20 years ago the change is much greater.

"Take the sacrifice hit. A scorer gives a sacrifice hit on a palpable bunt that advances a runner. If the player chops or takes a half swing at the ball the scorer does not give a sacrifice, but charges the batsman with a time at bat, even if the runner is advanced.

"This is a hardship on the player. Very often when you want to advance a player it is bad policy to bunt, especially when the first baseman and third baseman are playing in. On our team we have three or four players who are able to take a half swing at the ball. It takes a good man to do it.

"He drives the ball fast enough to make the fielder stay in his position, yet it is slow enough to easily advance the runner and give the batsman a chance to beat it out. Often it will roll between two fielders for a base hit.

"When this man takes his half swing at the ball, his intention to advance the player is just as strong as the player who comes to the plate with the deliberate idea of bunting. I can't see a particle of difference between the aim of the two men, only I think that the man who is going to take the half swing is surer to advance his man than the player who is going to lay the ball down. Why the man who takes the half swing shouldn't be credited with a sacrifice hit is beyond me."

SWIMMER WHO CROSSED CHANNEL

BURGESS.

This picture of Burgess, the swimmer, was made just before he entered the water to swim the channel. He is the first man to accomplish this feat since Capt. Webb. He suffered greatly while battling with the tide and at times was delirious. Burgess made several ineffectual efforts to cross the channel in other years.

LAST DAY OF RACE MEET AT DETROIT

Original Friday Program With Additions Carded for State Fair.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—Today's grand circuit card at the state fair track was the biggest of the week, and racing was to begin at 1 p. m., in an effort to clear up the program before the close of the meet tonight. Early indications were that the track would be in good condition.

Besides the four races on the original Friday program which was set back one day because of rain earlier in the week, the 2:09 trot and the unfinished 2:20 trot were carried over from yesterday.

After one day's intermission because of rain, the meet was resumed yesterday afternoon over a slow track.

In the 2:20 trot, after Lady Willow had beaten Helen Wilstar in the first two heats, the judges decided that Richley was not driving to land better than second place. They put E. Benyon behind the Wilstar mare, and in the third heat she came with a rush at the end, beating Geers' candidate by inches. The fourth heat was a pretty race between Lady Willow and Helen Wilstar, but the latter got the verdict by a length in spite of Geers' whipping finish. At least one more heat will have to be raced.

Rollins easily took the deciding heat in the 2:07 pace, which came on Wednesday.

The Liar, a Detroit horse won a popular verdict in the 2:12 pace but he had to be whipped to the limit in all three heats to do it.

The free-for-all pace was easily won by Earl, Jr.

CHARLEY WHITE IS EXONERATED

Tells State Commission Why He Did Not Stop Recent Bout.

New York, Sept. 23.—At a lengthy and lively session of the New York state athletic commission yesterday, the license of the National Sporting club of which Tom O'Rourke is manager, was revoked and after an extended hearing, Charley White, the referee, was exonerated from charges preferred against him following the recent Flynn-Morris fight in Madison Square Garden.

In the National Sporting club's case, it was stated that the revocation was because of a faulty lease on the building in which the club holds its bouts.

White appeared in response to a summons to explain why he had not stopped the Flynn-Morris bout after the seventh round when Morris had been well beaten.

"Morris was a high strung man" said White, "and while a novice, knew a good deal more than he was given credit for. At the end of the seventh round, however, he made the amateurish mistake of blowing his damaged nose instead of inhaling and his face became inflamed. I have refereed over 7,000 fights and I had sufficient confidence in myself to allow the bout to go to the end of the scheduled tenth round as I knew the big fellow was not in any danger."

FORWARD PASS RULE IS REVISED

Unsuccessful Pass From Behind Goal Line Will Be a Safety.

New York, Sept. 23.—Football rules for the season of 1911, which opens on Eastern gridirons today, were revised in several instances in the wording and elucidated by comment as to interpretation at a meeting of the intercollegate football rules committee here last night. The forward pass rule was the one chiefly discussed and it underwent the most important change of any made by the committee.

Any forward pass made from behind the goal line and which is not fully completed, was ruled a safety. This changes last year's ruling which held that on an uncompleted forward pass, made behind the goal line on the first or second down, the ball must be brought back and be counted an extra down, it being only a safety on the third down.

Considerable attention was given the rule with reference to the protection of the man carrying the ball. Walter Camp of Yale, who led the discussion, insisted that the rule should be enforced more vigorously than it had been in the past.

"The man carrying the ball cannot be helped by any other player," said Mr. Camp in discussing the matter, "and any man, whether accidentally or not, who places a hand on the player to assist him should have the penalty imposed upon him. This rule should be adhered to in both large and small games, or else roughness will crop out."

Rule No. 3 which deals with players disqualified for cause, was amended to make the penalty include a suspended player. Rule 26 was changed to provide that when a ball strikes an official it is not considered "dead," but is still in play.

IOWA'S OUTLOOK GOOD.

Hawkeyes Hope for the Strongest Eleven of Recent Years.

Iowa City, Iowa, Sept. 23.—Iowa's football coaches are contemplating their first week's work in a most optimistic mood. Hawley, Eby and Stewart unite in declaring that the eleven will be the strongest Iowa has had in years, and that the team, after it once gets in motion, will have no great fear of its opponents, even though Northwestern, Purdue, Minnesota and Wisconsin are to be met. Old men from whom great work is expected are Capt. Murphy, Alexander, the colored tackle; Ney, tackle; Buckley, end, and halfback; Repass, Bell, Trickey and Hanson, guards; O'Brien, center; Curry, quarterback who played on the 1910 eleven, and seven members of the second eleven—Von Mauer, Korf, Leo, Patterson, Jans, O'Connor and Holz. In all there are nearly seventy men on the field every night.

TWO HEAVIES COMPARED

Can Stubby Sam Wrest Title From Colored Champion?

Johnson's Recent Dissipation Might Offset His Superior Size.

Can Sam Langford, in any possible manner, wrest the world's heavyweight championship title from Jack Johnson? This is the perplexing question that is worrying the fighting fraternities on both continents. The plain fact that these black men so far overshadow their rivals at present that they are the only gladiators fit to battle for the title forces the issue.

Sifting it down finer, can a good little man beat a good big man? History answers emphatically—No. Nevertheless, in this particular case, many close and smart students of the sport feel that precedent will be reversed.

All acknowledge that Jack Johnson is a great fighter, though skeptics claim that in beating Jeffries he licked only a shell of a great man. Everyone who has seen Sam Langford at full speed admits willingly that he is a wonderful fighter. Whether he can upset tradition and cold calculation is the burning sport question.

Scanning the measuremnts of both men, figures favor Johnson greatly. His height gives him an advantage of 5¾ inches. When facing a smaller man, Johnson has only to throw his body back and the smaller man suffers great disadvantage. Attacking a smaller rival, he towers over the latter and takes useful advantage of his length. In agility he is no man's understudy, and for cleverness he stands supreme.

If he and Langford meet in the middle of a ring in Gotham there will be a startling surprise for the spectators. Their first impression will be, "How long can the little man stay?" Cold facts make it appear suicidal for Langford to battle Johnson. But if Jack Johnson will face him, Langford will travel across the world to get the opportunity. That's how much of a chance the little man thinks he has.

Some Measurements.

A comparison of the measurements shows one part of the body—a principal part—in which Langford holds the palm. That is the chest. Under normal conditions he measures 44 inches around the upper trunk, while Johnson only shows 39, an advantage of five inches for Langford. Ring history shows that the majority of great fighters possessed abnormal chests. During a long and strenuous encounter the organs hidden there perform the real functions of the battle. The vast lung power stands for endurance. That word means everything.

Around the waist Johnson measures 39 inches, while Langford slides the tape to 33 inches. These figures prove that except for the length of the torso Langford has a sturdier body than his rival.

In the length of reach, both men can stretch 72 inches, and the other portions of the arm and leg vary so slightly that there is really no difference.

Coming down to the weight, Johnson, when down to fighting trim, tips the beam around 200 pounds. Langford now does his best work around 180 pounds. So in this respect there is not such a huge difference, when one figures that in the heavyweight division weight cuts little figure.

Breaking away from the anatomical, which favors the present champion, one naturally turns to the records of both men. There is only one fight that can really be used as a criterion of the respective prowess of both fighters. When Sam McVey faced Johnson it took the latter twenty rounds to knock him out. Sam met Langford years later, and all that Langford could do was to get a draw. McVey was as good as Johnson (counting experience) when they met, and when he clashed with Langford the latter was under no peculiar handicap. On this one fight the scales sway toward Johnson.

But take Langford's complete record and compare it with Johnson's. Langford figures far and away the best. This black tornado won most of his real fights by knocking out his men. Johnson generally gathered his victories by outpointing his man. Johnson took eleven rounds to beat Flynn into helplessness. Langford just used one punch to accomplish the same task. This is claimed by the Langford camp to amply prove that Langford is a better puncher than his rival.

Standing the Gaff.

Here's a pertinent question: Does Johnson like the gaff? Nobody knows. There has never been a fight in which the champion had to take real punishment. When he met Ketchel, the latter dropped Johnson. The middleweight champion was a good hitter, but he could never equal Langford in strength and power of delivery in his blows.

Should the pair clash, Johnson's method of fighting would be the same as of old—feinting and then countering inside. Langford, fighting his regular battle, would keep bearing in, trying to land on the body. Can Johnson's cleverness, jabbing and chopping keep the minature fighting machine away from that center of atack? That is a question. Langford, built as he is, with all his massive strength stored within a small space, could assimilate terrible punishment before he would stop tearing after that vital part of Johnson's frame. Very seldom does Langford attack the face and head until the strength and steam of an opponent has faded under bruising wallops.

Can Johnson overcome the ravages of his fast pace and training to take off his surplus flesh? Can Johnson stand up and take the terrible punishment that Langford is capable of dealing? Can Johnson, with his marvelous science, beat Langford, also a clever man, and stand off the latter's persistency? Can Johnson prevent Langford from wresting the world's championship? The fates must answer. Many clever followers of fistiana are quite sure Johnson can do none of these things.

Cantillon Buys Pitchers.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 23.—President Mike Cantillon of the Minneapolis baseball club has announced the purchase of Pitchers Cy Young and Fred Olmstead from the Chicago White Sox. The pair will join Minneapolis immediately.

Maybe Tom Jones Fears Packey McFarland—England Believes Hack Can Beat Gotch—Giants Picked to Beat the Athletics.

(BY BRUCE.)

FROM some of the advices we have received through the medium of the Pacific coast exchanges, where they are supposed to be pretty wise to the several wrinkles of the boxing game, it would not be at all surprising if Ad Wolgast and Packey McFarland never fought again. That Milwaukee sheriff sure did stop a whole lot when he called off the contest between these two great little men.

Some have it that Jones—Jones, you know, is the manager of Mister Wolgast, will demand a purse that no sane promoter will pay. Every once in a while some one rises with the belief that Cherokee Tom has no lovin' and hankerin' after the game of the boy who has grasped his philosophy of life in the oderiferous regions of the stockyards.

For some years Packey perched firmly on the trail of Battling Nelson and nothing but notoriety ever came from the persistent efforts to meet the fighting Dane from Hedgewisch. Then came the long and at times heated, controversy as regards the relative merits of Packey and Ad. Just when the dear public believed that the time was at hand to settle all this argument, the officials of state rear up and bray.

Already you notice that Packey is matched with Wells. If Jones holds out for some figure that would come near breaking any promoter, and insists that McFarland make a weight that will weaken him at the time for entering the ring, many fans who follow boxing with discriminating and intelligent interest, will hold to the opinion that Jones would be just as well satisfied if the match were not made.

As for Packey McFarland, he seems to be willing to fight any of the boys in the country, and seems sincere in his efforts to gain the chance to win the lightweight championship of the world. Wolgast is a fighting demon and many of the boxers will tell you that he will beat Packey as sure as the sun rises. Be that as it is, Tom Jones will be the very last man in the world to undervalue the very clever ability of the Chicago fighter.

ENGLISH papers refuse to believe that Frank A. Gotch is the master of the Russian Lion. It might be said that the ancient English press also refused to recognize the fact that there was any kind of a country on this side of the ocean, along in the time when G. Washington was in his prime.

It may be that Hack will return to England and demand another match with Gotch. If he does, it is pretty certain that Frank will not pay the least attention to the Russian, unless the former world's champion should deposit a large amount of money for a side bet. In the event they do ever come together the match will most assuredly be wrestled in London.

If the present plans being made by big Emil Klank, manager of Gotch, are carried out, the farmer of Humboldt will make a tour that has never been equaled before in the history of tours by a wrestling champion.

It is said that Gotch will go to England, Germany and the various countries of the continent, visiting Australia, Japan, India, and then Honolulu, the Philippines and a few other countries. On this tour of the world, that will cover thousands of miles by land and by sea, Gotch is to be accompanied by his bride of less than a year.

If a third match is to be wrestled with Hack, and it is hardly probable, it might be arranged while the big Iowan was over in England, meeting the best men the British isles can send against the champion in the limited time contests.

LAST season this column picked the Cubs to defeat the Athletics, and was clear wide of the mark. In the event of the Giants winning the flag, and there seems little doubt of it, this column will string along with the New York team to cop the world's championship from the grasp of the speedy Mack men.

This is about the reason for believing the Giants will cop. If Mathewson is right there is no harder pitcher in the world to beat. He is a veteran tried and true, and while he does not seem to have as much stuff as he used to have, his work the past few weeks has been of a high class order. If Big Six is right he is just the man to baffle the hard hitters of the Philadelphia team.

Then there is Marquard. It may be that he has been worked too hard the present season and that the strain has told on him. For a while it looked as if he was out of the running for the rest of the season. It was so currently reported around among the players of the various big league teams. That was one of the reasons Frank Chance believed the Cubs had a chance for the flag—believed it right up to the other day, when the Pirates failed to stop the Giants.

With Mathewson and Marquard in their best form, it is doubtful if Mack has two pitchers who will compare with them. The lean Irishman of Philadelphia has one of the greatest teams playing baseball, as has been shown by the steady race it has made in the American league; but with two as great pitchers as McGraw's stars in their best form, and the Giants going the way they have for the past three weeks, it does look like the Giants will go to the world's series games favorites over the Philadelphias.

Anyway there is nothing like taking a chance, and there is always a great big rosy chance in baseball. Here goes for the belief that the Giants, in the event they win the pennant, will also win the world's series.

POWER BOAT REGATTA ON DETROIT RIVER.

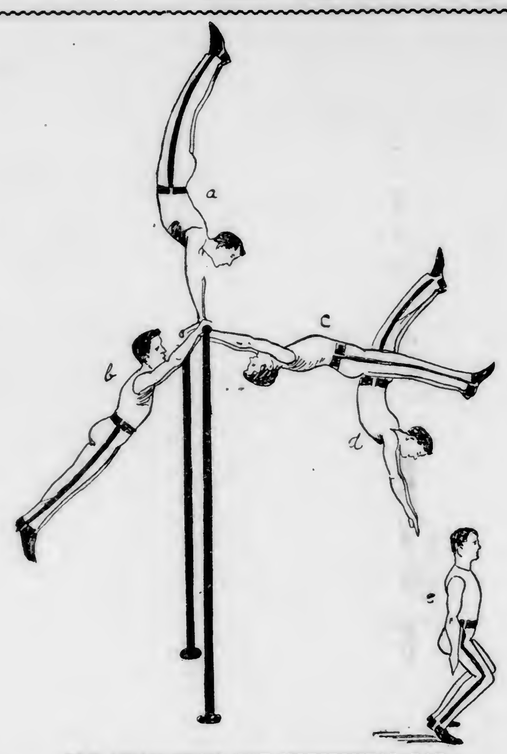
Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—Some of the fastest speeders in the country were entered in the power boat regatta scheduled to begin on the Detroit river this afternoon, under the auspices of the Solvay Boat club. Besides nearly all the best known Detroit-owned craft, the list includes Reliance IV of Cincinnati, Gretchen II and Intruder of Pittsburg, the Echo and Marie II of Lansing; Commodore of Monroe, Thelma and Streak of Gross Isle, Chinook of Trenton and Dromore of St. Clair.

The program, all races being sixteen miles over a measured course, included a free-for-all for boats with a speed of thirty-five miles an hour or better; a handicap for class A, twenty boats with a speed from twenty to thirty miles; handicap for B, nine craft, fifteen to twenty miles an hour, and a match race between the Intruder and the Commodore.

EIGHTS WILL CONTEST FOR CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

Picked eights will contest late this afternoon for the eight-oared championship of the Boat club. The race is scheduled to come off at 5 o'clock and will be contested between crews picked from the men who have been rowing the present season. Neither eight has had any special coaching for the race, and the contest should be about even. The members of the winning crew will have their names on the Boat club cup.



Following is the line-up of the two eights: Bow, Glass; No. 2, Johnson; No. 3, O'Donnell; No. 4, Longtot; No. 5, Grant; No. 6, Thompson; No. 7, Lathrop; stroke, Thorben; coxswain, McKenzie. The other crew: Bow, Hellmich; No. 2, Slack; No. 3, L'Estrange; No. 4, Dugan; No. 5, Quimby; No. 6, Solle; No. 7, Paddock; stroke, Kent; coxswain, Michaud.

GYMNASTICS, THE STANDARD INDOOR EXERCISE FOR THE WINTER—ITS VALUE AND ITS SHORTCOMINGS

FLY AWAY FROM THE HORIZONTAL BAR.

UPSTART ON PARALLEL BARS.

THIEF VAULT OVER THE HORSE.

(By Albert B. Wegener, Physical Director, Y. M. C. A.)

To the novice, as soon as one mentions gymnastics, there appears a vision of horizontal and parallel bars, rings, trapezes and various other apparatus. To his mind these features mean everything. To the well informed, on the other hand, apparatus work is merely one factor in a great system of physical training, and a very useful factor, indeed. There are those who decry the use of appliances of any kind in gymnastics who have very little conception of the meaning of physical training.

The ones who cry the loudest against this feature of gymnastics are the advocates of the various mushroom correspondence systems so much in vogue in our day. These persons have become acquainted with a few calisthenic movements and think that the entire subject of health and physical education is wrapped up in their few movements.

In naming over the list of exercises that would properly be classed under physical education, apparatus work forms a prominent factor. Gymnasts do not perform various movements on this apparatus simply because they feel they ought to have the education of the physical power, but because the practice of these movements gives pleasure. To the physical director, however, apparatus work is recognized also as a factor in training some of the necessary fundamental qualities of the human body, such as physical judgment, physical control, courage, strength, agility and grace. It is doubtful whether these qualities can be developed so well by any other means.

Exercises on apparatus appeal to those who are not satisfied with the routine of a few movements. They furnish the incentive for an ever-increasing interest. No matter how skilled the gymnast may be, there are invariably other worlds to conquer. This cannot be said to the same degree of any other exercise as far as variety of movement and its physical education is concerned.

Difference of Opinion.

There had been for some time a marked difference of opinion between the advocates of athletics and gymnastics. Many physical directors are laying more and more stress on the teaching of athletics and give as a reason the fact that athletic movements are closer kin to natural movements that have been used in the evolution of the human body. For this reason they are not only more easily performed, but also appeal most to the natural instincts. This opinion is well worthy of consideration. The statement is true; it need not be disputed. On the other hand, it reveals in itself the vast difference between athletics and gymnastics and the folly of trying to compare them in the same proposition.

The purpose of apparatus work is far different from the purpose of athletics. One cannot possibly hope to do by means of athletics what can be done by means of apparatus work. They are simply distinct parts of a great and varied system of physical training.

No one has recognized with clearer distinction this subject than Edward Mussey Hartwell, Ph. D., M. D., late director of physical training in public schools of Boston and sometime associate in physical training in the Johns Hopkins university, who, in the commissioner education report for 1897-98, page 509, makes the following statement:

"The aim of athletics, unless they are the illegitimate, professional sort, is pleasurable activity for the sake of recreation. That of gymnastics is discipline or training for the sake of pleasure, health and skill. We have but to compare the aims, methods and results of each and to call to mind the characteristics of the parties that have most affected athletics, the one hand, and gymnastics on the other, to perceive that gymnastics are more highly developed and present more features of educational value where large numbers are concerned. Gymnastics, as compared with athletics, are more comprehensive in their aim, more formal, elaborate, and systematic in their methods and are productive of more solid and considerable results under the restrictive conditions of city life. I have no disposition to disparage athletic sports, and I would that they were more general and better regulated than they are in our country; but athletics bear so indelibly the marks of their childish origin, and are so crude and expensive in their methods, as to render them inadequate to meet the requirements of a thoroughgoing and comprehensive system of bodily education. The requirements of such a system demand a judicious admixture of sports and gymnastics, of free play and formal guidance, to the end that each may help and reinforce the other."

Physical directors, as well as others, usually neglect, if they do not disparage, the practice of those features which they cannot do well, and encourage those features which they can do the best, or which are easiest. What they can do the best they are usually most interested in, and their system of work in their clubs or associations soon takes on the features of their liking. Some are expert gymnasts and place the emphasis of their work on gymnastic apparatus; others emphasize the mass class work, others devote great attention to the development of athletics, others give most of their time to special gymnastics—such as boxing, wrestling, fencing and tumbling; others do little or nothing else than recreative sports—mainly basketball.

Whether this condition is wrong or not is a question; it simply shows that the tastes of men differ and it is doubtful whether it is desirable to press each member into the same mode as the physical director. Each of these features has its proper place and if it does not absorb all the time and attention in a given field, is a legitimate factor in physical training.

The writer would under no circumstances claim apparatus as the supreme good. He recognizes its limitations, as well as its place and purpose.

The Limitations.

The limitations of apparatus work have already been intimated. It may be further stated that the qualities that they seek to develop are best developed at an earlier age than judgment requires that apparatus work be given. It is asking a great deal to develop the qualities of control, judgment, courage, skill, etc., in a young man of 21 and over, if these qualities have been entirely neglected from his youth, but if he has received the physical education that comes through the athletic sports and games in boyhood, he will find that apparatus work furnishes the opportunity for advanced training in this direction.

The educational feature of apparatus consists in "form;" that is, how well a given exercise is performed. The thing that first appeals to one in performing an exercise is its esthetic feature. If the exercise has been done gracefully and skillfully, this is usually all that is asked by the average man. However pleasing this may be, the value of form does not primarily lie in this. Good "form" consists of muscular co-ordination in performing the movements with the least possible expenditure of energy. It consists in discovering the mechanics of a movement, in showing when, where, how, and the amount of force to apply at any given time.

Anyone who has observed a beginner and an expert gymnast performing at the same time will have noticed how awkward the beginner performs the exercise and how much energy he wastes. The beginner will get more exercise by far from the hygienic standpoint out of a movement than the skilled gymnast; the skilled gymnast accomplishes the most difficult exercises with such grace and precision that the movements look, and really are, easy.

Much of the pleasure in apparatus work consists in discovering the secret that is wrapped up in any movement; and still a greater pleasure consists in being able to get the muscles and nerves to co-ordinate in a manner so as to accomplish it.

The Value of "Form."

Dr. H. F. Kallenberg of Chicago, gives the value of form in gymnastic work. "The value of form in gymnastics is found in the fact that from the standpoint of animal mechanics it enables one to do exercises with greater ease. It conserves nervous and muscular energy. It is valuable from a fundamental in that it makes progress easier and more rapid. It indicates that the motor nerve centers have been properly trained. It is of value to the moral nature in that it gives one a sense of power which naturally accompanies the control over one's neuro-muscular system. It fosters neatness and orderliness, it promotes accuracy and method. It promotes a desire to do things right and therefore fosters right thinking. It develops the spirit of determination to overcome difficulties and it develops physical courage, which in itself is the basis of moral courage. The effects of gymnasium work go deeper than the skin; this work does more than develop or give ability to marshal groups of muscles to perform complicated movements. It develops character through its profound effect upon the motor nerve centers, through which the higher mental faculties express themselves."

The general conditions of form given above are not merely notional but are used for two important purposes:

(1) For their corrective value.

(2) To accomplish the exercise more easily.

The primary value of any apparatus work is in overcoming bad posture. Correct form, as described above, helps to accomplish this by insisting that the chest be held well forward and upward, thighs well extended, head erect. The extended position of the trunk and legs is directly opposite to the position usually assumed in one's work, and for this reason can not be insisted upon too strongly.

The ease with which an exercise is done depends largely upon form, as described above. It is usually a difficult matter to get beginners to feel the truth of this fact. They are inclined to think that proper form is not necessary and that the gymnast who observes it is trying to display his powers.

All this is from the physical standpoint, but the esthetic value, the looks of the exercise for the sake of the enjoyment it gives to the spectators, although a secondary reason, is not to be overlooked. In other words, gymnastics is an art, as much as music or painting, and the appeal to the esthetic nature is just as subtle and enjoyable. It may be termed the esthetics of motion.

Exercises on parallel bars, horizontal bars, horse, rings and ladders, are given a worthy part in the system taught in the Y. M. C. A. It is not unduly emphasized as perhaps in some other gymnastic organizations, but for the young man and boy who like to do stunts there is an opportunity to develop his gifts in this direction and derive much physical development. Young men in offices and stores need gymnastics.

The Y. M. C. A. is the only place in this neighborhood where stunts are taught in gymnastics. There ought to be other places. There used to be a German turnverein here ten years ago, but that is now occupied by the boy's Y. M. C. A. There they have the benefit of expert instruction under J. R. Batchelor, graduate of the Chicago school of normal instruction of the Y. M. C. A. The exercises are graded in difficulty so that there is no danger from injury.

DIFFICULT MATTER TO BUILD FOOTBALL TEAMS

With an experienced coach in charge of a football squad, and with every facility for training the players, it is not an easy matter by any means to turn out a winning team, but when conditions are such that neither the coach nor the training facilities are to be had the task becomes extremely difficult.

There are so many things to consider and so many problems to be met in developing a foot-ball team that without some kind of tutoring there is little chance for a club or a high school to put out a creditable eleven. In the first place the boy when he first enters a prep school, or the man, unless he has had college experience, who goes out to play on an athletic club team has not much of an idea as to what constitutes proper training and seldom knows much about the rules. Besides these two things, there is the problem of thinking out plays—not only plays in the simple sense of the word, but what plays are best adapted to the use of an individual eleven. It is for these two classes that the following simple routine of procedure and a few plays from one of the most effective formations are to be given.

The prime requisite for any kind of an organization is a head. Therefore, before the candidates for a football team team take the field for their preliminary workouts, some one man should be placed in charge with the power to direct the practice and a promise to be obeyed. Many a time what have been prospects for a good team have been ruined because of dissension and wrangling, resulting in players quitting or else becoming dissatisfied to such an extent that they lose half their efficiency. The only way to avoid such a deplorable condition of affairs is to place some person in authority with full power to direct the policy to be pursued. While the one in charge may make mistakes at times they will not be half as costly as if the players were constantly wrangling among themselves as to what should be done.

Must Know Elements.

As soon as the candidates for a team have appeared on the field ready for practice they should first be put through a course of work intended to develop their knowledge of the elements of the game. That each player must be an adept at skillfully handling tackling, passing and falling on the ball before an eleven can be welded together is a self evident fact, and too much time cannot be spent in making each man as effecient as possible in these things. Even after the team has been lined up, a set of signals given and real practice started it is a good idea to spend at least two evenings every week in keeping in mind that a football team to be efficient must be thoroughly drilled in the elemental principles of the game.

It is generally customary for men when they take charge of a team of any kind to give a little talk on what they consider as a proper course of training and lay down certain rules for the men to follow. A whole lot of this is unnecessary, because training in its real sense may be summed up in two words—clean living. To the man or boy who lives a clean life the training problem is solved; to those who do not, it can never be until every dissipation that tends to weaken the constitution in any way is eliminated.

While the players are being put through their preliminary paces, the person in charge should always keep his eye open as to the possibilities and qualifications of each man, and then when it comes time to place his men in the different positions, he will not have to experiment as much as he would had he given no attention to that phase of the practice. What the qualifications of a man should be for a certain position is impossible to say for each individual case, as the conditions may be such that he could be shifted to some other position in which he would be of more advantage to the team; but generally speaking, the men should be chosen about as follows: First of all, the man most quick to perceive things and the one most inclined to be alert on every occasion, in plain words, the one whose intelligence seems to surpass that of his fellows, should be chosen for the quarterback's position. Whether or not he is a good man to run with the ball, his supreme qualification should be the ability to run his team in an intelligent manner, so that the weaknesses of the opposing eleven may best be taken advantage of. For instance, sometimes there are weak places in a defensive eleven's line or at one of its ends that would not be observed by a man running the offensive eleven who took little notice of the play of his opponents, and at the end of a game such a difference would make a great change in the resulting score. The quarterback must be able to pass the ball accurately and be fairly fast, so that he can keep pace with the rest of the backfield.

Good Line Plunger Needed.

Behind the line on every football team should be a good line plunger. He is as necessary to a good offense as ever. A man to be able to hit the opponents' forwards so that he can tear off four or five yards whenever they are needed to make a first down, is as invaluable to a team now as he was under the old system, when that was the summation of the style of almost every team's play. To fill this position a man must be selected who is not only heavy, but who has weight enough to render him a hard man to stop. The faster and heavier he is, so much the better for the offense of the team. Weight and speed, combined, are rarely found, but whenever the two are embodied in a man, it is certain that he will be a good man to play at fullback, providing that he comes up to the mark of his rivals in his knowledge of the first principles of the game.

Both halfbacks should be fast. If they have weight with their speed, so much the better, but above all things a back field man must have speed. Without it, under the conditions which govern the game now, he is almost useless. If possible, one of the backs should be a good man in the open field, one who can dodge behind his interference, shoot away through an opening and make his way through a broken field by his ability to shake off would-be tacklers. The other halfback should be one who is fairly heavy, and who can be used to the main for wide sweeping end runs behind a mass of interference.

One if the backs should have been ability to handle punts well, and, if possible, the man who is best at broken field running should be taught to play back to handle kicks. All the backs should also be good defensive men, sure tacklers and able to break up the interference that may have gotten clear of his forwards.

On the ends should be placed men who are sure tacklers, are fast getting down under kicks and who can handle the ball cleanly when it is thrown to them. The chief quality of an end's play is his ability to follow the ball and tackle, and he must at least be proficient in these two branches to make good in the position.

Rangy Men for Tackles.

Tall, rangy men as a rule make the best tackles, but it is often the case that a short and stockily built player turns out to be a good man in the place. Generally, though, a man who has the advantage of height and reach can smash interference that could not be touched by a shorter player. The tackle's position is one of the most important on a football team. There is no more valuable asset to an eleven than a pair of good men to flank the guards. From the fact that they have to watch and break up end plays, as well as take care of the greater part of the line plunges that come on their side of center, it is readily seen that to be efficient in that place a man must be strong, heavy, alert and possessed of a certain amount of speed.

On the majority of teams it has always been the custom to have big, heavy men to play guard positions, but it is very questionable as to whether or not it is good judgment. In the first place, as a general rule, the men who have been placed in as flankers for the center have been big, and at the same time slow and unable to get around with any facility. Probably the best men fro guard are those weighing around 168 or 170 pounds, and who are fast enough to cut around the line on an end run and drop their man from behind, and also get in the interference when their own team is on the offensive. A guard of the mentioned kind is able to charge his man quickly and break through, much more so than a heavier and slower man would be, and while he probably would not be as strong physically as would a larger and heavier man he would make up in alertness and aggressiveness what he lacked in physical power.

A center must primarily be able to pass the ball fast and accurately. No matter what ability a man may have as a lineman, he cannot play the pivot position unless he has absolute control of the ball when he passes it to the men in the backfield. The center on a football team seldom receives much praise, but it is doubtful if there is another man on whom so much is depended in a game. A single slip by him at a critical moment may result in a defeat for his team. Besides being able to pass the ball, a center should be able to charge quickly after getting the ball away from him, and, as most teams now play the center about two yards back of the line, he should be fairly fast in order that he may get out around the ends and break up that style of play on the part of his opponents at times.

General Qualifications.

To sum up in general the qualifications that a lineman must have, it may be said that he must be able to charge quickly, that he may open holes for his backs when on the offensive, and that he must be able to use his hands well while on the defensive, so that the opposing lineman cannot get his body against him to open a hole through which some fast back might plunge. With a fair amount of speed any man who has the above requisites can become a fairly good man in a rush line.

A halfback must have speed and endurance and the ability to handle the ball well. Speed and endurance are at a premium in a halfback because from the kick-off it is go, go for him, whether on the offensive or defensive, with never a moment's rest. A lineman during the brief space between the plays is down on one knee, getting a moment's rest, but this is never true of a backfield man.

The set of signals to be used is the next problem to be solved. There are many codes in existence, but practically all have a similarity that is at times very noticeable. There is less importance, though, in the signals than is generally thought. A complicated system should be avoided, because with it a team can never attain either speed or effectiveness, as there will be continual mix-ups. It need not be feared that with a simple system it will become known to an opposing team, for the reason that the opposing eleven generally is too strenuously occupied to try to unravel a signal code of any kind.

It must be remembered when practice is begun that all men have not the same amount of physical endurance, and they should be worked accordingly. As soon as a man gives evidence of being very tired he should be replaced by a substitute. A team overworked is in worse condition that one that has not been worked enough.

While there are many maxims that may be laid down for the development of a football team, there is nothing which is worth as much to it as plenty of good hard work. Work, work, work, and when that is fully understood it is known to what all elevens owe their success, if they have attained it. There is nothing ever done without hard and earnest endeavor, and certainly no eleven men were ever welded together into a formidable gridiron machine without the closest kind of application, and there is no period during the season when time can be put to better advantage than during the first three weeks.

SAINTS MAY COME.

Darby O'Brien Plans for Series of Ball Games Here.

Darby O'Brien returned from Port Arthur yesterday, where he has been for a week or so looking over some players. The Orator has his eye on two youngsters who have been highly recommended and he may get hold of them.

Negotiations are being carried on at the present time with the management of the St. Paul team, with a view of bringing the Saints up here for a series of games with the combined Duluth and Superior teams. If the series is arranged part of the games may be played in Superior and part of them over here.

It has been a number of years since the St. Paul team has played here and a game between Mike Kelley's aggregation and the combined forces of the Duluth and Superior would undoubtedly draw a good attendance. It would give the fans a taste of the kind of baseball they are hoping for sometime in the future.

GREAT SEASON FOR FOOTBALL

Experts Say There Will Be No Trouble Interpreting Rules.

New York, Sept. 23.—That college gridirons will this year stage the most interesting and successful season of football in the history of the sport, was the opinion expressed by the high officials of the game here today. Nearly 150 coaches and football veterans from all parts of Eastern football territory were in New York this morning after holding their annual conference last night for the final interpretation of the rules prior to the season's opening games.

Walter Camp, dean of football at Yale; Percy D. Haughton, the Harvard coach; Dr. Carl S. Williams of the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. James A. Babbitt, chairman of the central board, were among those who declared that the reformed game would this year overwhelmingly justify itself.

For the first time in three seasons the coaches are not hampered by the necessity of teaching a comparatively new system of attack and defense.

There is to be no complaint this year of delay in naming officials at the various contests, according to Dr. Babbitt of the central board. Most of the assignments of officials, he said, will be decided and published earlier than in previous years, and the board expects, as a result, to have its appointees accepted without trouble.

Football Season Opens.

While there will be no football here in the city today, outside of some minor games among the graded school teams and the windup of the week's practice work of the Central high school warriors, the city league season will open tomorrow afternoon with a game between the Adams and Jefferson.

Both teams have been practicing for the past week and the contest promises to be interesting.

Next week the Central team will start in to prepare seriously for the first game of the season, which has not been decided on as yet.

Maroons After Games.

The Maroons of West Duluth, a football team that is out for the city championship in the 135-pound class, are actively preparing for the present season. Last season the Maroons lost but one game, and with steady practice the management of the team is confident that last season's record will be duplicated the present year. Edward Horstead is the manager of the team and is after games with any teams in the 135-pound class. Managers wishing games can get them by communicating with him.

NEW AUTOMOBILE RECORD IS MADE

From Buffalo to Chicago Took But Twenty-Four Hours.

From Buffalo to Chicago, a distance of 647 miles, while the short hand made two journeys around the face of the clock—that's the new record between the two cities, established by Elmer Huber, driving a 1912 model of the Thomas 40-horse power, six cylinder. The record attempt was started at midnight Sunday and the finish was at Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard in Chicago twenty-four hours later.

Huber, no novice at the record breaking game, as is proved by a study of statistics, which shows that he made the best time ever registered by a motor car from San Francisco to Los Angeles over the old route, accomplished something which has long been the ambition of Gaylord Warner, manager of the Chicago Thomas branch, who engineered the drive. In anticipation of the success of the attempt he had in the car with him two "prospects" who wanted to study the work of the new model under strenuous conditions. An average of 25.8 miles an hour for twenty-fours hours over the give and take roads between Buffalo and Chicago was the answer given.

AUTOS REACH DESTINATION

Pathfinding Cars for Glidden Tour Are at Atlanta and Jacksonville.

Reports from the A. A. A. official pathfinders for the 1911 Glidden tour over the route of the National highway, New York to Atlanta and Jacksonville, Oct. 14 to 25, conclusively show the reliability and dependability of even the smaller priced motor cars.

The little Flanders "twenty" left New York on the afternoon of Sept. 8 for the long journey of nearly 1,400 miles, and its arrival at Atlanta, 1045 miles away, just one week later, sets a new mark for expedition in pathfinding work. Not a single delay was encountered by the party for any reason whatsoever, not even for what must have been a herculean task for the little car in the Blue Ridge mountains near Winston-Salem, where the car arrived on the afternoon of Sept. 12, having covered that day 122 miles across the mountains.

The pathfinders report great activity all along the route in the way of road improvement, both through the South's convict labor system and the employment of professional road builders through both public and private funds.

AUTOMOBILES

NEW SYSTEM IN BUSINESS

Motor Truck Is Fast Taking Horses' Place on City Streets.

New Method of Delivery Has Solved Many Problems for Merchants.

Not long ago labor was not considered a commodity. Today it is and so is transportation. When a business man buys a motor truck he gets more than a body, more and wheel; he gets mileage. He also gets a new system of doing things.

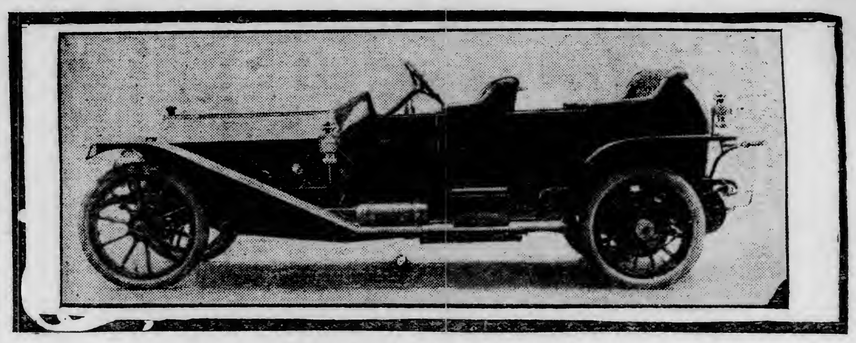
A truck is more than a mere substitute for horses. It is this and more because it is an even greater step in the revolution of the science of locomotion than is the pleasure automobile.

The whole truck question is one of service—for it is no longer a question between horses or trucks.

A motor truck gives the business man a bigger radius, makes him neighbors with customers that were formerly isolated, decreases the miles and enlarges the hours.

The problem therefore of the truck builder is to provide a machine that gives the most mileage—that works year in and out at no more maintenance cost than for the first year and whose mechanical parts do not need "nursing," but furnish a real delight because of their perfect and effective operations.

Horses eat at least fifty-two days in a year when they do not work, while the truck eats only "when on the job."



Horses are not intended for cobblestones, slippery streets and steep hills with burdensome loads. The truck conquers hills, mud, sand or any kind of streets.

Wintry storms retard horses and cause them to suffer, while the broiling sun of summer kills them. The truck travels through all kinds of weather with equal efficiency and no lost time.

Horses go slower with their load than does the truck, while the truck returns empty in a quicker time, saving time and money both ways and making the men employes more valuable.

The horse has a time limit—must rest. The truck works night and day and is just as fresh at all hours. Trucks give better service and better reputation, as the advertising value is a by-product. They also save in real estate rentals and require less than half as much room as horses for storage and traffic.

INTERSTATE AUTOMOBILE CO. HAS HAD A RAPID GROWTH

THE NEW PALMER SINGER CAR.

Extensive improvements have been made at the offices and shops of the Interstate Automobile company on Lake avenue and First street.

The offices have been entirely remodeled. Much new machinery, made necessary by the large increase in the repair work done by the concern, has been installed.

Here three floors are used for storing and repairing automobiles. Since the reorganization of the company about a year ago, it has grown until three leading makes of cars are sold and a good share of the repair work of the city is done.

Under the able management of Joseph T. Peacha, who is also vice president of the concern, the progress of the past year has been little short of wonderful.

Skilled mechanics are employed and they work on a clock system. When a mechanic starts work on a job he punches the clock and repeats when he finishes. In this way the customer pays for the actual time employed.

The Kissel Kar is featured by this company. The Regal, a 30-horse power car and the Palmer-Singer are also handled.

The new model of the Palmer-Singer is on show in the display room and the new Regals and Kissels are expected within a few days.

A feature of the Palmer-Singer is the fact that there is no vibration from the motor. A glass of water filled to overflowing can be set on the motor and but the faintest sort of a ripple can be seen. Manager Peacha demonstrated this the other day to the astonishment of those who witnessed the test.

AMONG THE AGENCIES

The New Stearns.

The Stearns car will hereafter be handled in Duluth by the Duluth Automobile Supply company on East Superior street. This progressive firm only a few days ago closed for the agency for 1912. The new Stearns will be equipped this year with a new motor, the Knight type, sleeve valve motor. The new engine is said to be the last word in motors and many who would own only a Stearns and keep up with the new models each year are anxious to see the new "12."

New Models Here.

Leonard McNamara, who has distributed thirty E. M. F. cars in Duluth and vicinity, will handle this make again in 1912. "Len" says the E. M. F. is the best medium priced car on the market. He will also handle the Flanders, a 20-horse power car. The new models are here and can be seen at the Electric Service & Supply company on East Superior street.

The Jackson.

M. W. Turner, who represents the Jackson automobile in Duluth, has distributed quite a number of Jacksons on the range and in Duluth and Superior. The Jackson is a medium priced car and those who own one state that the machine is thoroughly reliable. The car is made at Jackson, Mich., and is very popular all through Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Thomas, Chalmers and Hudson.

"We wouldn't change our line of cars for any other make in the world," said E. J. Filiatrault yesterday in announcing that for 1912 he will handle the Thomas Flyer, Chalmers and Hudson.

These cars have been handled for years by the Mutual Automobile company and hundreds of them have been distributed in this territory.

For medium priced cars the Chalmers and Hudson are said to give perfect satisfaction. For a higher priced car the Thomas fills the want of those who want a larger and more powerful car.

Peerless, Baker and Reo.

The Duluth Automobile company will continue to handle the Peerless, Reo and Baker Electric in 1912. All these cars are so well known and their performances have been so universally satisfactory that it is not necessary to elaborate on their finer points. The Peerless, a high-priced car of great power, endurance and reliability is pleasing thousands throughout the country. The Reo has a reputation built up after being thoroughly tried out and the Baker Electric would be the delight of any woman.

The Packard.

W. D. Rightmire of Minneapolis will handle the Packard automobile in Duluth.

Heretofore the Packard has not been represented by a local agency.

Business quarters will be opened in the new Deetz building at Third avenue east and Superior street.

As soon as the building is completed the Packard will have a permanent home in the Zenith City. The new concern will be called "The Packard Service" company.

Mr. Rightmire is at present in the city and is demonstrating the 1912 model. He can be reached at the Holland hotel.

DOING WORK OF HORSES

Automobile Trucks Becoming Big Factor in Duluth Transportation.

Owners Find Them Cheaper and More Efficient Than Horses.

This is proven day by day as the large companies put large trucks on the streets and the smaller establishments put on the lighter delivery wagons.

Just lately the Duluth Van company put on a large truck and household goods will now be transported from one part of the city to another by means of the trucks.

Both for business and pleasure motor driven vehicles are being used more and more and the horse is going back into the country where he is used to plow and harrow and jerk logs.

Even there he is not as useful or important as he once was for in many parts of the country gasoline motors are doing a great part of the work. It has been found to be cheaper and quicker. This is not yet true of the country about Duluth, however.

It has been demonstrated in Duluth that delivery by truck or light motor wagon is much cheaper, quicker and more satisfactory than by the old method.

Trucks, as they are being made these days, are equal to the hills and customers once out of the reach of Duluth houses are now easily reached.

Duluth merchants have found that more than four times as much ground can be covered by the use of trucks as under the old system. They state that it not only gives them more business but keeps it for the customer is satisfied that at the time he orders the goods delivered they will be there.

Trucks are beyond the experimental stage. They now have powerful, silent motors and the difference between those of today and those of a year ago is great.

The motor is now used for fighting fire, for delivering goods, for pleasure, and in many other ways. The autos purchased by the fire department are satisfactory in every way. After a thorough trial, they have demonstrated their worth. They are reliable, always ready to go and they are much quicker. The other night the Lakeside truck made a quick trip from Lakeside to the Scott-Graff fire in about the same time that it used to take to go about one-fourth of the distance.

The automobile is used by the police department to make quick runs to the scene of crimes and many a time the system has proved its worth for only a few minutes after the happening the offender has been under lock and key at the police station. A minute means a good deal in a case of this kind and the officers say they do not see how they could now get along without their car.

From figures kept by some local merchants on their trucks, they have found that they are much cheaper than horses. By this they mean that they can care for more business by handling their goods on trucks and the difference between the expense is more than offset by the additional business.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

PLANS for the opening of the club work for the season in the various clubs of the city are taking considerable time and attention on the part of the women of the city, and with the attention which has to be given to the pickling which is at its height at the present time, social functions have been few and far between during the past week. With the exception of a few large card parties and musicals and a few smaller functions the social calendar has been rather a slim one.

With the first of October and the opening of the musical and club season, the finishing of the canning season and the departure of the last college students the women of the city will have a more crowded calendar.

Corn roasts and picnic suppers continue to hold favor and the branches of the Duluth Boat club have many visiting daily who take their own lunches and prepare and enjoy them at the clubhouse.

• • •

Duluth society will be much interested in one of the new members of the reorganized Forbes stock company which will appear at the Lyceum during the winter for Hiss Eileen Errol widely known in the city will be one of the members. The young actress is known to Duluthians as Anne Louise Hay and she attended Hardy hall when that institution was a fashionable finishing school for Duluth's society girls and afterward Miss Hay was well known in Duluth's society circles. After a year of travel she went on the stage professionally and has been known as Eileen Errol. This will be her first appearance in Duluth professionally.

Duluth Girl Is Soloist With Pittsburg Orchestra

MISS SOPHIA KASSMIR.

Miss Sophia Kassmir, a former Duluth girl well known here, is receiving distinction in musical circles in Pittsburg where she is now living with her parents. During the summer she has been one of the soloists with the Pittsburg Festival orchestra at its summer night concerts. This orchestra which has just finished its fourth season under the direction of Hans Zwicky has been a most successful organization and one which has won considerable fame.

Of Miss Kassmir the following press notice appeared in the programs for the concert: "Miss Sophia Kassmir, the young Russian soprano is the fortunate possessor of a brilliant soprano voice of unusual charm and sympathy. Her other gifts of temperment and genuine musical nature lend to her singing an attractiveness rarely met in so young a singer, excepting among the great artists.

"She has appeared in many other concerts and in most of the leading musical clubs in this vicinity and always with pronounced success. Among these may be mentioned the Wednesday club of Monogahela, the Tuesday Musical club, the Council of Jewish Women, the Wilkinsburg club and the Delvera club.

"James Stephen Martin predicts a great career for her and believes that there is not a more promising singer in Pittsburg than Miss Kassmir."

Miss Kassmir visited in Duluth last summer and during her stay sang at a number of informal musicals.

THE PUBLIC NURSES OF DULUTH; THEIR FIELD OF LABOR; THEIR PROBLEMS AND DIFFICULTIES AND THE RESULTS ACCOMPLISHED

Small ills or large ones, ills that are mere trifles in the medical world or the really serious cases of ill health, all of them come within the scope of the visiting nurses and they meet them with equal seriousness and attention and with gentle care and careful instructions they leave a bettered situation behind them after their visits.

Duluth has a number of visiting nurses and the number is gradually growing. The field of work which is covered by them is gradually broadening out and becoming a source of improvement to the social and physical life of the city.

First there are the real visiting nurses whose duty it is to care for the sick who are unable to hire medical aid or competent nurses or in fact help of any kind, and to teach them how to help themselves and prevent unhealthful conditions. Their work is also largely educational and preventative. They visit homes in the various districts alloted to them or homes from which are received calls for help. They teach the benefits of proper living and care for health and home. Where those in the homes are entirely incapable through ill health to care for things, they work, clean, and nurse, making daily visits until the condition is relieved and the homes are again running in good order. Many of their calls come through the Associated Charities, many through friends of the sick or those interested in the work, and as the nurses become better acquainted in their districts calls come to them personally.

At all times they must be ready to meet these calls, must be prepared to handle all cases and must use tact in meeting these whom they wish to help.

Other Fields.

There are various fields of usefulness along these lines each differing from the other and the nurses obtain a higher plane of usefulness by specializing and keeping as far as possible to their one line of work. For instance there is the child welfare nurse who specializes in the care of children and infants. Miss Lydia Thiele has been engaged for this line of work by the Scottish Rite Masons of the city and has done most effective work during the summer among the children and babies of the city. She was actively interested in the hospital tent which was conducted under the direction of the Bethel Rescue Home for babies, in which many little homeless infants and sick babies whose home conditions were rather unfavorable, were cared for and most of them nursed back to health.

This was a new undertaking, but has proved a great success and all connected with it have been greatly gratified with results. Dr. Rowe, a specialist in infantile cases, was the originator of the plan and with the aid of several nurses and Miss Mauk, superintendent of the Bethel Home, he carried the scheme through.

Miss Herman, visiting nurse for the Associated Charities of this city, has a general field of work and does what she can in all kinds of cases and wherever she is called. She is one of the busiest of all the visiting nurses.

Mrs. Florence Lee, the tuberculosis nurse has been in Duluth for several years and was the first to go into the work here. She works under the Anti-tuberculosis society of this city and has been a great benefit to the cause since the beginning of her work here. Her field has grown so large and her duties so strenuous that her work is really too heavy for one person and an assistant is badly needed to aid her in her visits and nursing. A good deal of her work is educational work, teaching the prevention of the disease, the cures and benefits for those who have it and the best ways of caring for the patients.

Three School Nurses.

The board of education employs three visiting nurses who assist Doctors Weston, Schroeder and Weum in their school inspection work and who follow up the cases discovered in the public schools and suggest methods of cure for the children found defective and show the parents the best ways of helping the cases. They spend three hours daily in visiting the schools and inspecting the children and six more hours daily in visiting the homes, helping in the nursing and giving professional instructions. Miss Beatty was the first of the three nurses but as the work grew more in importance Miss Conroy was added to the force and Miss Murphy has been added this year to the list.

Another group of women who are doing splendid work in the city are the Methodist Deaconesses. While their work is not officially nursing in their calls and visits they come upon a great many cases where medical aid is needed and they have proven themselves most able nurses in many cases.

MRS. FLORENCE LEE,
Anti-Tuberculosis Nurse.

MISS MAUDE SEVERANCE,
Superintendent of Deaconess' Home.

MISS THIELE,
Nurse Employed by the Masonic Fraternity.

MISS HERNAN,
Associated Charaties Nurse.

When their work takes them to homes where unhealthful conditions exist they do all in their power to help better them and to go in to a home and get right down and sweep, scrub and clean is an every day occurrence with them. Often they are called to help out where the families are too poor to have a nurse and they stay at the homes until some aid is found.

Miss Maude Severance is the superintendent of this work and of the Deaconness home, ably assisted by Miss May Trimble, the parish deaconess of the First M. E. church; Miss Agnes Martin, traveler's aid deaconess; Miss Mary E. Ritter and Miss Nettalee Waldeck who work on the ranges, and Miss Alfhilda Thompson, the Finnish deaconess, who works among the people of her own nationality both here and in the range towns.

The Bethel Home.

The Bethel Home, too, should come in for its share in the credit for a great deal of charitable nursing, although the nurses there do no visiting. All of the cases are cared for in the home itself. Last year there were 122 patients cared for, sixty of whom were babies. These little creatures are kept there as long as the mother is unable to really take proper care of them. Usually they are from six months to three years old. Children older than that are placed in some good place if at that time there is no one to care for it, as the accommodations there are not suitable for children over that age. Miss Mauk has been the superintendent of this home for several years and displayed her ability in meeting its needs. Miss McKeague is the head nurse at the Home and was one of the nurses who cared for the babies in their hospital tent this summer.

Since the value of such work has been appreciated the excellent results obtained from the prevention work and the Educational work done by the visiting nurses has been making itself more and more felt and the results in Duluth have equaled those in other cities where the work has been established.

CLUBS AND MUSICAL

THE first concert in the series provided for the year by the Duluth musical committee. Horace W. Reyner, Stephen H. Jones and T. H. Hugo will be presented at the Lyceum Oct. 13 when Alice Neilsen and Ricardo Martin heading an opera company of grand opera artists will appear in the opening concert. This will be one of the most interesting of the events scheduled, for Ricardo Martin, a young American tenor of brilliant achievement and Alice Neilsen, who has won laurels in comic and grand opera, are both among the most interesting of the singers before the American public and that means the public of the world for Americans command the talent of the world. Miss Neilsen and Mr. Martin have surrounded themselves with a capable company and some wonderful ensemble work is assured for the company has sung together during the last two years at the Boston opera.

For the entire course of six concerts for the season, the committee has arranged for a material reduction in the advance subscriptions and the list will remain open one week longer. Advance subscriptions will be accepted for any number of seats for the entire course of the special concerts. Today the advance sale has reached $3,500 and it is expected that Duluth will subscribe to the $4,000 mark by the time the list is closed, for greater interest is being shown than ever before and more people are subscribing for family circle and balcony seats than ever before. Duluth is assured of a brilliant and interesting concert season during the coming winter.

The October concert will be followed by the appearance here in November of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra whose work is familiar to Duluth people. As in the past, three concerts will be presented, two evening concerts and a popular matinee in addition to the special matinee for the school children.

The next event in the series will be a vocal recital by Mme. Frances Alda, prima donna soprano of the Minneapolis opera and the Boston Opera company. This will be Mme. Alda's first visit to Duluth and she will be heard with rare delight.

In March the great Bonci, the foremost lyric tenor, will be heard in a recital and this will be a fitting climax to the best season of musical events which Duluth has ever anticipated. Wherever he has appeared Bonci has been received with the greatest enthusiasm. He is an artist who has commanded the admiration of the musical and artistic world not only because of his beautiful voice but for his art and intelligence.

This outline of musical attractions has interested Duluth people more than any previous announcement and it is expected that the interest and appreciation will exceed all previous years. The price for the advance subscribers for the entire course has been made lower than the single concerts would amount to and a large number of Duluthians have availed themselves of the privilege of early subscription. A new feature this year does away with the weary waiting in line and the advance subscribers will have their tickets mailed to them. The subscription list will close a week from Monday.

Nordica.

WILLIAM J. HENDERSON, the eminent New York critic in a critical discussion of the great singers before the public today, wrote of Mme. Nordica:

"Madame Nordica is the dean of the guild of dramatic sopranos now before the American public. She has a strong, penetrating powerful voice which ranges easily to high C. She has all her life been a close and intelligent student of vocal art, and she knows how to sing. Madame Nordica has never achieved as much by the communicative force of a flaming temperament as by fine intelligence. Her triumph as Isolde was a conquest of intellect. Her Brunnhilde was profoundly reflective, and her Kundry a decidedly literary product. But it was borne in mind that her intelligence has enabled her to succeed in a wide variety of parts. From Norina in 'Don Pasquale' through Marguerite Selika, Valentine and Aida up to the portentious Wagnerian heroines is a long progress."

Since this was written by Mr. Henderson Nordica has added to her triumphs by singing Isolde in French. Madame Nordica will apepar at the Lyceum Nov. 17.

LUELLA CHILSON OHRMAN.

Luella Chilson Ohrman, the soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, has gained her position in the artistic world by reason of a most beautiful voice, an art gained from study with the best of American and European teachers, as well as great musical gifts. She is extremely versatile, as shown by the catholicity of her programs, which include oratorio, opera and songs in four languages. She has appeared with the New York Symphony and Minneapolis Symphony orchestras with marked success.

PLAYGROUND SUPERVISOR.

Miss Casper was a visitor at the Salter school yesterday afternoon where she taught the children in some of the smaller grades some of her games.

Mrs. O'Mears of St. Paul the well known contralto will give the same program on the opening day as that which she will give before the Schubert club at St. Paul on its opening day.

Recital.

MRS. LILLIAN SHANNON delighted a large and representative audience Thursday afternoon at the introductory recital which she gave at the assembly hall of the Y. W. C. A., assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Morton Dworschak, pianist.

The program was a varied one which gave good opportunity for the display of her wide range of abilities as a singer and her sweet voice was displayed to advantage. Mrs. Shannon has a pleasing personality which gives an added charm to her work, as she makes it felt in all of her songs. Her distinct enunciation too was a quality which received much favorable comment. Mrs. Dworschak's piano number was one of the delights of the afternoon as well as her artistic accompaniments.

At these meetings plans for further work along the lines that have been laid down by the leaders in this movement will be discussed. # CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES

Following the regular schedule of services, which gives to the last Sunday of each month a missionary topic, the Christian Endeavorers throughout the land will study the ninth topic in their series entitled "A Missionary Journey Around the World," and will take as the topic of their meetings "Missions in Africa." In view of the interest which the men of the church are at present endeavoring to arouse in the field of mission work, it is interesting to note that ever since the first beginning of Christian Endeavor, missions have held one of the most prominent places in the thoughts of the young people. Many missionaries both male and female, have gone into the work of the mission fields, here and in foreign countries from the training received in Christian Endeavor societies. The reference provided for this week's topic is found in Acts viii: 26-40.

The following meetings have been reported to the local union:

The Second Presbyterian society will meet in the church at 7 p. m. and will be led by Mrs. J. A. McGaughey. Mr. and Mrs. McGaughey have always been earnest in their work with the young people in their different churches and the members of the Second Presbyterian Christian Endeavor society believe that their society will prosper under the leadership of their new pastor.

The Glen Avon Presbyterian society will meet in the Sunday school room of the church at 6:45 p. m. The leader for this service will be Miss Bessie Patterson.

The Westminster Presbyterian society meets at 6:45 p. m. in the church parlors. The leader for the evening will be Miss Eva McLyman of the Asbury M. E. Young People's society. An interesting service is looked forward to by the members of the Westminster society as Miss McLyman is no stranger to them.

The Union Church Disciples' society will meet at 7 p. m. in the Knights of Pythias hall. The leader will be L. L. Sparks, and the missionary committee of which he is the chairman will have direct charge of the service.

Sunday afternoon at the regular hour the Lakeside society will hold Christian Endeavor meeting and singing service at the poor farm. Any friends of the society are invited to attend. The party will leave on the 2:20 incline.

The event to which all local Endeavorers are looking forward is the coming rally. Although the rally is a quarterly event this meeting promises to be especially interesting on account of the features which will be presented at that time. First in interest perhaps will be the report of the delegate to the last International convention, held in Atlantic City in July. Miss Hicken of the Lakeside Presbyterian society represented the Duluth union and will present her story at this time. It is expected that this feature alone will draw a capacity crowd as to Endeavorers nothing can be more interesting than the story of the great conventions for which the society has become famous. The union will use for this meeting the Sunday school room of the First Presbyterian church. The election of officers will also be of interest, and it is expected that there will be considerable rivalry manifested in filling the different offices. The music at this rally will be in charge of S. W. Richardson with Miss Lilias McAskill as pianist. Miss McAskill is also upon the program for a piano solo. The Second Presbyterian church choir will be in attendance and will render an anthem. Further announcements in regard to this meeting will be made shortly.

The nominating committee of the union will meet in the First Presbyterian church parlors, Monday evening, Sept. 25, for discussion of their work. It is expected that all members of this committee will be on hand.

MINNESOTA FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS WILL CONVENE AT SAUK CENTER NEXT WEEK

Large Attendance Expected and Interesting Program Prepared.

Round Table Conferences at Home School for Girls.

Sauk Center, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The seventeenth annual meeting of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs will be held in Sauk Center, Sept. 26, 27 and 28. The council will meet at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, Sept. 26, and the executive board at 10:30 a. m., in the Congregational church. Tuesday and Thursday the day sessions will be held at the Congregational church and the evening sessions at the opera house. On Tuesday there will be an automobile ride at 4:00 p. m., and also a launch ride to Spring Park, where an informal reception will be given at the cottage of Mrs. W. O. P. Hilsdale. On Wednesday the all-day session will be held at the Home School for Girls, commencing at 9:00 a. m., and luncheon will be served at 1:00 p. m., for the officers, delegates, speakers and visiting club women at the Home school.

The hotels will accomodate a large number of delegates and private homes have offered to entertain delegates at reasonable rates. Mrs. E. J. Lewis is the chairman of the local entertainment committee and delegates are requested to write to her in advance.

Mrs. C. G. Higbee, president of the federation, is making a determined effort to have the women's clubs donate enough money to buy an organ for the Home School for Girls, which will be placed in the chapel for which the legislature made an appropriation last winter.

Sauk Center women are busy preparing for the reception of the delegates and for their entertainment. The present indications are that this will be the largest attended and the most interesting of all the federation meetings. A special car will be attached to the Winnipeg Flyer at St. Paul on Monday evening to bring the Twin City delegation. The Sauk Center delegates are Mrs. Mary Hogan and Mrs. F. B. Rowe of the Monday Musical club and Miss Marion Lewis and Mrs. E. J. Pike of the Gradatim club.

Call By the President.

Mrs. C. G. Higbee, the president, has issued a call to the meeting and says in part: "Come and enjoy the fruit of your labor in this fine town of Sauk Lake, in which is located the school of your dreams. See and believe. Drink in the truth that nothing is impossible when our organization becomes a unit in the endeavor. Come and see how the girls co-operate in the making of true women and good citizens. Come for the double program to be held at the school, Wednesday, Sept. 27, which will be adapted to both the women of the federation and the girls of the school.

"I hope no club will be without representation. Come and cast your ballot in the choice of new officers, in deciding whether we shall present an organ to the school, in amending the by-laws and in all the great working plans of the organization. The privilege is yours and also the duty.

"One of the great advantages of the organization lies in the fact that it is not necessary for all the members to cast off their household cares and badges of domesticity and go out to fight for the right in community or state. A representation of our peaceful army' answers every purpose and is quite sufficient to bring terror to evil-doers."

Mrs. A. Barto of Sauk Center, president of the Gradatim club, will deliver the address of welcome and Mrs. C. G. Higbee will respond.

Mrs. Fannie French Morse, superintendent of the Home School for Girls, will make an address at some time during the convention on her methods and her ideas of the humane training for delinquent girls.

At the luncheon for the friends of the federation in and out of the legislature, Governor and Mrs. Eberhart will be the guests of honor.

Senator L. C. Spooner of Morris will address the convention on "Why You Are Needed." The address of United States District Attorney Sims of Chicago, on "The White Slave Trade," is expected to be a leading feature of the convention.

At the musical on Thursday evening, under the direction of Mrs. Wilma Anderson Gilman, Minneapolis, Miss Ruth Anderson, violinist; Miss Kate Mork, pianist, and Mrs. Walter H. Thurston, vocalist, will be on the program.

On the program are the following Sauk Center musicians for the afternoon musicale: Miss Alta Hilsdale, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Markson, pianist, and Mrs. Cora Schleushner with Miss Erwin, pianist. Miss Hilsdale has studied in Paris, New York and Britain and is hurrying from Europe for this occasion.

An Ideal Meeting Place.

Mrs. C. G. Higbee, who has been president for four years, in a recent interview said: "Sauk Center is an ideal place for the meeting of the federation. The place is most beautiful, the people are very hospitable, and some of the most intelligent club work of the state has been done here for many years.

"There are 800,000 club women in the general federation, consisting of America and a few countries across the seas. There are 12,000 members in Minnesota.

"While it is perfectly legitimate that we women should gather together for self-culture and social pleasure, we do not justify organizatic unless we can take hold of great subjects of serious social service and self-forgetfulness in the cause of progress and better and higher citizenship. This federation stands distinctly for service to humanity, nor is this a difficult matter, as organization makes it practical and possible.

"There was a time when individual effort was sufficient to meet social need, but life has grown so complex that organization is absolutely necessary.

"In the four years of my presidency the work has been invaluable to me and a revelation as to what can be accomplished by organized and humanized womanhood.

"This organization reaches from the center to the circumference of the state. Its members are earnest, thinking, educated and capable women.

"Club women are not much from their homes, they are eminently domestic. The meetings are small, considering the vast membership and the power and influence of the federation.

"The strength of the federation consists in the loyalty of its unseen members, who are silent but powerful and numerous, who are apparently undisturbed in the home life, many of them mothers of families, but who are ever alert and who carry on the ideas developed at the meetings. These silent souls at home, the invisible but irresistible hand pressing on to victory, are the real federation. Whatever we do at the meetings these women accept and this peaceful army takes up and carries to a successful issue in their homes and districts."

Home School for Girls.

Considerable attention will be given to the subjects dealing with the delinquent girl, and the Home School for Girls will be an object lesson. The round table talks will be in one of the four cottages at the school. At present there are four cottages, for this institution is built on the cottage plan. Each building houses twenty girls, and each cottage is filled to its limit. A home mother presides over each cottage. The buildings are colonial in style. The exteriors are different in architecture. Low-lying, rough cement walls, white pillared porches and trimmings, small paned windows with green colonial shutters are pleasing features. Nothing of the elegant, but everything simple and useful. There is a large, sunny dining room on the first floor, windowed on three sides, with small oak tables for four girls. Hand-made doilies made by the girls, attractive dishes and glasses and flowers in the center of the table take away all thought of a state institution and make it like home.

From the dining room opens a recreation room or family sitting room from which is a porch, wide and sunny, leading into the open. To the left is the kitchen department, to the right of the entrance the office or waiting room. Each cottage has twenty individual rooms on the second floor, one for each girl which is her own while an inmate. There is a second officer, a teacher, and a third who trains in domestic science.

Reason for Women's Clubs.

At first it appeared as if the ends of the federation were simply literary and social, but more and better altruistic principles gradually came to the front and fundamental and into the constitution were put these words: "The improvement of the community in which we live." So in Virginia the efforts were for a state library commission; in Mississippi for better industrial and child labor laws, and various other beneficent endeavors in many other states.

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has truly and happily expressed the meaning and the foundation of this vast organized womanhood: "Gradually, but surely, the sense of the federation are coming to believe that this union of force is here, not a happening, not for a few years, but that it is a part of the plan of the world: that it is a great, helpful, uplifting influence for the making of the kingdom, the kingdom of the enlarged opportunities of higher ideals of the redeeming spirit which can have no better word of expression than the motto of the federation itself, 'Unity is Diversity.'"

The federation has accomplished many useful and beautiful achievements such as the placing of good pictures on the walls of the public schools, founding a School of Art Leagues, the erection of public buildings, of monuments, park gates, drinking fountains, and in other ways educating the people in good taste. From the civic section of the organization has come the beautifying of streets and making sanitary improvements; from the educational section, work for all children, poor and rich, the rousing of public interest in the public schools, the placing of women on school boards. Then the work done in practical problems that confront the housekeeper, for fully 90 per cent of the club women are housekeepers. They work together for the best manner of training children. The women have interested themselves in forestry, in industrial and child labor problems, in juvenile courts, in good literature, and wholesome character.

The Organization of Clubs.

The club idea began, says Helen M. Winslow, in New England in colonial days, when Bradshaw was governor of the Puritan colony of Massachusetts, when his wife, a brilliant literary woman, formed a society for various polemic and religious questions. Mrs. Anne Bradshaw was so advanced in her ideas that she was banished to Rhode Island "for sedition." But in her exile she was courageous and formed another society or club. In 1818 Hannah Adams, a literary woman, began a club in Boston, and in that cultured city the young ladies began "The Gleaners."

But way back in May, 821 A. D., Croly says that the religious and missionary zeal constrained the women to organize, and the "Concile des Femmes" was organized by the Abbess Hintrude at Nivelle Abbey in France.

Two very ancient religious orders are in existence in Europe and in this country we have the Sisters of Charity, but these are not parallel with the modern women's club, neither are the various women's organizations in the churches. It was the spirit of altruism and an intense desire to be of service to the rest of the world that brought into being the women's clubs. There was in the first beginnings no thought of fellowship or the breaking down of caste or society or cliques; it was a desire for service and co-operation and advancement in hand, heart and life. Helen Winslow well says: "Women in different spheres began to discover their sisterhood. This meant that a sense of fellowship with the whole world was at hand. And here began the differentiation between the club and the various societies that went before it. A club is a many-sided institution with equal and independent terms of fellowship, every member being allowed to find or make her own place, regardless of church affiliations or social prominence. The club is a chosen center where there is a social, natural and equal division of interests —a seed sowing of helpful work in and outside of the club. Help for those who need it, and in the shape they need it, has been the underlying motive of the women's clubs at all times; and character, not social position or wealth, is the basis of club aristocracy."

The real seat of the war for the organization and recognition of clubs began in the East, while it steadily passed on to the Central states, then to the West. Wisconsin had its Clio in Sparta clue in 1871; Montana its Homer club in 1891; Minnesota its St. Cloud Reading circle in 1880 and its Minneapolis Tuesday club in 1872; in Sioux Falls, S. D., its Ladies' History club in 1879, and at Fargo, N. D., its Women's club in 1884.

Minnesota Federation.

The Minnesota Federation was organized in April 25, 1895, and was admitted to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, June 15, 1895. Its colors are russet and gold, the Federation pin a gold star, bearing in the russet the word "Minnesota' and the monogram "F. W. C."

Minnesota has the great honor of an officer of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who is the recording secretary, Mrs. George O. Welch of Fergus Falls, a credit and a high recognition of the excellent grade of the Minnesota clubs and Federation.

All these committees will have reports for the annual meeting which will be presented by their respective chairmen, and they are hard at work collecting data for their reports at Sauk Center.

Resolutions.

The Minnesota Federation is in the vanguard of clubs and in the very thick of the fight for better and higher modes of living.

At the mid-winter meeting, held in St. Paul, Feb. 22, 1910, the following resolutions were passed, which express the attitude of the Federation on moral and civic matter.

"Whereas, The legislature of the State of Minnesota has passed laws concerning gambling in all forms, cigarette smoking and selling, the sale of intoxicating liquors, and keeping of houses of ill fame, or renting of property for such purposes, and the immoral traffic in women and girls; and

"Whereas, It is a notorious and obvious fact that these laws are not enforced, but instead, the law-breakers are practically protected and licensed by the municipal authorities, and

"Whereas, The increase in crime and immorality in the United States, as proven by official investigation and statistics, is so startling as to arouse the gravest apprehension; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs, representing over 10,000 women, many the mothers of the present growing generation, respectfully demand of the governor, the attorney general, and the other executive officers of our state, that immediate steps be taken to secure a rigid enforcement of these wise laws, in order that our children may be protected, may learn respect for authority, and may become a more reputable and law-abiding people than we are today."

At St. Peter the Federation also went on record as grateful for the appointment of Mrs. Fannie French Morse as superintendent of the Home School for Girls at Sauk Center and pledged to the board of control and to Mrs. Morse "our hearty co-operation in any measure that may seem necessary for the complete establishment of an institution that shall be a model of its kind and worthy of the men and women of this great state."

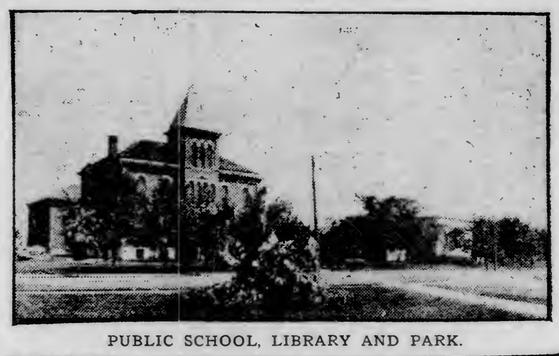
The women's clubs of the Fourth district will send a big delegation from St. Paul. The Guild of Catholic Women with nearly 500 members has affiliated with the district.

Among the round table-talks will be one on anti-tuberculosis led by Mrs. George H. Christian of Minneapolis; on handicraft by Mrs. Andreas Ueland of Minneapolis; on civic work by Mrs. Clarence L. Attwood of St. Cloud; on education by Mrs. E. W. Lamberton of St. Peter.

Mrs. Edgar H. Loyhed of Faribault is a prominent candidate for president to succeed Mrs. Higbee, but there may be other aspirants.



Maj. John McGibbon, the city council and the business men and the women's clubs of Sauk Center are united in endeavoring to make this gathering one of the best ever held in Minnesota. Many civic improvements have been completed to make the place beautiful and clean for these meetings. Sauk Center is on Sauk lake and is a most beautiful city. The Home School for Girls is on a site overlooking Sauk lake and near the Indian battle grounds of the Sioux and Ojibways. Sauk Center has pretty homes, good business houses and is favorably known for its scenery and its perfect sanitary conditions.

A PUBLIC SERVANT.

Why, yes.

Well, I'm one of de public an' me hat's blowed overboard. Jump in an' git it!

LANGUISHING.

I WISHT rural mail delivery had never come along,
I wisht the derned ole trolley cars wuz back where they belong!
Say, don't you know us farmer men ain't got no chance a-tall
To do a single thing but work from spring clear through the fall?
An' when cold weather shuts us in, an' we are left alone,
Do we call on all our neighbors? Yes—we use the telyfone!
If Nancy knowed what's on my min', she'd git het up an' frown,
But dern it! you can understan'—I want to go to town!

I USE' to git there every week—I I went to git the mail—
But now it's jest the same as if they had me tied in jail.
They wuz a groc'ry store them days where folks from miles away
Would go to do the'r trading' an pass the time o' day.
That groc'ry store wuz forced to quit—the postoffices wuz shut—
An' all that's left of that ther' town is jest a muddy rut!
I know! we git a daily now—the car'yer brings it down,
But dern it! what's the difference! I want to go to town!

THE trolley cars run pas' my door—they almos' seem to fly,
But I dast even take the time to watch as they roll by.
I got to git an autobeel fer Nancy an' the girls—
I'll steal the blame thing out o' night and take some joy whirls!
We got a fonygraf what plays the lates' op'ry airs,
But that don't help a man like me fer-git his toil and cares.
I want a show where ladies dance—sometimes ther' is a clown;
I'm goin' to see one, too, you bet—when I git to town!

WHAT DID THE YOUNG MAN DO?

Fred—Will you shoot the chutes with me?

Maud—I don't know. I'm so timid that father always has to hold me in when we ride.

Didn't Worry Him.

THEY were waiting on the corner for the same street car, and after each had growled about its slowness in appearing one of them said.

"Well, it begins to feel sortish fallish, doesn't it?"

"Perhaps so," was the cautious reply.

"Shouldn't wonder if we had an early winter."

"H'm."

"The New Jersey weather prophet predicts it. He says it will come early and hang on late.

"Yes?"

"And they are going to advance the price of coal."

"H'm."

"And clothing is going up."

"So?"

"And meats are sure to take another jump."

"Quite likely."

"But you don't seem to care."

"No, my friend, I don't. I belong to four different poker clubs and can deal aces from the bottom of the pack, and why should I let the little things of life worry me?"

Why don't you leave it in the bathhouse, then?

THE LATEST.

What are you doing up there in my apple tree?

Fell down here from an airship.

HER INTEREST IN THE GAME.

"Fred, dear," said Mrs. Young, "what do they mean when they say a man tore off a hot one to left field?"

"It's a scientific phrase," was the weary rejoinder. "You can't explain it precisely unless you have a centigrade thermometer to measure the temperature accurately and a set of surveying instruments to ascertain direction."

"Oh," she answered contentedly, "that makes it quite clear. But do you know, I thought it had something to do with baseball."

HIS VACATION.

"How did your husband spend his vacation?"

"As chauffeur of an electric fan."

A SURE THING.

It was at this spot that I proposed to you, when we became engaged.

Yes. I always bring 'em here. It'll most always make a man propose to bring 'em here. I've tried it on eight already.

FULLY EXCUSED.

Earlie, why didn't you cut the grass, as I told you to?

I was going to, father, but the truant officers are around looking for boys under 14 who are working and I was afraid I'd get you into trouble.

He Was Boxed Up.

I WAS sharing my seat in the smoker of a passenger car with a farmer when a man came through the train taking a straw vote. I had no objections to giving the name of my candidate, but when it came to the farmer his answer was.

"No, nabur, I druther not."

"But you are a voter," was urged.

"Oh, yes."

"And you want to see a good man at the head of things?"

"I reckon I do, but you can pass on."

When the man had passed I asked the farmer what his objections were, and he wriggled around and finally answered:

"Wall, I'll tell ye. My wife is for Taft and my mother-in-law is for Roosevelt, and I'm boxed up. If I go for Roosevelt the wife will leave the house; if I go for Taft the mother-in-law won't. She's with me on a two weeks' visit, you see, and I'm not going to do anything to prolong it to forty years!"

JOE KERR.

IN A CANOE.

Ruth (poetically)—Isn't this glorious? Couldn't you just drift thus forever, down life's long, shadowy stream?

Jack (prosaically)—Well, yes, I could drift down all right, but it'd be no joke paddling back!

AS IT REALLY HAPPENS.

Back from your two weeks, I see.

Yep.

I presume you got engaged a number of times?

Naw; things don't go like that in real life, somehow. I got engaged the first week all right enough, but it took me all the second week to break it off.

Wayside Wisdom.

There is a kind of virtue which drives other people to vice.

Punctuality is the politeness of kings—and the insolence of bill collectors.

There is hardly anything a man won't eat if you tell him it is good for his health.

Every married woman has it all figured out—what she is going to wear when her husband dies.

If a man's rich, people say he is stingy. If he's poor, they say he is shiftless. It's pretty hard, isn't it?

A woman can believe anything about a person she dislikes, and disbelieves anything about one whom she loves.

Good deeds are scarcer than bad ones, but one evil act will keep people talking longer than a hundred good ones.

The man who complains loudest about his employer's stinginess, is usually the one who makes his wife account for every cent he gives her to spend.

Who Is It?

WILL he run again?"

"Is he talked out?"

"Have he and Bryan become chummy?"

"Has he made up with Taft?"

"If elected would he return to his policies?"

"What States could he carry?"

"Is there a popular movement for his candidacy?"

"Has he learned that silence is golden?"

"What would he have done to Mexico?"

"Will he stump the country next summer?"

"Does he want war with Japan?"

"Is it true that he has lost any of his nerve?"

"Does his denial that he will be a candidate mean that he is planning to get there with both feet?"

JOE KERR.

"Wonder Whose Little Duckie I Am Now?"

Almost Satisfied.

YOU, sir," said the man on the street car as he folded up his paper and turned to the man on his right, "are you an American citizen."

"Yes, sir."

"What of the trusts?"

"Dunno."

"What of cold storage?"

"Dunno."

"What of graft?"

"Dunno."

"What of strikes and lock-outs?"

"Dunno."

"Sir, what of the extravagant way this Government is run?"

"Dunno."

"What of the deficit in the free delivery system?"

"Dunno."

"You don't know! Great Scotts, man, what kind of a person are you not to take an interest in these things!"

"Say," was the reply, "I'm almost satisfied, but not quite. When I can take up two seats in a street car and stretch my legs across the aisle without the conductor calling me a hog I shan't care a copper if the Senate of the United States steals the whole Panama Canal!"

UNCLE SAM'S NIECES WHO ARE FAMOUS WOMEN PREACHERS

Of the Three Thousand Who Are Regularly Ordained to Preach the Gospel, the Rev. Anna H. Shaw is One of the Most Widely Known, and She is the Only Woman Who Has Ever Preached in All the European Nations of Great Britain, Germany, Denmark, Holland and Sweden--How She Educated Herself By Reading From Wall Paper--The Dean of American Preachers is the Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, Who Has Been Preaching for Sixty Years --New England's Pioneer Woman Preacher--The Michigan Woman Who Built Up a Run Down Church Into a Strong Institutional One--Other Well Known Women Preachers of Today.

(Copyrighted, 1911, by E. J. Edwards.)

IT IS doubtless the general impression that women preachers, although some have gained national or even international reputation, are not at all a numerous class, yet according to the Rev. Anna H. Shaw, who is probably the most widely known of women preachers, and who, as head of the National American Woman's Suffrage association, is in a position to know where of she speaks, there are about 3,000 women ministers in the United States.

For the most part these women belong to the so-called liberal denominations. Many of them are Unitarians or Universalists. There are a good many also in the Methodist Protestant church, and there are some who are regularly ordained ministers in the Congregrational church.

The Rev. Anna H. Shaw, who is a minister of the Methodist Protestant church, enjoys the distinction of being the first ordained woman of any nationality or demomination to preach in England, Denmark, Holland and Sweden. The complications which arose in connection with the attempt to obtain permission for her to preach in Norway at the time of the Woman's International convention during the past summer, became a matter of world wide interest, and various accounts of them were published. The question of Miss Shaw's preaching or not became a burning political issue in Norway, a matter for action by the council of ministers of state and of discussion in parliament. Miss Shaw's own account of the incident is interesting.

She had promised to women of Christiania, the Norwegian capital, to deliver a lecture in that city. Shortly before the date set for the lecture, the women of Christiania learned that she was to preach in the Gustav Vasa church, the state church of Stockholm, the Swedish capital, and they forthwith determined to have her preach in the state church in Christiania. They applied to the minister of the state church, but he declined to grant permission, basing his refusal on the Norwegian law which makes women ineligible for office in the army, the navy or the church. The women appealed from the decision to the council of ministers of state, on the ground that, in a case involving a minister of another church, the decision rested with the council, and not with the minister of the state church. The women had the law on their side, and the council of state had to take the question up. By a vote of 9 to 4 they decided adversely to Miss Shaw, but she had the satisfaction, as she says, of having the vote of the premier in her favor.

The radicals took up the controversy and announced their intention of making it an issue at the next election, while in parliament the minister of the state church was questioned about his course in regard to it, and asked to explain why he assumed to decide a question that was beyond his jurisdiction.

How One Woman Educated Herself.

Although she was born in England, Miss Shaw was reared in the backwoods of Michigan, her parents having migrated thither when she was only 4 years of age. The wall paper of the log cabin in which they lived the hard life of pioneers was composed of the leaves of old religious periodicals, and that was about the only reading matter Miss Shaw had for a good many years. At 15, nevertheless, in spite of her handicaps, she had acquired sufficient education to become a teacher. She showed early a gift for public speaking, and before she entered upon her college course she had been licensed as a preacher by the district conference of the Metrodist Episcopal church in her locality. While a student in the theological department of Boston university, she was pastor of the Methodist church at Hingham, Mass. Her next pastorate, in which she served seven years, was at East Dennis, Mass. There she preached as both the Methodist and Congregational churches.

Although the Methodist church readily licensed her as a local preacher, she was met with a refusal because of her sex when she applied for ordination as a minister in that body. Then she applied to the Methodist Protestant church, and she is the first woman to have received ordination as a minister of that denomination. She is still a member of the New York conference of that church.

While a pastor in Massachusetts Miss Shaw studied medicine at Boston university, from which she holds the degree of M. D. For twenty years past she has held no regular pastorate, but has given her time to the cause of woman's rights. In this cause she has spoken before the legislatures of nearly all the states in the Union and before committees of congress. In spite of her activity in this work, she frequently preaches.

Miss Shaw holds that women will not be able to do their best work in religious enterprises until they have been emancipated politically. She says that she does not know of a woman minister who is not also an equal suffragist.

There is nothing ecclesiastically austere in Miss Shaw's manner. The first impression that her personality makes is one of overflowing energy and good humor. She is short and rather stout, with gray hair and a young face, and eyes that have a merry twinkle. As a speaker she is incisive and eloquent, with an unusual gift of humor.

America's First Woman Preacher.

The first woman who was ordained as a minister in the United States is the Rev. Dr. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, who recently celebrated her 86th birthday. She was ordained as an orthodox Congregational minister in 1853, but became later a Unitarian. She has been preaching for more than sixty years and she preaches now, once every month at All Souls church, Elizabeth, N. J.

Born in a log cabin at Henrietta, N. J., at the close of the first quarter of the last century, Dr. Blackwell—Miss Antoinette Louisa Brown she was then—was graduated from Oberlin in the '40s. She had been very serious and religious even as a young girl, and her friends were not much surprised when she announced her intention, after her graduation from college, of entering the Oberlin theological seminary. The professors of divinity there at that time were strongly opposed to allowing women to become ministers; they did not take at all to the idea of a woman theological student. They frankly told Miss Brown that if they could they would not admit her to the seminary because of her sex. But as the charter of the institution provided that no one should be excluded as a student on account of sex, they could not refuse. She completed the theological course, and preached her first public sermon in her native town about 1848.

The young woman preacher early won the respect and friendship of two great New York editors, Horace Greeley and Charles A. Dana, and they offered to provide her with a hall and a salary of $1,000 a year if she would preach regularly in New York. She decided, however, that she was too young to undertake to fill a pulpit in a great city, and so she accepted the pastorate of the Congregational church at South Butler, N. Y., at a salary of $300 a year. There she was ordained as a Congregational minister. The ordination called forth bitter denunciation from many quarters. So strong was the feeling that when some time later she was sent by her church as a delegate to a temperance convention in New York, she was howled and hooted down when she attempted to speak.

It was some years after she began her career as a pastor that she became the wife of Samuel C. Blackwell. They had several children, but Mrs. Blackwell, in spite of family cares, continued preaching. Fifty years after her admission to the theological seminary, Oberlin honored her with the degree of doctor of divinity.

Dr. Blackwell has been very active in organizations for the advancement of the political and economic position of women, and her interest in them has been today as ever. This past summer she made a trip from her summer home at Martha's Vinyard especially to take part in the suffragist parade in New York city. Dr. Blackwell is the author of a number of books, including several philosophical works, a novel, and volumes of poems.

New England's First Women Minister.

Although only about four years younger than the Rev. Dr. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, the Rev. Phebe Ann Hanaford is about fifteen years her junior as a minister. The Rev. Mrs. Hanaford has the distinction, however, of being the first woman ordained as a minister in New England. She was born in Nantucket, was married when she was 20, and became a Universalist preacher when she was nearly 40. She has been pastor of churches in Bingham and Waltham, Mass., New Haven, Conn., and Jersey City. She gained prominence not only as a preacher, but as an advocate of various reforms, and of temperance, and also as a literary worker. She has been a busy writer and the list of her books is a long one. Mrs. Hanaford for a number of years tended to remember the church in his will became so interested in what the young pastor was doing that he decided not to wait until he was dead before giving, and donated $20,000 for a new church building. Thus the young woman pastor was able to build up what is now known as the "People's Church."

Later the Rev. Mrs. Crane organized the Woman's Civic Improvement league, the object of which was municipal housecleaning. This organization got the city to turn over to it six city blocks, with the understanding that it should keep the streets in that section clean during that time. The league managed to clean the streets so well that the city adopted its methods.

Mrs. Crane in recent years has devoted most of her time to work in connection with the sanitary and social improvement of cities and has become widely known as an expert in municipal housecleaning, in which capacity she has been called upon by many cities in divers sections of the country to assist them. She retired from active pastoral work some years ago. Mrs. Crane is an accomplished pianist, and in spite of her various activities has managed to find time to devote to music.

MISS EVA BOOTH, PREACHER TO THE MASSES

REV. DR. ANTOINETTE BROWN BLACKWELL AMERICA'S FIRST WOMEN PREACHER.

REV. ELEANOR E. GORDON OF DES MOINES

REV. ANNA A. SHAW OF NEW YORK.

REV. CAROLINE BARTLETT CRANE OF KALAMAZOO

Michigan's Noted Woman Minister.

A noted woman minister is the Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Mich., who is widely known as the "Municipal Evangelist." In 1889, as a young women of about 30 years, she was called and ordained as pastor of the first Unitarian church of Kalamazoo. She had previously been active as a newspaper writer and editor, and had been for several years pastor of a church in Sioux Falls, S. D. The Kalamazoo church to which she was called was in a seemingly moribund condition. The membership had dwindled down to a few old men and women. Within three years after the new minister had taken charge, the church building was too small to accommodate all those who wanted to attend the services.

The Rev. Miss Bartlett—it was some years after this that she married Dr. A. W. Crane of Kalamazoo—established many classes and clubs in connection with the church. She built a women's gymnasium and had a 10-cent supper served every day in the basement of the church building. An old man who in has made her home in New York city.

Mrs. Hanaford is the first woman who acted as chaplain for a state legislature. New Haven, while she was a pastor there, was one of the capitals of Connecticut, that state having then two capitals, Hartford being the other. The New Haven pastors were invited in turn to undertake the duties of chaplain at the legislative sessions, and Mrs. Hanaford was invited just as the other ministers were.

Mrs. Hanaford is one of the first women ministers, if not the very first, who performed the marriage ceremony. She is the only woman, it is said, who ever officiated at the marriage of her own daughter. She not only married her daughter, but she ordained her own son, the Rev. H. A. Hanaford, whose death occurred a few years ago.

Chairman of a Political Convention.

The Rev. Henrietta Greer Moore, who is pastor of a church in Dayton, Ohio, and has been an ordained minister in the Universalist church since 1891, is one of the most widely known of the women preachers in the United States. She has taken a prominent part in temperance, woman's suffrage and missionary movements, and has spoken in almost all the states in behalf of these causes. At the same time she has been a hard-working pastor, preaching for many years at the Universalist church in Springfield, Ohio.

Miss Moore presided as temporary chairman over the Ohio State Prohibition party convention in 1895, and has the distinction of being the first woman that ever was chosen to fill such a position. She is a trustee of Buchtel college, Akron, Ohio, and a trustee of the American Temperance university at Harriman, Tenn. She is regarded as an exceptionally eloquent speaker.

The Rev. Olympia Brown of Racine, Wis., has been a preacher for fifty years. She was ordained a Universalist minister in 1863, but she had been preaching for several years before that. She has held pastorates at many places, including Weymouth, Mass., Bridgeport, Conn., Racine, and several other towns in Wisconsin. She has lectured in almost every section of the country in the interest of various causes connected with the woman's crusade, and is regarded as a vigorous and aggressive protagonist, as well as a forceful speaker.

In 1873 the Rev. Mrs. Brown married John Henry Willis, a business man of Racine. He sympathized with her ideas about the independence of women, and he readily consented to her retaining her own name after their marriage. So it is as the Rev. Mrs. Brown, not as the Rev. Mrs. Willis, that she has become famous.

Des Moines' Two Women Preachers.

The Rev. Dr. Mary Augusta Safford of Des Moines, Iowa, has been preaching for thirty years, and as a pastor has built up a number of churches. For the past twelve years she has been pastor of the First Unitarian church, Des Moines, and for a number of years she has been president of the Iowa Association of Unitarian Churches. Two years ago she made a trip, lasting six months, through England and Scotland, and preached at many places in those countries.

The Rev. Eleanor E. Gordon is another Unitarian minister and pastor of Des Moines, Iowa. She was ordained in 1889, and has been active as a pastor in Iowa since then. She has a reputation as a fine preacher, whose sermons have a remarkable intellectual quality. She is also well known as a leader of reform movements.

Mrs. Anna Carlin Spencer, who for a number of years past has been prominently engaged in educative and philanthropic work in New York city, was for several years before her marriage to the Rev. William H. Spencer of Providence, R. I., an occasional preacher. After her marriage she was associated with him in ministerial work in several places in Massachusetts and New York state. She was ordained a minister in 1891, and for several years thereafter was minister of the Religious Society of the Bell Street chapel, Providence, R. I., an independent parish. She is now assistant leader of the Society of Ethical Culture in New York.

Two successful women ministers are the Rev. Dr. Marian Murdock and the Rev. Florence Busk, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio. They now have the joint pastorate of a Unitarian church in Oshkosh, Wis.

Wife and Husband Both Pastors.

Mrs. Florence Crooker, a prominent woman minister of the Universalist church, is the wife of a Unitarian minister. Both she and her husband are active as pastors in the vicinity of Boston. Another prominent woman minister is the Rev. Ella E. Bartlett of St. Louis.

One of the most scholarly of the women ministers was the Rev. Annis Ford Eastman, whose death occurred recently. She was the wife of a Congregational minister, the Rev. Samuel E. Eastman, and it is said that her career as a preacher began one Sunday morning when her husband was taken suddenly ill and she took his place in the pulpit, almost at a moment's notice, so that the congregation might not go without a sermon. The people liked her preaching, and made her her husband's associate in the pastorate of the church. She became a regularly ordained Congregational minister in 1889, and after serving as pastor of several churches for a short time, succeeded in 1893, the Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, brother of Henry Ward Beecher, and himself famous as a pulpit orator, as pastor of the Park church, Elmira, N. Y.

The Rev. Dr. Augusta J. Chapin was, at the time of her death five years ago, one of the most prominent women ministers in the country. She was ordained a Universalist minister in 1862, and had been the pastor of churches in Michigan, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Nebraska and New York. She was well known also as a writer and lecturer on literature and art. She was the first woman who ever received the degree of doctor of divinity.

The late Emma Booth Tucker, whose death occurred in 1903, was one of the most famous of women preachers. She had joint and equal authority with her husband, Frederick Booth Tucker, in the command of the Salvation Army in the United States. Her gift of eloquence entitled her to a place among real orators, and in her career as an evangelist she probably addressed more and greater audiences than any other womap preacher has done. Then there is Miss Eva Booth, the present head of the Salvation Army in this country, and there also is Maud Ballington-Booth—both of them preaching constantly, as well as heading important movements for the betterment, mentally, materially and spiritually, of great masses of people.

MINNESOTA UNIVERSITY

Impressive Mass Meeting of Students Feature of Opening Day.

Duluth Well Represented in New Pledges to the Fraternities.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The university was formally opened Wednesday morning with an impressive mass meeting of the students in the Armory building. President Vincent made a masterly address to the students in which he urged the co-operation of the different colleges and departments in the development of a strong university spirit. He said that great organizations are made up of minor organizations the fusion of which units are absolutely essential in the development of a loyal, liberal and broadminded school spirit. Prexy also impressed upon the minds of the students their duty to their state and urged everyone to pledge himself to the social interest, justice and democracy of the state.

President Vincent's speech followed the convocation service composed of the doxology, a responsive reading, a hymn, and a prayer offered up by Rev. Willard C. Richardson.

Silent addresses from the deans of the various colleges were called for and the students were asked to rise with their respective deans. This is a new method of introduction at the university.

President's Inauguration.

The inauguration of President Vincent will be held Oct. 18. The occasion will be celebrated the preceeding evening with a large torchlight parade in which fully 3,500 students are expected to take park. The boys will carry large torches, the girls will bear Japanese lanterns, while a large number of the alumni, garbed in their graduation caps and gowns, will bring up the rear of the procession.

Elaborate ceremonies are being arranged by the faculty and alumni for the inauguration of the new president and the day, which will be a holiday for the students, is sure to surpass any event which has ever taken place at the school. Many delegates from universities throughout the country have declared their intention of attending the inaugural ceremonies, among whom will be President F. L. McVey of the University of North Dakota and three instructors from that institution, who were formerly students at the University of Minnesota.

Tryouts by Masquers.

Tryouts for vacancies in the Masquers will be held next Monday and Wednesday. Extracts from Sir Arthur Pinero's "The Magistrate," which will be the first play to be presented, will be used in the tryouts. The Masquers of Minnesota stand high in the rank of dramatic clubs throughout the country and President Crocker expects this year will surpass the great record of last year.

Freshman Girls Entertained.

The freshman girls are being entertained this afternoon by the Young Women's Christian association. A program of typical Minnesota stunts has been arranged and every effort is being made to make the new girls perfectly acquainted with university life.

Changes in Law Teaching.

Radical changes in the methods of teaching in the law department will be inaugurated with the advent of Dean Vance into university affairs.

Instead of the old system of studying each subject separately, the Harvard case books and the system of teaching obtained at Columbia, Harvard, Yale and other large Eastern schools will be adopted.

Polo and Swimming Teams.

Capt. Joseph Estabrook stated yesterday that prospects for a successful water polo and swimming teams are reporting for practice, being attracted by the trips to Chicago and Illinois this year.

Tusler, Young, E. Johnson, Homes and Critchett, with Capt. Estabrook, make a wonderful nucleus of old men around whom a championship team is expected to be built.

Debating Team.

The first meeting the intercollegiate debating team was held Wednesday, and plans for the year were laid. Charles Evans of Duluth, who was a star on last year's freshman team, is expected to make a strong bid for the intercollegiate team this year, and wonders are expected from him. Mr. Evans was the captain and one of the best debaters who ever attended the Duluth Central High school. He was a member of the 1910 class and very prominent in school activities at that institution.

Pledges to Fraternities.

Duluth is well represented this year in the number of new pledges to the university sororities and fraternities.

Miss Gladys Segog, who was vice president of the class of 1910 at Central high, pledged Alpha Phi. Miss Gladys Lenning, '11, a sister of Miss Viola Lenning, who graduated from the university last June pledged Pi Beta Phi; and Miss Ethelyn Phelps pledged to Delta Delta Delta.

Morrison Harris of the class of 1911 pledged to the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. "Morrey" was captain and forward on Central's star basket ball team last season and was perhaps the best forward ever turned out at Duluth. He also pitched on the baseball team, which won the high school championship of the Head of the Lakes last spring.

How Many Men Keep Youthful

(From The Social Register)

It is well known that within recent years the men have become extensive patrons of beauty specialists and masseurs. Not only the fastidious, but men generally who have a care for personal appearance. This has also led to the employment by many of means calculated to enhance or preserve physical attractiveness, especially by those who abhor "beauty parlors."

Of these, perhaps the most widely used is ordinary mercolized wax—which explains the mystery of the silver-haired gentleman with the boyish face. The mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is applied after shaving, the same as cold cream, only not rubbed in. This gradually absorbs the dead and half-dead cuticle in tiny particles, revealing the fresher, healthier-hued skin beneath. To secure best results many apply the wax at night, washing it off in the morning. Women not only encourage husbands in this, but use the treatment themselves.

RED RIVER VALLEY FARMERS BUYING MANY CORN BINDERS THIS YEAR

FIFTEEN CORN BINDERS PURCHASED IN CROOKSTON.

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—That corn can be successfully raised in the Red River valley and that more was raised this year than ever, is evidenced by the number of corn binders that have been sold by local dealers in the past few days. The accompanying picture shows a string of fourteen binders purchased here from one local firm by Red River valley farmers. This big business is not confined to Crookston machinery dealers, as Fosston, Ada, Warren, Hallock, Stephen, Argyle and all the valley towns report a heavy business in corn harvesters.

This marks a new epoch in the history of the valley. Fear that corn could not be raised successfully has kept many farmers from this section, but not a farmer can be found but who now looks upon his corn crop as certain as any other crop he plants.

The fifteen farmers in the accompanying cut are: Fred Welter, John Kathman, John Barchus, A. Torgerson, John Knudson, John Finkenbinder, James Healig, G. F. Stone, R. T. Bickler, Winter Bros., John Huffman, John Perry, Frank Martell, O'Breight Bros., and Joseph Barlow. With two exceptions they all came to the valley poor men and are now every one well to do.

Every farmer who raises corn has stock of all kinds, which means many pastures, diversification and more intensified farming.

For months I was bothered by pain and soreness in my back. I had other troubles and they all showed that there was much uric acid in my system. When I was feeling poorly, I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills. I immediately got a box and they were just what I required. In a short time they cured me and about a year ago they quickly drove away a spell of backache that had come on me. ## ONE DOSE MAKES INDIGESTION GO

Heartburn, Gas, Sourness and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

ARCHITECTS PLAN "DO IT FOR DULUTH" CAMPAIGN

Newly Formed Club Will Have Backing of Contractors.

Will Work to Prevent Contracts Going Outside the City.

A campaign for the patronizing of home industry is promised in building circles in the near future by a number of Duluth contractors, material men and architects.

The foundation for such a campaign is now being laid, and had its beginning with the formation of the Duluth Architectural club, which was organized recently for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the architects and draftsmen of this city, and incidentally to keep the business in Duluth.

No sooner had a certain corporation in this city announced that it would construct here a building to cost at the least $100,000 than the rumor came out that the job was going to a St. Paul architectural firm. Members of the local organization, in company with a sub-committee from the publicity committee of the Duluth Commercial club, and a number of material men of this city, then called upon officials of the company and placed the matter squarely before them, asking them to leave the business in Duluth.

So far no definite answer has been given by the officials, but it is understood that the business is to be kept here.

The matter is not one of importance only to architects, but also to contractors and material men. Attention is called to the fact that of all the buildings in the city of Duluth, designed by out of town architects, not one has been put up by Duluth contractors, nor have any Duluth material firms contributed material of any account for them.

When an out of town architect secures the contract for a building, it is said that a firm from his city gets the contract, and that the architect also favors the material men of that city. This work has been going on for many years, and the Duluth men of these allied trades and professions have come to the conclusion that now is the time to end it, if it is ever to be done.

Local Men Capable.

"The architects of this city are as capable to prepare plans for any building ever proposed for Duluth as any outside architects," said a prominent Duluth man of that profession this morning, in speaking of the conditions prevailing here. "When a certain club house was under consideration, a member of the building committee stated that he believed the Duluth architects were very capable when it came to the preparation of plans for a building costing any where from $25,000 to $50,000, but when it came to a matter involving $250,000, he thought they were not able to the task. Now when the public learns a little about the business of the architect, they will know that to become an architect one must know the architect's bible from cover to cover and be able to solve any problem. Duluth's architects are just as capable in the preparations of plans for a million-dollar building as they are for one costing only $25,000.

"There are firms in this city which are continually crying 'Do It For Duluth,' but when they have any work to be done they go to outside people. The head of a certain firm which is foremost in the movement to 'Do It For Duluth,' went to an outside architect when he had plans made for a residence. They do not adhere to the principle that they are always advocating, and now that the club has been organized, and is gaining strength, we mean to push the matter, and try to keep the business in this city.

"The people of Duluth can yell their heads off, calling attention to the aerial bridge, the boulevard, the fine weather and other attractive features of this city, but they will never build up a big city until they learn to patronize Duluthians and leave their money here. The architects, the contractors and the material men are residents of this city, and pay taxes, and they are entitled to their share of work."

* * *

From the standpoint of the building inspector, the past week has been a fairly busy one, for during the past six days thirty permits calling for a total expenditure of $106,350, were taken out. Five of these permits were of good size. J. F. Killorin, who is having a handsome brick and frame residence constructed on Greysolon road and Twenty-seventh avenue east, took out a permit for $40,000. The Fitger Brewing company was given a permit for $24,000, for the building of a concrete barn at its plant, Seventh avenue east and Superior street. A permit for $10,000 was taken out by M. A. and C. Becklinger, of New Duluth, for the erection of a two-story brick building, at New Duluth, to be used for stores and flat purposes. The Standard Investment company, which is putting up six frame dwellings on Ninth avenue east and Ninth street, took out permits for those in a consideration of $9,000. The locality there is growing rapidly, and in the last five years, many scores of houses have been put up, while improvements in the line of cutting through streets and grading, have been carried on. The street car line is to be extended in that direction soon, which will mean a greater development of that community. P. Johnson, who is having a flat building constructed at Sixteenth avenue east, between Superior and Jefferson streets, took out a permit for $6,000, and Roy Gint, who is putting up a dwelling on Allendale avenue, was given a permit for $2,300.

D. V. Case & Broomhall are preparing plans for Henry Hughes & Co., of Grand Rapids, Minn, for a potato warehouse, of 10,000 bushels capacity, which will cost about $5,000. These architects are also making plans for the remodeling of the old part of the courthouse at Grand Rapids.

* * *

Kelly & Lignell, architects, let the contract during the past week for the general work on the county jail at Grand Marais, to Andrew Heastrom, of Grand Marais. When finished the jail will have cost about $5,000 The electrical work for the courthouse at Grand Marais, which is now in the process of erection, was awarded to the Burgess Electric company of Duluth, for $1,800.

* * *

Ellerbe, Round & Sullivan are preparing plans for a four-room frame schoolhouse to be built about four miles from Barnum, Minn. It is to be modern in every detail, and will cost when finished about $8,000. This fall and winter, however, only one-half of it is to be put up, and this part will cost about $6,000. The same firm will receive bids on Sept. 30 for the plumbing, heating and wiring of the Barnum high school.

* * *

The contract for the construction of the residence of Howard E. Matthews on the boulevard, between Sixth and Seventh avenue west, was awarded this week to J. R. Quigley & Son. It will cost about $3,000.

* * *

V. J. Price & Co. have completed plans for a two-room frame schoolhouse for the Hibbing school district, bids for which are being taken by N. A. Young, county superintendent of schools.

* * *

The Meadowlands school, F. L. Young & Co., architects, is nearly completed, only the finishing touches being left to have it ready for occupancy. It is one of the best schools in the country district, and cost $10,000.

* * *

The Massachusetts Realty company's building on Tenth avenue east and Fourth street, to which a second story is being added, is now ready for the roof, and will be entirely inclosed within a few days. It is to be an eight-apartment addition, costing about $13,000, and will be finished about Nov. 20. William Fawcett is the contractor, the brick work being done by Frank Carlson.

These architects report that the foundation for the Crosby and Ironton schools on the Cuyuna range is completed and that the superstructure is now about to be started. They will be ready about the middle of November.

* * *

That the West end will soon have another brick business and office building in the near future is almost a certainty, and it is reported that plans are already prepared for it. It is to be erected on the south side of Superior street between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenues west, adjacent to the building now occuped by Mrs. Johnson's store. This lot is now owned by Dr. L. Q. Greeley, who will probably be the builder, although he has several parties who are anxious to lease this lot for the purpose of putting up a building similar to the one planned by Dr. Greeley. It is to be of brick, with fifty foot frontage on both Superior and Michigan streets, and completed will cost about $30,000.

* * *

A contract was awarded yesterday by P. George Hanson & Son to Alfred Peterson for the construction of an apartment house on Eighteenth avenue west and Second street, to cost in the neighborhood of $6,000. It will be of brick and will be one of the handsomest buildings of its kind in that section. This firm also awarded a contract to Ar. Peterson for the erection of a frame residence on Second street and Twenty-second avenue west, costing about $3,500.

P. George Hanson & Son are also planning on the construction of a brick flat building for Twenty-third avenue west and Second street. This firm recently finished four frame dwellings on Twenty-third avenue west, between Fourth and Fifth streets, three of which have already been sold, while earnest money has been taken on the other.

HERALD'S POPULAR-PRICED HOMES

A typical Western or California bungalow now under construction in this city is herewith shown. These California bungalows have an individual style of their own. This one has a large living room with open fireplace and bookcases on each side which gives the room a generous and luxurious appearance. Two chambers are provided for with unusually large closet space which from the standpoint of convenience is a great necessity. The dining room, on the left as you enter, has a large high "Dutch Window," which adds a good deal to the effect of the room. A den or sun porch opens from the main bed room and if one so desired, could be used for a sleeping porch.

Every available inch of space has been utilized and everything has been conveniently arranged and the annointments are complete in every detail. This plan can be reversed or altered to suit the owner's wishes.

This bungalow can be erected in Duluth or vicinty for about $3,500 complete.

WEEKLY SURVEY OF REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENTS

Duluth's Architectural Club Plans Year's Program—Exhibits of Garden Products Raised in and Around Duluth—Shifting of Fine Residence District—Trade Excursion—Examinations of Titles.

THE Duluth Architectural club held its first session in its new club at 210 West Fifth street, Thursday evening, a large number being present. The architects and draftsmen of the city are showing much interest in the new organization, and are attracting the attention of material men and contractors, some of whom have already been voted into its asociate membership. The following were elected as associate members: A. M. Thompson, A. H. Krieger, D. G. McLeod, William Schell, J. H. Edwards, Frank Nixon, William Burgess, A. W. Lindgren, H. Homa, H. A. Hall, and Robert Dunlop. From time to time other material men and contractors will be added to the list.

It was decided to furnish the rooms appropriately for club rooms and also equip some space with drafting tables so that the members can work there whenever they wish. The meetings will be held every other Thursday but the rooms will be open to the members at all times.

The education committee reported on the outline of work for the coming winter. Active work is expected to be started about Oct. 1.

EXHIBITS of garden products raised in and about Duluth are being made at various places in the city. In the windows of the Glass Block store is to be seen one of the finest collections, contribution to which was made by a large number of Duluthians. Of particular interest is a display of several baskets of tomatoes which were ripened here. There seems to be an impression shared by many people that tomatoes cannot be grown to that stage in Duluth, but many gardeners of Duluth have tomatoes to show, which were raised here, and are not only large and attractive from outward appearances, but are equally delicious to the taste. Many of the schools are showing the possibilities of Duluth soil by holding exhibitions in the various rooms, the garden truck having been raised by the children themselves. The Franklin school exhibit is especially good.

* * *

INTERESTING information was given out yesterday by City Assessor J. Allyn Scott, that the choice residence section of Duluth is slowly shifting from Superior and First street east and north. The normal school district was opened up shortly after the state institution was founded, and since then has been rapidly growing. It has been laid out in a most attractive manner, and the lots have been in great demand. In a few years scores of Duluth's finest residences have been built there, and there seems to be a big rush on the part of the prospective builders of fine homes to the northeast section. As a result, Mr. Scott states, the value of these lots have gone up greatly, while the property in the former popular residence district has diminished in relative value.

* * *

MANY of the local real estate men and contractors as well as a number of the material dealers are planning to go on the next trade excursion which will be made through the northern part of Wisconsin, Oct. 3, 4 and 5. The business men of this section are planning to keep in touch with the trade of outside cities and towns, and this is considered one of the best methods, as well as of advertising Duluth as a commercial and industrial city of prominence and growing importance.

A WARNING against the employment of irresponsible lawyers to examine titles to real estate was expressed by John W. Taylor, president of the Cleveland real estate board, in an address to delegates to the convention of the Ohio Abstractors' association, held at Columbus recently. It applies equally as well to the people of Duluth. Mr. Taylor declared very emphatically that the interests of the realty operator and the abstractor are identical, and suggested that they emerge their associations for the procuring of greater benefits to the professions they are engaged in.

"Having been engaged in the study and practice of the law relating to real estate and titles for the past thirty-five years, and also engaged in the real estate business for some thirty years, I believe that I am in a position to discuss their relations without prejudice to either," said Mr. Taylor. "There are no two professions that are more closely related, or that should be more closely allied, than those of the real estate dealer and the title men.

"The basis of all security is real estate, but that security is of value only so far as its title is good. The real estate dealer and the abstractor are both of modern growth.

"One hundred years ago title to land in this country was passed upon faith in the grantor, and the common knowledge of the neighborhood, and this mode of transaction was comparatively safe. Since the passing of the early generations and the rapid growth of cities, especially during the past twenty-five years, the old methods became dangerous, and the lawyer was called upon to search the records, principally for incumbrances.

"Any man who hung out his shingle as an attorney was deemed an expert in titles, and full faith was placed in his opinion. But as records became more cumbersome and complicated through the wonderful growth of our cities, and transactions in the urban sections as well, it became more and more apparent that admission to the bar was only one of the absolutely necessary qualifications of the title men.

"In this day and age of specialization the lawyer not especially educated and skilled in the title business, and the up-to-date methods employed, is as much out of place in the conduct of a title plant and the examination of titles, as a bull would be in a china shop. Yet there are those that have not even been admitted to the bar, and make no pretention of ever having been introduced to a technicality in a title, that hold themselves out to the public as qualified to examine and pass upon titles.

"As the real estate man came upon the stage, and greater expedition and accuracy were demanded in the transfer of titles, it was found that the old methods were impracticable and unsafe. It was discovered that the indices were unreliable, that there were many defects in conveyances that the lawyer who only casually examined a title overlooked, and that if titles were to be relied upon that some system must be adopted and carried out by experts. Without evidence of title as perfect as human ingenuity can make it, I venture to say that the real estate man would have very poor picking. The public would be very wary of investing in real estate for other than absolute necessities, or loaning its money on the lands the titles to which were liable to prove worthless.

"In the progress of modern business and methods the real estate man is indispensable to the title man, and the expert title man is equally indispensable to the real estate man.

"Let us then go hand in hand to our work. I believe that our necessities and interests are identical. Why not, then join and consolidate our state and national organizations? The union would certainly make for the strength, helpfulness and permanency of both organizations, and their efficiency, and bring us closer together and to a better understanding one with the other and make for the benefit of both."

DEALERS ENCOURAGED BY REALTY OUTLOOK

Much Activity in Suburban Lots and Inquiry for Business Property.

West End to the Fore—Farm Lands Are in Demand.

Real estate activity during the past week has been of a most encouraging nature, and although no deals of large proportions were completed, a number of small transactions were made, which indicate that the people are in the market more than ever before.

While the real estate firms are closing up the small deals, they are carrying on negotiations for much larger transactions. The deals which were on last summer for Superior street property, seem to be as alive as then, and probabilities are that before long they will be closed.

The bulk of the business is still confined to the various residence sections of the city and to the small tracts about the outskirts of Duluth. Many deals for lands in different parts of the county, which involve fair prices for acreage, are also being made every day.

The transfers for the week show that a large amount of business was carried on, and firms of Duluth are not complaining in the least over business conditions. The fact is that they are pleased with the manner in which business has been running, and express themselves as greatly encouraged. While they are anxious to close up some of the big deals which are hanging fire, they seem perfectly contented with the smaller transactions which are continually increasing in number.

* * *

In the West end there has been considerable activity all summer and fall, and the prospects are very bright, according to firms of that section of the city. P. George Hanson claims that business in the West end is lively, and that he has closed up many deals for residence property. This firm has gone extensively into the improvement of vacant lots with modest, modern homes, ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 and selling the entire property on easy terms.

This method of disposing of property is popular in the West end, and for the past ten years David Adams, the printer-contractor, has been doing such a business. In the West end and West Duluth he has already put up fifty-nine houses, all of which he has sold.

The S. Morterud Realty company of the West end reports the sale of a house and lot at 2714 Holm street to J. E. Thorstad of Blair, Wis., for $1,900, also a house at 3205 Restormel street to Emil Ander for a consideraton of $2,500.

This firm also sold a two-store and flat building on the corner of Third street and Twenty-first avenue west to Emil and Oscar Mork, from Nannie E. Johnson and others. The property is described as the southerly eighty feet of lot 337, block 110, Duluth Proper, Second division. The consideration was $7,200.

A five-acre tract near Arnold, was sold by this firm to Marie Moreau for $800.

* * *

The Western Realty company of the West end sold several acreage tracts during the week on the Morris Thomas road, where considerable settlement has been made in the last three years.

* * *

Ebert, Walker & McKnight report the sale of 680 acres of land in Lake county. One of the purchasers represents a number of Hollanders living in the southern part of the state, who are expecting to locate there. The consideration was $5 per acre.

* * *

N. J. Upham & Co. report the sale of two lots in the Harrison Brookdale division, and also that earnest money has been received on a four-flat building in the West end, the selling price quoted at $2,550.

They report also that there is much activity in the Home Farms, which are located near the Jean Du Luth farm, several deals having been closed and others pending. There has been lively inquiries for home acres on the Duluth Heights.

* * *

Lot 11, block 74 Portland division of Duluth, which is a residence property on the upper side of East Third street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, from Fred Wilson to Anton W. Stromquist; consideration, $3,200.

Lots 200 and 201, block 18, Crosley Park addition to Duluth, which is a residence property on the corner of Fifty-first avenue east and Otsega street, from Mary H. Lapschie to William Lofdahl; consideration, $1,050.

* * *

A. C. Volk & company had a fairly busy week, and among the lots sold at Gary were two to men from Laurium, Mich., and one to a man from Emmetsburg, Iowa.

During the week the Gary Building & Loan company was organized and from now on workers at the steel plant who wish to live at Gary, can purchase a lot and have a house erected for them at a nominal cost, which will afford them an opportunity to have it all paid for in about three years.

* * *

At the Norton Steel Plant division, several sales were made this week by A. W. Kuehnow, who is the agent for that division, and he reports that many houses are now in the course of construction there.

* * *

Among the important acreage sales near the city made during the week was that of the north half of the southeast quarter of section 24, 50-15, from the Western Land & Loan company to Albert Sundquist, the consideration being $1,700. The deal was made through the office of Stryker, Manley & Buck. The land is a short distance north of the Hermantown road, and borders on the city limits.

* * *

Thomas F. Ryan purchased the westerly twenty-five feet of lot 373, block 50, Duluth Proper, second division, from Annie Dillon, for $2,000. The property is located on the upper side of Superior street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth avenues west, and is unimproved.

* * *

A. J. Paine has purchased lot 10, block 13, Lester Park, second division, which is on Tioga street between Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth avenues east, from Albert C. Hubbell for $3,500.

* * *

Emily W. Skinner sold the southerly 100 feet of lots 6, 7 and 7, block 29, London addition, to F. E. Fleischmann for $1,200. This parcel of land is located on Forty-seventh avenue west, between Cambridge and Regent streets.

* * *

For a consideration of $1,250 Charles W. Rydberg has purchased from James D. Ritchie, lots 14 and 15, block 8, Bay View Heights addition, No. 1.

* * *

Adeline Mayhew has purchased from Noe Foucault the northwest corner lot on Fifty-seventh avenue west and Sherbune street, described as lot 16, block 71, West Duluth, second division for $600.

* * *

John Colbrath has purchased from George A. Rawson, lot 29, East Third street, Duluth proper, First division. This is the second lot from the northwest corner of Second avenue west and Third street. The consideration was $8,500.

* * *

The Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific railroad has purchased four lots on the lower side of Traverse street, between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh avenues west, as follows: Lots 1 and 2, block 69, Oneota, from C. S. Robinson for $1,400, and lots 5 and 6, block 60, Oneota from the Western Land association for $1,500.

* * *

The Duluth Home company sold to R. M. Morgan, lots 1 and 2, block 133, Portland division, and lots 1 and 2, block 133½, auditor's rearrangement of Portland division, for $1,000. The lots form the two northeast corner lots on Sixth street and Twelfth avenue east. The purchase price was $1,000.

* * *

Mrs. Kate Willie sold a lot on the lower side of Grand avenue, between Sixtieth and Sixty-first avenues west, described as lot 22, block 111, West Duluth, Fifth division, to James Larson for $1,600.

* * *

James McMartin has sold to Albert Nelson part of lot 7, block 45, Endlon division, which is located on the corner of Dingwall street and Ninteenth avenue east, for $2,500.

* * *

Wilam Hein has sold to Annie E. Cherne the east one-half of lot 78, East Seventh street, Duluth proper, First division, for $1,100. This is the east half of the second lot on the sothwest corner of Seventh street and Fifth avenue east.

WHIRLWIND RECEPTION GIVEN VISITING PASSENGER AGENTS

PASSENGER AGENTS LEAVING FOR TRIP ABOUT HARBOR.

PASSENGER AGENTS LEAVING STATION.

After having seen Duluth, from Fond du Lac to Lester park and from the extremities of the harbor to the boulevard, the 125 members of the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents and the accompanying members of their families, who were the guests of Duluth yesterday, left early last evening on a special train over the Northwestern road for Chicago en route to their homes.

They did not leave Duluth until they had expressed in lavish terms their appreciation of the hospitality extended them here and their delight with the city itself. In short talks at an informal reception at the Commercial club and in private conversation, the visitors expressed their regret that they could not remain longer to become more intimately acquainted with Duluth, its wonders and its people.

The entertainment provided by the local committee was crammed into a few short hours and the speed with which they were hurried around almost took the visitors' breath away, but they were true sight-seers, eager for the next wonder and when it was all over, they did not show by appearance or expression that they were tired. In fact, if there had been time for more, they would have gone through with it with enthusiasm.

Welcomed by B. P. Neff.

At the reception at the Commercial club, which followed the automobile ride around the boulevard, Bentley P. Neff, a member of the board of directors and chairman of the reception committee of the Commercial club, welcomed the visitors. He told them that Duluth was glad to entertain them, even for a few hours, and expressed the hope that they would come again, individually, in bunches and to hold their regular convention here.

C. A. Cairns, general passenger and ticket agent of the Chicago & Northwestern railway and the new president of the association, responded for the visitors and short talks were made by R. H. Wallace, vice president of the association and general passenger agent for the Erie road, and A. M. Cleland, general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific.

Mr. Cairns said:

"I have seen it put down somewhere in black and white that Duluth had the warmest cold weather and the coolest warm weather of any city in the country, and we know from our actual experience here today that its citizens have the warmest warm welcome for strangers within their gates of any place between the Atlantic and Pacific or from the Gulf of Mexico to where King George's domain fades away into the Arctic circle.

"We are glad to be here, and we are glad to know you are glad that we are glad to be in this wonderful city.

Duluth's Growth.

"In 1854 the city had no corporate existence. I believe it is a matter of further history that as late as 1880 you had within the limits of your city a population of scarcely 3,000 people, while today your numbers are nearing the 100,000 mark, or that will be your population within the next few years.

"What is it that has marked out this wonderful change within these comparatively few years? First, your strategic position, the most westerly of all the important ports on the live Great Lakes, with a landlocked harbor capable of floating vessels of any known draft. Second, the agricultural and mining development of the vast country tributary to your progressive community. Third, energetic and far-seeing men in the business and commercial life of your metropolis. These three factors, one as important as the other, have taken the name of Duluth from a small and unimportant borrough in the early '80s and placed it among the great and growing cities of the world, known everywhere on the civilized globe where its principal product, that of steel, stretches out its iron arms and expands the channels of commerce o'er land and sea.

City's Resources.

"We are told by your committee that in the great Mesaba and Vermilion districts, almost within the shadow of your city gates, there are billions of tons of iron ore, capable of furnishing the world's supply of this valuable material for a hundred years or more yet to come, that in a single year there had been mined over 30,000,000 tons, all of which passed through this great lake port and not this only, but untold millions of barley, flax and other bread stuffs from the granaries of the Golden Northwest, destined to feed the nations of the earth.

"And while you have been busily engaged with the commercial and material side of things, you have not forgotten to devote the civic and educational features of your life. Your parks and driveways are famous beyond the borders of your city and state; your schools and teachers express the leading and progressive thought of the age. Your fellow townsman, Mart Adson, says Duluth is an easy city to get to, but a hard place to get away from and I am sure our party can echo this sentiment most enthusiastically, for we would all like to linger in your midst for a longer period, to drink in the ozone in your air, to visit your mines, to tempt the cold, icy denizens of your streams, to rub elbows with your business men and become inspired with their energy and enthusiasm, but Father Time is busily engaged in mowing down our days of leisure and like the restless vacation in which we are engaged, we must move on schedule time.

"There are a thousand other nice things I might and would like to say about your wonderfully interesting and growing city, but time will not permit. Suffice it to say in the closing of my remarks that we are glad we came, we are more than pleased with what we have seen and what you have done for us and we hope that we have found the way, have found an ideal climate and a most hospitable and companionable people, that we may return in the not distant future."

FIELD DAY FOR SPRING POETS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Long haired poets, spring poets, the common or garden variety of poets, socialistic writers, purveyors of anarchism, budding dramatists, penny-a-liners, candidates for the "sob squad"—in brief the entire army of yearners for Bohemia, will be herded together at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, and a "scribblers' club" formed.

Physical Director Wegener is directly responsible for the plan, and says he will shoulder the blame. His plan is to get all amateur writers together and then—no, not drop them in the lake—but let them read their compositions to the other members and give and receive criticism.

The physical director says he has been assured police protection, and if a budding poet becomes hectic when told that his verse resembles the soul sob of a prehistoric mound builder, he will not be allowed to cut loose with a pair of Indian clubs and clean out the meeting.

It will be a free for all wrestle with the Muses, flying falls barred, two points down, and everything but the strangle hold goes.

Every member is requested to bring all his rejection slips, and the man having the greatest collection will be extoffido a director of the club. A magazine editor will be burned in effigy at every meeting. If a second meeting is thought advisable after the first has been held, it will be held the following Monday night. It is the cherished hope of the physical director, that the meetings will be weekly affairs, and that a session will be held every Monday night. The rules forbid any spring poem of over 100 hexameter lines being pulled on the gathering.

The meeting will probably be held in the solid cement handball court, with the doors locked. Anybody who ever rhymed "love" and "dove" will be admitted without question.

PEG TOP TROUSERS A THING OF THE PAST, SAYS NEW YORKER

H. M. Enright, now of Boston, formerly one of the large fasihonable men's outfitting establishments of New York city, is stopping at the Holland.

In an interview with a Herald reporter last evening he gave some advance tips on the fall styles for men.

"The peg top trousers are a thing of the past," he said. "The waistcoat is back in evidence and it is cut very high, so much so that it is like the waistcoat of twenty-five years ago (and by the way, styles repeat themselves). It was then and is now known as the dirty shirt vest. Trousers are worn snug around the hips and legs and the sack coat has a fairly long roll and is made with two and three buttons and cut full rounded in front. The extreme style in this style coat is a four-button sack and very short.

"The outing turn-up to the bottom of the trousers for business sacks and Norfolk suits is seen. All business and outing garments are but one and one-quarter inch. Heretofore this feature was two and one-half inches in depth.

"As to colorings of fabrics, Oxford blues and browns prevail.

"The entire sack suit now has the appearance of one possessing his little brother's garments throughout, even to the trousers, being shorter, nearly to the ankles, for the younger set.

"For the business man, one can stroll down Tremont street in Boston or Fifth avenue in New York city and Michigan boulevard in Chicago and he will see a greater use of the cutaway frock suit of dark materials and fancy trousers and waistcoat to match the coat material.

"The fancy waistcoat seems to have passed away for the time being.

"The spring and fall overcoats are cut in a Chesterfield and raglan style. For a figure 5 feet 8 inches the coat is cut forty-two inches long and medium form fitting for the Chesterfield, while the raglan is cut quite box like.

"In the cutaway frock, or semi-dress, garments, the demi vest or collarette is invariably worn.

"One would imagine to see a tall, slim young man promenading on the Eastern boulevards, that if he should take a bath in his tub, with his present stylish tight garments on, he should be careful to put in the plug lest he would go through the waste tube.

"As to haberdashery for the younger set, the coloring of the ties and socks are identical.

"The wave of silk hosiery has reached almost an alarming condition. I have seen young people, both sex, with hardly enough in their stomachs to sustain life well, who must have their silk hosiery."

BRING MEN BACK INTO THE CHURCH

plan. He tore it up and declared that he was heart and soul with the Men and Religion Forward movement.

Hubert Carlson of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew had been working on still another plan, while Frank Dyer of the Congregational Brotherhood thought out the fourth plan, practically on the same line and almost at the same time.

This coincidence has attracted the attention of newspaper and magazine men in every part of this country, as being most remarkable, a finger that points with emphasis to the condition of the church in this country and to the fact, that men's minds have been working on this great problem.

Time Is Ripe.

Those behind the movement believe that the time is ripe; that the age, the condition of the church, the attitude of men's minds, the great and crying need of a practical, inspired Christian movement, have sent a call to the hearts of men and that this call has been answered in a signal and decisive manner.

This movement does not attempt to answer the great and crying question of the religious world of today—"Why do not men go to church?" It is going ahead to see what can be done about bringing men into the church. It aims to be practical, Christ-like and intelligent.

In the first place, as the grasp of this great movement was briefly outlined by Mr. Guild today, the church wants to show the men of today that it is interested in them. That it is vitally and vitally interested in the way they live; is interested in benefitting their lives of living, helping to make their life easier; and that it is interested in bettering social conditions.

For instance, it wants to show the business man that Christianity can be observed by a man in deeds outside the church; that a man who helps in settlement work, who helps to make a brother in sin and wretchedness better and more happy, is performing the same Christian service that a man is doing who does some act of worship in the church.

The movement aims at a high ideal of Christian work in the social settlement field, where in the past the social workers have failed, because, as they admit, they have not had the compelling force of religious inspiration to aid them.

It believes that to show that the church is interested in the life of men, that it wants to be with them, not only in the church, but in their daily life, is going to bring men back to an institution that has lost its hold on thousands of men throughout the length and breadth of the country.

Unite Forces.

It is aiming to unite the religious zeal and enthusiasm for the individual soul that is brought to bear by the evangelist, with the broad and humanizing religion of the mission worker and social worker.

There is a department of boys' work, of Bible study, of evangelism, of social activity, for we would all like to linger in your midst for a longer period, to drink in the ozone in your air, to visit your mines, to tempt the cold, icy denizens of your streams, to rub elbows with your business men and become inspired with their energy and enthusiasm, but Father Time is busily engaged in mowing down our days of leisure and like the restless vacation in which we are engaged, we must move on schedule time.

"There are a thousand other nice things I might and would like to say about your wonderfully interesting and growing city, but time will not permit. Suffice it to say in the closing of my remarks that we are glad we came, we are more than pleased with what we have seen and what you have done for us and we hope that we have found the way, have found an ideal climate and a most hospitable and companionable people, that we may return in the not distant future."

WEST END HALL PLANS APPROVED

Modern Woodmen Will Receive Bids on Proposed New Building.

Two-Story, Fire-Proof Structure, 50 By 105 Feet, Will Cost $15,000.

The building committee of Duluth Camp, No. 2341, Modern Woodmen of America, met last evening and voted on the plans for their new lodge hall to be built at a cost of $15,000. The plans were approved and bids will be received.

The hall will have a frontage of 50 feet on First street and will be 105 feet deep on Twenty-first avenue west. The building will be two stories and will contain a large auditorium and dance hall. There will be a seating capacity of 700 in the auditorium. In the rear will be a kitchen, offices and other necessary rooms. A sub-cellar will contain the heating plant.

The second floor will be arranged for two lodge halls, one slightly larger than the other. Ante rooms and locker rooms will be arranged. The construction will be of brick and stone and will be fireproof throughout.

A building owned by George M. Jensen now occupies the corner but will be moved within the next thirty days.

CHURCHES OBJECT TO PAVING PLANS

West End Business Men to Discuss Third Street Improvement.

Several of the West end business men are planning to hold a meeting in a few days to discuss the improvement of West Third street. The matter will be taken up with the Duluth Commercial club immediately after the meeting. The business men who are only tenants fear it will be impossible to obtain the consent of all the property owners on the street. The consent of the churches will be the hardest to obtain, say the business men, owing to the many debts with which some of them are burdened at the present time.

A prominent churchman said yesterday that the members of the various churches, who live off the street, looked at the proposed paving as needless, only benefiting a few and helping the churches but little.

The property owned by church organizations between Twentieth and Twenty-fifth avenues aggregates 1,000 feet. Of this a whole block on one side of the street is owned by the St. Clement's parish and another by the St. Jean de Baptiste society. The other churches, which own from 50 to 100 feet each, are the First Swedish M. E., English Lutheran Synod, Grace M. E., First Swedish Baptist, First Norwegian-Danish M. E., Bethany Swedish Lutheran and Zion Norwegian Lutheran churches.

NORWEGIAN-DANISH CHURCH MEN ORGANIZE.

What will probably be one of the biggest clubs in the West end is being organized at the present time by the men of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church. The work is taken up in any city a religious mapping is made of the territory to be covered. Then when the experts arrive all the details have been facilitated and countless time has been saved.

James A. Whitmore, the boys' expert, and perhaps the greatest in this line in the world, will visit Duluth next spring, together with Charles R. Drum, the shop, mine, factory and tenement house expert; Rev. W. R. Lane, D. D., of London, the evangelistic expert, and Dr. I. J. Lansing, the social service expert.

In Duluth these men will labor for the movement, as they are laboring in other cities, to bring men closer to the church by bringing the church closer to men. As Mr. Guild puts it. "The church is coming into the lives of men, is not waiting for them to come to it, and is making its appeal to them through charity and usefulness and aid to humanity, a great work inspired by religious thought and motive."

What Movement Is.

In speaking further of the movement, Mr. Guild gave the following brief but comprehensive outline:

On May 18, 1910, a small group representing various religious organizations of Christian men, met in a hotel in New York city. A common interest brought them together. In August another group spent one day in a hotel at Niagara. In October, 262 picked men representing seventy-two cities and thirty-three states and provinces of North America, were together for two days at Buffalo. The interest was still the same, but more intense. 'How can more men be brought into the church, and how can those who are in the church be aroused to such activity that we shall have a mighty crusade that will result in making this a better world?'

'Since that series of meetings, the eyes and ears of the people of the United States and Canada have been greeted with increased frequency with the phrase, 'The Men and Religion Forward Movement.' Now from every side there comes with steadily increasing urgency the demand 'What is this Movement?'

"It is a simple recognition of the fact that conditions that maintain today must not be tolerated. It is a part of the general interest manifested in all social and political circles. It sees the evil and is disturbed by it; it sees the remedy and is aroused to action. The true dynamic for social and political improvement is the spiritual force, active or latent, in every man; that force which prompts and can help every man to make the most of himself. This movement deals primarily with this force. Therefore, in a single sentence we can say that this is an effort to so relate every man to the life of Jesus Christ that, so far as he is concerned, a better condition already exists, and so far as he touches others, he will help them in the upward trend. It does not deal in beautiful generalities, but is most specific in saying that complete manhood will be the result of a man's accepting all that Christ offers him, and of His giving all that he has to others. Impression and expression are the two keywords."

ADAMS FOOTBALL TEAM TO MEET JEFFERSONS.

The first football game of the season will be held tomorrow afternoon at Athletic park, between the Adams and Jefferson teams. West end fans are planning to attend this opening game as it usually gives them a line on the relative strength of the teams. Managers of both teams are confident of winning and a close game is looked for.

JOHNSON WILL RETIRE SEPT. 30.

Friends Say Liquor Interests and Politicians Forced Him Out.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 23.—W. E. Johnson, chief of the local bureau of the Indian service, has sent his resignation to Washington to become effective Sept. 30. Friends declare that his retirement is due to his persistence in suppressing the sale of liquor to Indians, and was brought about by the liquor interests allied with powerful political influences in Western states.

Johnson is credited with having practically founded the Indian investigation service, and while Oklahoma was still a territory made numerous arrests for selling liquor to Indians. In 1908 a $25,000 appropriation was secured and Johnson was placed in charge with headquarters in Salt Lake, coming to Denver when the headquarters were moved here.

Since he took charge, Johnson declares he has made 6,000 arrests, secured 3,390 convictions and that five of his men have been killed while performing their duties. According to information here, Harry Coggeshall, first assistant, will succeed him.

JEWISH NEW YEAR BEGINS

First Day of Year 5672 Is Observed in Duluth.

At sunset last night the Jewish New Year began.

According to the Hebrew calendar this is the first day of the year 5672.

Unlike the New Year of the ordinary calendar, the Jewish New Year has a religious aspect. Orthodox Jews celebrate two days, observing the festival not only today but tomorrow as well. Reformed Jews observe simply the New Year's day itself.

Rabbi M. Lefkovits last evening held a service in observance of the advent of the New Year in Temple Emanuel. He preached a sermon on "The Shortness of Life," dwelling at some length on the quick passing of youth and the opportunities it affords, opportunities, which, once neglected, will never return.

This morning at 10:45 o'clock, he preached a second New Year's sermon on "The Double Discipline."

YOUTHFUL "MASHERS"

Five Boys Arrested on Charge of Annoying Young Women.

Five boys, from 17 to 19 years of age, were arrested about 10:30 o'clock last night by Patrolman Musolf on charges of disorderly conduct. The officer reported that he heard them passing remarks to women on Superior street and that when they saw him they moved to Second street. He said that he followed them there and saw them start the same tactics, addressing two young women who were on their way to the Y. W. C. A. He secured their names and they will be subpoenaed to testify when their names are called in police court Monday afternoon, each of the defendants having entered a plea of not guilty. They gave their names as David Lieberman, Mandy Finkelstein, Israel Oreckowski and Jack and Loy Levine. Their bail was fixed at $10 each.

TO SEND PATROL TO LOS ANGELES

First Series of Entertainments to Be Given Monday Evening.

The first of a series of entertainments to be given under the auspices of Aad temple is offered for next Monday evening at the First M. E. church, Third avenue west and Third street. The Schubert Symphony club and the Lady Quartette of Chicago will furnish the program at this first entertainment.

The purpose of the series of entertainments is to raise money to send the Aad temple patrol, which won a prize at the Shriners' convention at Rochester last July, to Los Angeles next May, when they will again compete for honors.

The Schubert Symphony club is well recommended and offers an excellent program of well selected numbers. The musicians have appeared in a large number of the courses given by various clubs of the country and have received very favorable press comments.

FIND OLD CASKET WHEN DIGGING SEWER.

Superstitious persons residing in the vicinity of Fourteenth avenue east and Sixth street yesterday had something besides the question of whether or not the council will grant the skating pavilion in that vicinity a dance hall license to occupy their attention. Workmen who are putting in a small sewer in Sixth street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth avenues, came across some old bones and a part of a casket. The sewer runs through what was at one time an old cemetery, from which it is evident all the bodies were not removed at the time it was moved to another location.

SLASHED CLOTHES TO GET REVENGE.

Percy Shackelford, colored, was fined $15 and costs or thirty days in the county jail when he entered a plea of guilty in police court this morning to malicious destruction of property. The complaint was sworn out by Rose Bush, colored, of First avenue east and First street. She charged Shackelford with cutting up a dress, a corset and some sofa pillows.

It appears that Percy's sweetheart was boarding with Mrs. Bush and was behind in her board, for which Mrs. Bush was holding the clothes. Then it seems that Percy had a quarrel with his lady friend, and in a mistaken spirit of revenge seized upon the clothing and pillows and slashed them into shreds.

WHEAT GOES YET HIGHER

Those Who Thought Friday's Bulge Temporary Were Wrong.

It Now Looks as If Wheat Were Up to Stay Up for Some Time.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 23.—Many people after the close of the markets yesterday argued that the sudden bulge in wheat, following close upon the heels of the defeat of reciprocity, was merely due to a scare, and that actual conditions would not warrant such prices and they could not remain for any great length of time. Some freely predicted that there would be a break from yesterday's extreme bullishness as soon as the market opened this morning. There was indeed a slight decline, but was a very slight one. It was not long before the economic factors surrounding the market showed plainly that the increase in the cost of America's leading staple was due to something more than mere excitement on the part of the brokers. Duluth September, which made a gain of eight and a half cents yesterday, opened today at $1.10 asked, half a cent below yesterday's closing price and then declined as low as $1.09⅛. That, however, was the end of declining. It took an upward turn and at the close was quoted at exactly the same figure as yesterday, $1.10½.

Duluth December and May did more than hold their own today. The former gained a cent and an eighth and the latter a cent. Minneapolis also showed strong bulges in both these futures. Chicago did the same, though its bulges were not so strong. Winnipeg lost a little on both. Winnipeg wheat, it will be remembered, lost yesterday, too. Today furnished another strong demonstration that the failure of reciprocity is boostng wheat in this country and keeping it down in Canada, and that the treaty, if ratified, would have had the effect of making living cheaper in America by letting in the Canadian wheat.

The flax situation was almost equally interesting. Flax took quite a slump. The tariff on Canadian flax does not affect the price of American flax as much as the wheat tariff does American wheat, because there is no such tendency for Canadian flax to rush to American markets for higher prices as is the case with Canadian wheat. Flax took quite a slump today. It is true that the failure of reciprocity gave it a bulge yesterday. Today, however, the heavy offerings quickly forced the price down. There were twenty-one cars of inspected flax of the new crop on the track, more than ever during the present season. At the same time there was little demand. Eastern crushers are still holding out for lower prices. They look forward to the Argentine crop, though that is months ahead. They will not buy while flax is at prevailing figures, unless they have to. This is a situation that ties up business. September flax today lost 9 cents, October 12 cents, November 9 cents and December 6 cents.

CHICAGO MARKET.

All Trace of Reciprocity Excitement Has Disappeared From Pit.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Apparently all trace of reciprocity excitement had disappeared today from the wheat market. Instead, there was a slight tendency toward reaction from the rapid advance which followed the rejection of the proposed treaty with Canada. British sentiment was aided by highly favorable crop reports from Russia and Roumania. Moreover, cable dispatches were disappointing to the bulls, as there was no foreign response to the strength which had been shown yesterday on all grain exchanges in the United States. The opening here was the same as last night to ⅜c lower. December started at 98½@98⅝c, unchanged to ¼c off, receded to 98¼c and then rallied to 98⅝@98¾c.

Afterward Kansas sales of wheat to California caused a firmer feeling. In the last hour offerings dried up and local shorts covered, sending prices to the highest point of the season. The close was steady at 99¾@99½c for December, a net advance of ¾@⅞c.

Selling on the part of country commission houses made corn easy. December opened ¼@⅜c down at 64¼c@64⅜c, sagged to 64⅛c and recovered to 64⅜c.

During the rest of the day the market remained about steady. The close was at 64¼c for December, a decline of ⅜c from last night.

Oats drooped with wheat, seemingly by way of relaxation from yesterday's tension. December started at 47⅛@47¼c, last night's level, to ⅛c lower, sank to 47c and then moved back to 47⅛@47¼c.

Support to provisions came from week-end covering by shorts, and gave the market a firm tone. Initial sales were 5c lower to 10c advance, with January deliveries $15.25 for pork, $9 for lard and $8.05 for ribs.

Proves Chief Disturbing Element in the Stock Market.

Prices Relax From Friday's Close, Recover, But Drop Again.

New York, Sept. 23.—Under London's lead, where American securities, especially the United States Steel issues, were materially higher, the local stock market opened with a moderate resumption of the rally which was in progress at yesterday's close. Initial dealings in United States common consisted of a block of 3,500 shares at a 1¼ point advance. The preferred stock opened with a ¾ point gain, soon advanced a full point.

Union Pacific was up a point and gains of as much or more were registered by Missouri Pacific and Pacific Mail. Other active issues with few exceptions scored substantial fractional gains. The market made some recessions from top prices soon after the opening.

Heavy liquidation of copper stocks imparted a weak tone to the market and prices relaxed to below yesterday's figures. Amalgamated Copper broke from 52⅞@49⅝ and American Smelting from 62½@59¼. United States Steel, in which the movement was of a normal character, ran off from 57⅜@55¼. Transactions in the first thirty minutes amounted to only 57,000 shares compared with about a quarter of a million for the same period yesterday.

Among the active railroad stocks, the reaction was not marked, aside from Union Pacific, which receded from 160¾ to 158⅞. Minor industrials continued to break. Federal Mining yielded 1¾, Lackawanna Steel 5, United States Rubber 2½, Colorado Southern 2 and National Lead 1½. Buying orders were effective in stopping the decline before 11 o'clock and there were some recoveries.

The market closed heavy. Trading slackened perceptibly in the final hour, the only noteworthy feature being the increased strength of the Standard railway shares and the further weakness of the industrials, both Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting falling to lowest prices since 1908. There was no news today to account for the sharp declines in these issues other than mere rumors which hinted at government investigation. Toward the close the entire list moved upwards under the liberal offerings which induced prompt recessions. Further unsettlement growing out of the increased weakness in Amalgamated Copper, which declined to 48¾, wiped out practically all gains.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Market featured with heavy receipts of horses and mules. Donald Grant, the big railroad contractors, consigned in 123 head of mules and 74 head of horses. Harry Carnes and Mike Montgomery are on the market with loads of big horses. Demand was comparatively light. Now that reciprocity is finally settled dealers look for delayed orders for horses from Canadian buyers. The defeat of the measure was a great disappointment to all local horse dealers.

Cotton Market.

New York, Sept. 23.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 4 points. Over night covering orders seemed to account for the initial steadiness of tone, the selling was encouraged by the sharp break in the spot position at Liverpool, prospects for good weather in the South for over Sunday, reports of continued easy spot markets in the Atlantic belt, and a renewal of Southern offerings and prices made new low records right after the call, with the active months selling about 7 points net lower.

At this level there was sufficient demand from shorts to check the decline but the market showed little rallying power, and ruled within a point or two of the lowest later in the first hour.

Futures closed barely steady; closing bids: September, 10.58; October, 10.53; November, 10.53; December, 10.62; January, 10.59; February, 10.64; March, 10.72; April, 10.76; May and July, 10.83. Spot closed quiet, 15 points lower; middling uplands, 10.85; middling gulf, 11.10. No sales.

WHAT IS LAUGHTER?

The Strand: "Laughter," says Prof. Sir Charles Bell, "is a convulsive action of the diaphragm. In this state the person draws a full breath and throws it out in interrupted, short, and audible cachinnations. This convulsion of the diaphragm is the principal part of the physical manifestation of laughter; but there are several accessories, especially the sharp vocal utterance arising from the violent tension of the larynx and the expression of the features, this being a more intense form of the smile. In extreme cases the eyes are moistened by the effusion from the lachrymal glands."

There you have a scientific definition. But it is clear that mankind would hardly take the trouble to go through that experience if that is all that laughter consisted of. They would not regard Dickens or Mark Twain as a benfactor merely because a perusal of their writings produced that. No; even the philosophers know that laughter is something better than that—something internal—that there is such a thing as silent laughter. Hobbs calls laughter "a sudden glory arising from a sudden conception of some eminency in ourselves by comparison with the infirmity of others, or with our own formerly."

If a laugh is a benefaction and the provoker of a laugh a benefactor, why are there more statues to dull people than to witty ones? Who was the greatest laugh-promoter in history? It was said of Sydney Smith that he was the father of ten million laughs. "Laughter," said Lord Rosebery, recently, "is a physical necessity. We live under a sunless sky, surrounded by a melancholy ocean, and it is a physical necessity for the English nation—even for the Scotch nation and the Welsh nation—to laugh. It exhilarates all social relations. Was not," his lordship added, "the laughof Sir Frank Lockwood something that would make a stuffed bird rejoice? And those who listened to the splendor of merriment which he could impart by that laugh realize the intense value of that emotional exercise."

BIG CONSERVATION CONGRESS IS BEGUN AT KANSAS CITY, MO.

Prominent Men Talk on the Handling of Resources.

Taft Is Expected to Make Important Address to Delegates.

President of Organization Talks of Robbers of the Soil.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 25.—Determined to give an added impetus to the cause of conserving the nation's natural resources, 3,500 delegates to the third national conservation congress assembled in this city today. Nearly all the leading champions of the policy of conservation in the United States were present when the congress was called to order by its president, Dr. Henry Wallace of Des Moines, Iowa.

Statesmen, scientists, educators, farmers and representatives of every branch of American business and social life were in attendance. Every state in the Union was represented, and Thomas R. Shipp, executive secretary of the congress, said this year's meeting was the most representative the congress ever had.

The congress will be in session three days, three sessions to be held each day.

Taft to Address Meeting.

President Taft will deliver an address tonight. It has been freely hinted this speech probably will be the most important the president will deliver during his present tour. This city is near the storm centers of Republican insurgency, and at no other place is the president likely to meet so large a body of nationally representative men during his trip.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture, will deliver an address Tuesday night on "The health of the people." William J. Bryan will be the principal speaker at the last session on Wednesday.

Among other distinguished men scheduled to take part in the proceedings are Walter L. Fisher, secretary of the interior; Henry S. Graves, United States forester; Walter H. Page of New York, and Judge B. B. Lindsey of Denver.

Discuss Soil and Farm Life.

While the program this year embraces every phase of the subject of conservation, the officials of the congress planned to make the two paramount questions the conservation of the soil and the betterment of the conditions of country life.

The program of the morning session today was largely routine. Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri delivered an address of welcome, to which President Wallace of the congress responded.

The afternoon program included an address by Judge B. B. Lindsey of Den-

PRESIDENT OF THE CONSERVATION BODY

DR. HENRY WALLACE.

INDIANA ACT IS HELD VOID

Court Rejects Proposed Vote on New Constitution.

Document Prepared By Marshall Fought By Republicans.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 25.—That the act of the Indiana general assembly of 1911, proposing a new state constitution to be voted on by the people, is unconstitutional and void, was the decision today by Judge Charles Remster of the circuit court. The case will be appealed to the Indiana supreme court.

The proposed constitution has been bitterly opposed by leaders of the Republican party of the state. Most of the instrument was prepared by Governor Thomas E. Marshall, and the changes it would make in the present constitution are said to represent his ideas.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT JANESVILLE

Man Shoots Wife, Drinks Acid and Then Shoots Himself.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 25.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Janesville, Wis., says: Leo Larson, aged 22, today shot and probably fatally wounded his wife, Celia, aged 21, and then committed suicide by shooting himself after drinking the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Larson's mother, Mrs. Bahr, on Linn street. Mrs. Larson had left her husband after a quarrel in their home in Rockford and had come to her mother's home here.

LOST MINNEAPOLIS GIRL IS FOUND

Grace Ferrin at New Richmond, Wis.—Two Boys Arrested.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grace Ferrin, 17 years old, the missing Minneapolis school girl for whom search has been made since Sept. 11, was located today in New Richmond, Wis. Lee Snyder and W. H. Elsenpeter, both of Big Lake, Minn., were placed in jail here when they said they knew of the girl's whereabouts and sought to claim a reward.

TOBACCO TRUST PLANS READY

New York, Sept. 25.—Announcement was made at the conclusion of the conference looking to the reorganization of the American Tobacco company today, that a petition would be filed with the United States circuit court on Oct. 2, setting forth the proposed plan of dissolution in consonance with the mandate of the supreme court, and that public hearings on the plan would follow. Dates for the public hearings were not announced.

MAY REOPEN THE DIGNOS INQUEST

Cartridges Are Found in the Chicago House Where Killing Occurred.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Coroner Hoffman may be asked to reopen the inquest in the case of Emil Dignos, former foreign correspondent of a stockyards firm, who was shot and killed by Dr. William H. Falker in an unoccupied cottage in Chicago Lawn, after the physician had been lured to the premises on the pretense of administering to a sick person.

After working seventy-two hours, the police apparently were no nearer a solution of the mystery than when they first began the investigation.

The police today discovered a carton of cartridges hidden away in the front room of the cottage. Of the nine cartridges missing, but five have been accounted for, and these were the ones used in the revolver which Dr. Falker declares he wrested from Dignos' grasp.

The police planned to again closely question Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hogue, with whom Dignos roomed.

EFFORT TO CUT COST OF LIVING

Mayor of Indianapolis Backs Scheme to Get Cheaper Produce.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 25.—Mayor Shank, who is trying to buck a combination among commission merchants, which he says is responsible for the present high prices of growing food products, has sent a personal representative into the potato and apple belts of Michigan to get prices there and to ship potatoes and apples to Indianapolis in carload lots.

The mayor proposes to have them retailed on the city market at prices far below what the commission houses and their representatives are charging.

He has learned from several sources that potato and fruit growers in Texas, Michigan and other states have been told by commission men not to ship to Indianapolis because the market is glutted.

The mayor says that the potatoes and apples will be sold at actual cost to the consumers and that if it is necessary he will go into his own pocket to pay for the first consignment.

BIG CROWDS HEAR TAFT

President Is Given Hearty Greetings By the Kansans.

Makes Eleven Speeches Before Going to Kansas City.

Independence, Kan., Sept. 25.—President Taft received a most friendly greeting during his tour of Southern Kansas today. Both at Coffeyville, where he spent two of the forenoon hours, and at this place Mr. Taft was greeted by great crowds, excursion trains from outside communities helping to swell the throngs.

The president chose the vetoes of the tariff bills for his theme today and received an attentive hearing. He declared he did not come to Kansas to apologize for having exercised executive disapproval of the woolen, the free list and the cotton tariff bills, but merely to explain to the people face to face.

Given Rousing Reception.

Coffeyville, Kan., Sept. 25.—President Taft arrived here at 6:30 this morning and was given a rousing reception. The town was handsomely decorated in his honor, and a busy program was outlined for him during the four hours he was to remain here. The president's schedule for today will take him to four other towns before he leaves for Kansas City, where he will address the National Conservation congress tonight.

NORTH DAKOTA YEGGMEN BLOW OPEN EMPTY SAFE.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Safe blowers were not successful in securing cash when they dynamited a safe in the Gritz, Macher & Dean store at Emerado, this county, this morning between 1 and 2 o'clock. Proprietors of the store had deposited all their money in the bank late Saturday night and the yeggmen had two or three hours of work for nothing. They gained entrance to the building by sawing through the rear door, first sawing out a warehouse door and then sawing through the rear door leading to the main storeroom. The explosion was heard by occupants of a hotel nearby, but they made no investigation.

FOUR DEAD IN CHICAGO FIRE

Score of Other Inmates of Tenement Are Injured.

Twelve-Year-Old Boy Saves Scores of Lives By Prompt Action.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Four persons were killed and a score injured today when fire broke out in a double four-story brick basement house at 1336 South Sangamon street. The dead:

HARRY EGLOVITCH, 24 years old, burned and suffocated.

MRS. LOTTIE EGLOVITCH, 21 years old, suffocated.

BESSIE EGLOVITCH, 6 months old, suffocated.

SAMUEL ALPERT, 24 years old, burned and suffocated.

The fire, which is believed by the police to have been of incendiary origin, started in the basement and rapidly spread to the upper floors, occupied by eleven families.

Excitement followed the discovery of the flames and dozens of women and children were rescued with difficulty. Two babies were thrown from an upper window by their frantic mothers and were caught in the arms of pedestrians.

Save 354-Pound Woman.

One woman who lived on the top floor weighed 354 pounds and was carried downstairs by her husband and four firemen after several unsuccessful attempts had been made to rescue her by means if a ladder.

Diamond Brodski, 12 years old, who lived with his parents on the first floor of one of the buildings, discovered the fire and after running through the structure, turned in an alarm of fire.

But for the boy's prompt action scores of persons would have been burned to death, as the flames spread with unusual rapidity, cutting off escape from the stairways shortly after the blaze was discovered.

WALSH'S PAROLE CASE NOT UP YET

Banker Will Have to Wait Some Days to Learn His Fate.

Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 25.—John R. Walsh, the former Chicago banker, who is seeking a parole from the federal prison here, will not know his fate for several days. Applications for paroles are taken up in their regular order and Walsh's is fifth on the list. The report of the board will be mailed to Washington and announcement of the decision made from the attorney-general's office.

On Sept. 18 he had served one-third of his five-year sentence and was eligible to parole.

BATTLESHIP BLOWS UP IN THE TOULON HARBOR; MAY BE OVER 500 DEAD

LAY HORROR TO BILLBOARD

Survivors of Tragedy at Neenah, Wis., Talk of the Affair.

Thirteen of Hayrack Party Killed at Grade Crossing.

Neenah, Wis., Sept. 25.—Work was virtually suspended today in Neenah while county officers investigated the killing of thirteen members of a hayrack party that was run over by a fast passenger train of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad yesterday. The accident, it is said, was due to a large bill board that obstructed the view, both of the driver of the team and the engineer. The eighteen survivors, eight of whom were unhurt and three of whom may die of injuries, say that the accident could have been avoided but for the signboard.

Armless, legless and headless bodies covered the right-of-way as the train of nine coaches was brought to a stop 800 feet from the scene of the accident.

Nearly all the thirty-one young people on the hayrack were employed in a woodenware factory. They had attended a wedding anniversary at the home of Peter Hanson.

Billboard Deflected Sound.

Hanson, who was driving the wagon, escaped without injury, as did his team. He said that he heard the train, but that the sound seemed to be deflected by the billboard, so that the unseen train rumbled as though it were half a mile away. The billboard stood between the railroad and the highway which crossed at a sharp angle.

The engineer of the train, which was running fifty miles an hour, said after he had helped remove six of the dead persons from the pilot of the locomotive, that he did not see the wagon because of the billboard.

An unusual incident of the accident was the way in which the baby of Mrs. Joseph Brezinski was saved from injury. Mrs. Brezinski, holding the child, sat with her husband near the front of the hayrack. A few feet towards the rear of the wagon sat Miss Mary Schwartzbauer.

Found Baby Safe.

After the train cut the wagon in two, the Brezinskis found themselves sitting on the ground, slightly shaken up. The baby was not there. The parents ran about in the dim light of the morning in frantic search of the child. Fifty feet from the track they found the baby unharmed, in the arms of Miss Schawrtzbauer, who was unconscious but not otherwise injured.

Twelve persons on the hay rack were killed instantly, and one died later. Nine out of the thirty-one people on the wagon escaped without a scratch, and so did both horses. No-

WOULD SEIZE CASH FUND

Postoffice Authorities Seek Clean Sweep in Alleged Swindle.

Former United States Treasurer Morgan and Others in Jail.

New York, Sept. 25.—The postoffice authorities today took steps to lay their hands on a large sum, said to be more than $100,000 in cash, which they believe was kept in reserve by Jared Flagg, Jr., and others who were arrested Saturday charged with violating the postal laws to defraud investors.

Flagg and his alleged associates, Former United States Treasurer Daniel N. Morgan, F. Tennyson Healy, formerly a publisher, and others, spent Saturday and Sunday night in jail.

Alvin M. Higgins, the lawyer who is said to have been the legal adviser of Jared Flagg, was released today on $10,000 bail.

Seek Bankruptcy Action.

To prevent the accused stockbrokers from reaching their reserve fund before the federal authorities can get control of it, the postoffice inspectors prepared to have some of Flagg's customers file a petition in bankruptcy against him.

In addition to $67,000 in cash which the inspectors declare Flagg and his partners kept in a safe deposit box, it is said that $191,000 has been received from customers since September 1, indicating the magnitude of the business contributed by investors anxious to profit by the concern's offer of fifty-two per cent a year return.

Says All Was Legal.

Flagg maintains that his profits averaged 52 per cent, but declares that every dollar was made through legitimate stock exchange transactions.

The government charges that Flagg's scheme was to pay customers immense dividends for a short time after their investment, taking the money from the principal invested by his small army of customers.

Three wagon loads of books and correspondence seized in Saturday's raid on his brokerage concern are being examined for evidence. Thes reveal that money came to the firm from all parts of the country.

Flagg's plan, the government detectives say, was to secure a well satisfied customer in a community and treat him or her so well that the customer's friends would be induced to invest their money also.

Girl in the Affair.

A pretty, 19-year-old girl is said to have played an important part in Flagg's financial operations, and postoffice inspectors hope to question her today.

The men are accused of using the mails to defraud.

FRENCH NAVY SUFFERS NEW BIG DISASTER

Fire on Board Liberte Ignites Magazines of the Warship.

Armor Plate Hurled By Concussion Damages Other Vessels.

Catastrophe Follows Imposing Display of Naval Power.

Toulon, France, Sept. 25.—An appalling naval disaster, attended with enormous loss of life, occurred at daylight this morning when the battleship Liberte blew up in this harbor.

The death loss is variously estimated from 350 up to 500 or more. The killed include officers and men of the Liberte, and also a large number of those from nearby warships.

The latest estimate this afternoon places the number of missing from the Liberte at 350. To these must be added 100 men from the other ships who were killed. Several small boats which had gone from the other warships to the aid of the Liberte sank when the final explosion occurred.

Fatalities on Other Vessels.

Twenty men were killed and fifty injured on board the Democratie and there were fatalities on the Verite and Republique. The latter was damaged and was obliged to dock hastily.

The first alarm of fire was sounded shortly after 5 o'clock a. m. This was followed by four successive explosions of increasing intensity as the fire neared the powder magazines, when at 6:35 a deafening explosion literally tore the great warship to pieces and sent her to the bottom a mass of twisted wreckage.

Armour Plate Struck Cruiser.

The force of the explosion was so great that huge fissures were opened in the steel armor and framework of the warship.

A piece of armor was hurled against the cruiser Republique with great force, damaging her plates.

Scores of bodies were hurled into the air, with huge dragments of framework, armor, bursting shells and the suffocating smoke from the exploded magazines.

On the first explosion the men rushed from their quarters and a hundred or more sought safety in plunging overboard, but the great body of men, officers and the crew, remained on the ship and were hurled high into the air or into the water. The culminating explosion tore the ship into fragments.

"Fired Requiem Salute."

One reports says the ship broke in two in the middle as she sank. Another give a dramatic detail that before she took her final plunge several of her guns discharged a requiem salute.

The Liberte was anchored in the roadstead, where she has been since the review of the fleet by President Falleres on Sept. 4. Particular significance attached to the review, the most imposing in the history of the French navy, as it was made on the very date that France communicated to Germany the terms which the republic offered a settlement of the Moroccan dispute with Germany.

Following the review the fleet resumed the autumn maneuvers and gun practice. On Sept. 20 the armored cruiser Gloire was engaged in target work when a port gun exploded as a projectile was being inserted in the breech. One gunner was killed and thirteen others injured. Five of the latter subsequently died.

Had Little Warning.

Today's disaster came with little warning. The fire was discovered about 5 o'clock and a signal sounded through the vessel summoning the crew to fire quarters. Immediately the order was given to flood the holds, but the inrushing water failed to check the rapidly spreading flames.

Smoke poured from the warship and attracted the attention of the other ships of the squadron, which hurried-

NOT PREPARING FOR SEVERE COLD

Consumers and Dealers Are Not Stocking Up on Coal.

The Black Diamond, official organ of the coal trade, in its issue of today says:

"As the season advances it becomes more and more apparent that this is going to be strictly a weather market and one in which the consumers and dealers are not generally prepared for any protracted period of severe cold. This fact sticks out of every market report from almost every center.

"One of the best indications is seen in statements from diametrically opposite points of the compass. In St. Louis, the statement is that the weather has turned cold and there is a brightening of trade prospects and quickening of the movement. In Buffalo it is said that a slight rise of the temperature brought about a falling off in demand. This has more peculiarities than merely a strong market in a naturally warm climate and a weak market in a naturally cold climate in fall and winter. The Southwest has been weak; the East has been strong all through the summer. Thus, both sections show a strong contrast and the animating cause of the weakness is clearly the change in temperature.

"Weather conditions have their peculiarities this year which it might be well to consider. It was an unusually hot summer during the early months and especially it was an early and a warm spring. On the law of averages this promises an early and a rather severe winter. Already, the equinoxial storm has set in fully two weeks ahead of schedule and the weather indications have been toward a cold spell early.

"To this must be added the fact that the supply of cars is none too abundant in certain portions of the West and in West Virginia, although it is not bothersome in the West, the South or in the East. Pittsburg, peculiarly, is freed from any anoyance on the car situation despite a certin congestion of cars at lake ports at times. We are still inclined to believe that no serious car shortage will appear this year. This suggests all the more strongly to the wholesalers to keep their resources in hand and the market not overstocked."

ITALY SEEKING FOR CONTROL OF TRIPOLI.

Rome, Sept. 25.—The Italian government is moving rapidly and with determination in the matter of an Italian protectorate over Tripoli. Its plans are no longer concealed, and its attitude is favored by all classes except the advanced section of the Socialists, who threaten to call a general strike in the event of hostilities. Although not attaching much importance to the strike, the government is acting with the greatest prudence in every way and has decided to call to the colors 112,000 reservists, so as to be prepared for all emergencies both at home and abroad.

According to the information in official circles tonight, the government still hopes to effect an amicable arrangement with Turkey whereby Italy will secure a lease of Tripoli under the sovereignty of Turkey, paying the referee an annual settlement of Africa.

It is held that the territorial modifications, which form the essence of the Franco-German agreement, will logically lead to other changes in which other powers besides France and Germany can participate with profit and without danger to their dignity.

MADERO FORCES ARE WORRYING

Coming Election in Mexico Presents No Foregone Conclusion.

City of Mexica, Sept. 25.—After the withdrawal of Bernardo Reyes, interest in the presidential election Sunday, Oct. 1, now centers in the election of the vice president.

The election of Francisco I. Madero to the presidency is a foregone conclusion, although in spite of the refusal to accept the honor, there are persons who persist in booming the candidacy of Francisco De La Barra, provisional president. In a two-column plea to its readers, El Diaro again insisted that the only salvation of the nation is the retention of De La Barra in office.

What is worrying Madero and his immediate supporters much more than this, however, is the vice presidential situation. Jose Pino Suarez is the official candidate on the Madero ticket, but Dr. Francisco Vasquez Gomez following appears to be growing no less and probably greater, while De La Barra stands in the background as the candidate of the Catholic party.

Popularly the race is supposed to be between Gomez and Pino Suarez, and in no newspaper of the capital has been expressed any fear of De La Barra's election; but the Maderista headquarters is far more seriously alarmed over his chances than ever before.

One politician in the councils of Madero, frankly expressed his belief that De La Barra would be named vice president, but not as the result of the popular vote next Sunday.

Under the law a majority vote of the electoral college is necessary to elect. Failing in this, the choice is made by the chamber of deputies.

THINKS HUSBAND TOLD ON HER; KILLS HIM.

He died at a hospital in East Liverpool, Ohio, five hours later.

PREDICTS CHEAPER SUGAR.

Atkins Says Price Will Drop in Next Fortnight.

Boston, Mas., Sept. 25.—That sugar will be cheaper within a fortnight is the prediction of Edward F. Atkins, vice president and managing director of the American Sugar Refining company. In a statement issued here Mr. Atkins says:

"The domestic beet sugar crop of the West is beginning and in two weeks deliveries will be made. This crop is estimated at 530,000 tons. The Louisiana crop estimated at 325,000 tons; will come on the market the first of November. These two sources will furnish a supply sufficient to provide for all requirements until the new arrivals from Cuba Jan. 1."

End $20,000,000 Sugar Deal.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 25.—Approximately 1,500,000 bags of sugar, more than half the average Louisiana crop, was sold to the American Sugar Refining company by Charles Godschaux and several other Louisiana planters, who have been in New York several days. It is estimated the deal involves about $20,000,000 and is the biggest in the history of the Louisiana sugar industry.

Mr. Opsahl announces that it is his intention to develop this tract to make special inducements to bring settlers in and take up this land and cultivate it. It is understood that his company will make special terms and an effort to divide the tract into farms to be occupied by homesteaders.

Experts declare that this tract is especially adaptable to the raising of clover, potatoes, onions and celery. It is a clay soil, every acre is said to be tillable. There formerly was a heavy stand of white pine which has been cut for the lumber company.

WITHDRAWS STOCK.

Almar Iron Mining Company Discontinues Sale of Stock.

At a meeting of the finance committee of the Almar Iron Mining company held Saturday Sept. 23, in the offices of the company, 1604-1605 Alworth Bldg., of this city, it was decided to withdraw the company's stock from the market and, at least, until certain deals are out of the way, the company will sell no more stock and it is fully expected that if they again offer the stock to the public it will be at a price far in advance of the par value.

Nothing definite regarding the withdrawal of the stock was given out by the company, but, from all reports, it seems that something of a very favorable nature, either at the property or in the way of successful financing, is the cause. It is known as a matter of fact that their mining engineer, R. A. McGuire, visited the city this morning and secured 500 shares of the stock, which he had subscribed for last Thursday.

EXHIBITION TO BE GIVEN

Children of Salter School to Show Back-Yard Garden Products.

An agricultural and poultry exhibit will be given Friday afternoon at the Salter school by the boys and girls of the institution.

In order to get the children interested in homecrofting, Principal Mooney of the school, a year ago, offered prizes in the nature of ribbons for the best exhibits.

For a long time past the children have been tending their gardens with a view to putting the products of the soil on exhibition.

Some of the boys went in for chickens an dothers went in for garden product. The show will be in the two classes. Blue ribbons will be awarded the first in each class of vegetables and chickens.

A program has been arranged for the afternoon and it is particularly desired that mothers attend. Superintendent Denfeld, A. B. Hostetter, N. A. Young and others will give the boys encouraging talks along agricultural lines.

STATE TO ACT IN NEENAH TRAGEDY

Madison, Wis., Sept. 25.—A thorough investigation of the disastrous crossing tragedy at Neenah yesterday, which caused the loss of thirteen lives, has been ordered by the railroad rate commission. Upon receipts of the news the commission dispatched two of its engineers, M. H. Hovey and J. N. Bidwell, to Neenah to conduct an official inquiry and to make a report. Whatever action the commission may take will undoubtedly be supplemented by legislation at the hands of the next legislature, it is said here.

Members of the commission were horrified over the extent of the tragedy and it was characterized as the worst grade crossing accident in the history of American railroading, and certainly in Wisconsin annals.

MORE TROUT FOR DULUTH

Consignment for Stocking Streams Will Arrive in City Tuesday.

Game Warden Thomas J. Storey received word today that another consignment of brook trout has been shipped to Duluth nd will arrive in the city Tuesday evening at 6:30.

This will be good news to those who were disappointed in not being able to sesure some of the last consignment, received last week and which did not half satisfy local fishermen who are anxious to restock every stream around Duluth.

The consignment received last week consisted of 160 cans, and it was stated after they had been distributed among those who were waiting to plant them in the different streams that a number of carloads could have been used by Duluth fishermen.

It is not known as yet how large the consignment of fish will be. Mr. Storey asks those who are interested in stocking the streams to appear with their automobiles and the fish will be distributed as far as they will go.

The fish are for the streams close to the city. Those received last week were planted in the streams close to the city and the fishermen seem to favor this idea as it gives them a good chance to get some fishing without going a long distance for it.

The trout are finger-length fish and are said to be the best ever received for planting purposes here. Many of them will be big enough to catch next spring.

NEED THIRD FLOOR ALSO

Health Commissioner Wants Funds to Complete Contagious Hospital.

Dr. H. E. Webster, health commissioner, will ask the council this evening for an appropriation to fit up the third floor of the contagious disease hospital at Fourteenth avenue west and Third street.

Dr. Webster considers it imperative that the improvements be made. He explains that since the institution was established about two years ago it has frequently been taxed to its capacity. Often it has been impossible to care for all the patients asking admission, and the result has been that it has either been necessary to send them to the poor farm hospital or quarantine them in their homes, thus exposing the remainder of the family.

The hospital has been the means of preventing the spread of contagious disease in Duluth to a great extent. With it available, it has been possible to remove the patient from his home, thoroughly fumigate the house and release the other members. Dr. Webster estimated that in the saving of department expenses it has been worth at least $1,000 to Duluth in the last two years.

It is expected that the council will take up the budget for 1912, recently submitted by the conference. It is believed that it will be approved in about the same shape as sent in by the committee.

Unless the application for a license to conduct a dancing pavilion at the Chester Park skating rink is withdrawn this afternoon, it will probably come before the council for action. It was stated this morning that the application would be withdrawn, but this had not been done up to noon.

Several small contracts awarded by the Board of Public Works will also come up for approval. It is not anticipated that any objection will be raised to them.

BOYS ARRESTED FOR STEALING FROM SHOW CASE.

Carl Hammer, Ben Chase and Bud Goodman, all of Superior, were arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of having rifled the showcase of the Windsor Clothing company at Fifth avenue west and Superior street. They are charged with having appropriated a number of knives, watches and other trinkets. Hammer claims Chase originated the idea. They said that they had sold one of the knives for a dime, but that the man to whom they made the sale had taken two instead of one knife. The boys are 12 to 14 years of age and were turned over to the Superior authorities.

Sagging or Hanging Cheeks and Chin

(From Woman's Magazine)

Flabbiness of cheeks, chin or neck has been considered very difficult to correct, until the recent discovery of a veritable wonder-worker for such conditions. The preparation is so simple and harmless any woman can easily make and apply it. It is all the more remarkable in that its beneficial effects are apparent even after the first application, both as to appearances and the feeling of comfort produced.

The formula is: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in 1 pt. of witch hazel. Use daily as a wash lotion. The solution tends to contract and solidify the loosened, baggy tissue, smoothnig out the folds, creases and wrinkles, besides having a refining influence on skin of coarse texture and large pores. As witch hazel and saxolite can be had at any drug store at little cost, many will doubtless be glad to have this successful recipe.

NORMANNA CHORUS WILL GO TO NORWAY.

The Normanna male chorus, which has thirty-five members, and is known far and wide as one of the finest singing aggregations of the Northwest, is planning on its first annual fall concert for the first part of November. The organization is holding these concerts with the view of raising enough funds to make a trip to Norway and tour that country in 1914.

A social gathering will be held by the club next Friday evening, at the Foresters hall, Fourth avenue west and First street. A program has been arranged.

This is one of the oldest singing clubs of the Northwest, and has been in existence for the past twenty years. Gustav Flaaten is leader of the chorus.

ROCHESTER BOYS HAVE REAL BATTLE

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a battle fought with airguns and four 22-caliber rifles between two bands of boys late Sunday, on the state hospital reserve, Arnold Nelson, 12 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Nelson of Rochester, was perhaps fatally wounded. The two parties first fired on each other accidentally and then kept it up, each thinking that the other meant bodily injury.

Bullets whizzed across the valley for several minutes, thirty rounds being exchanged. Young Nelson was struck in the side and he turned and ran one mile to town. He was rushed to St. Mary's hospital, where an operation revealed the fact that the bullet penetrated his stomach, intestines and liver. His condition is precarious.

No arrests have been made.

BRAINERD WILL SEND DELEGATES

To Men and Religion Movement to Be Held in Minneapolis.

Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. W. Lewis and T. W. Todd, prominent laymen of Minneapolis, occupied pulpits in Brainerd churches Sunday and spoke at a mass meeting in the afternoon explaining the men and religion movement among the Protestant churches. As a result of the meeting delegates will be appointed to attend the big convention which will be held in Minneapolis the first week in October.

The Iron Valley Mining company, incorporated by Attorney W. W. Barron, Surveyor L. Knudsen and Dr. R. A. Beise, all of Brainerd, has been capitalized at $100,000. The company has secured an option on the northeast quarter of section 10, 43-32, their intention being to explore it in the near future. This land lies about one mile southwest of Lemon, south of Brainerd and near the Northern Pacific railway tracks.

Murder Victim Buried.

Harvey Spencer, the young man who was murdered by footpads in Fargo, N. D., was buried here Sunday. He was about 25 years of age and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spencer of Merrifield.

Crow Wing County Fair.

The Crow Wing county fair will be held at Pequot on Sept. 27, 28 and 29. Gardner Stevens, well known in Minneapolis, is the head of the fair committee and states that 1,500 exhibits have been secured. A Brainerd band will play and a Brainerd baseball nine will play a game with a local team.

W. F. Holst's elevator shipped a car load of excellent wheat Saturday. Mr. Holst's resumption of grain buying and the rebuilding of his elevator was brought about mainly through the efforts of the Commercial club, which assisted him financially.

BIG CROWDS HEAR TAFT

lawn, where he delivered an address. After remaining in Independence thirty minutes, the president went to Cherryvale, arriving there at 11:50. He left at 12:20 for Chanute, where he remained from 1:25 till 1:55, when he departed for Ottawa. He is due to arrive at Ottawa at 4:05 and will remain there but ten minutes.

Senator Curtiss and Congressman Campbell came with the president to Coffeyville, but Senator Bristow and Governor Stubbs, who welcomed him to the state, left last night and will rejoin the party later.

Greeted By Hundreds.

The president's train pulled into Coffeyville early this morning, but hundreds of people were up waiting and hundreds more lined the streets when the president passed on the way to breakfast at the Country club.

The president faced a crowd of several thousand at the plaza and told them of his tariff vetoes. The crowd at times got beyond control of the police and there was constant confusion.

Those who could hear the president, however, listented most attentively, and occasionally there was applause.

Mr. Taft said he was not here to apologize for his vetoes, but to explain them. He devoted much of his time to a discussion of the cotton bill, which included a revision of the chemical schedule.

While breakfasting at the Country club the president was within a mile of the Oklahoma border. There was some talk of taking him into that state for a few minutes, but time did not permit.

Eleven Speeches During Day.

Senator Curtiss and Representative Campbell arranged here for the president to make a number of additional stops during the day, and it was figured that Mr. Taft would make eleven speeches before reaching Kansas City tonight.

Factions Buried Hatchet.

Balowin Station, Kan., Sept. 25.—The warring Republican factions of Kansas buried the hatchet yesterday and walked side by side to pay honor to President Taft. Governor Stubbs, who generally is conceded to belong to the "insurgent" faction, welcomed Mr. Taft.

Aside from the little political tinge that the presence of several leaders of both factions in the state gave, the day was little different from others that the president expects to spend as quietly as possible on the long trip. Mr. Taft attended church twice, spoke to the students of the state university at Lawrence and to the students of Baker university here, and reviewed the Indian scholars at Haskell institute.

Spoke on Tariff Commission.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 25.—In his speech here Saturday night on the tariff board, President Taft declared that the issues raised by his veto of the tariff bills at the last session of congress had made more prominent than ever the need of a tariff board, and related how the lack of general information on tariff matters prior to the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill had led to the organization by business men of the Tariff Commission association. He recited the history of the formation of the original tariff board, and told of the futile efforts made to secure the passage by congress of legislation to extend the membership and power of that body, and the appropriation finally of only a limited fund to continue the work of the original body. He told how he had increased the membership of the board by two, and said in so doing he sought to make it a non-political organization.

Referring again to the vetoes, he cited the constitution's clauses in which the veto power is conferred on the president, and declared that he believed he not only was within his right, but was bound by duty to exercise that power in those instances.

More Important Than Revision.

The president insisted that the formation and setting to work of a real tariff board is of more importance than the reduction of any one tariff schedule, and that this belief was the basis of his veto actions. The present board, he said, is not made up of experts, because such a thing is neither possible nor desirable. He praised the personnel of the board, and said that as an example of the work it is doing and can do one need onl yto study the report on Canadian and American pulp and print paper. The work it is doing, he said, is not the duplicate of that being done by any other governmental agency.

Speaking of congressional methods of arriving at date in framing tariff bills, he said that the system of calling in as witnesses those most directly interested in the maintenance of high protective duties is all wrong. He contrasted this with the tariff commission's method of examining the books of the interested concerns instead of merely taking the word of the men themselves.

Wants Senate's Approval.

He suggested a change in the method of choosing the tariff commission, saying that it would be better to have it appointed by the president subject to the confirmation of the senate, and that he would then have it independent of both the president and congress. The attacks that have been made on the tariff commission, he declared, have not been born of candid consideration of the ability of the members or of their previous work, but have sprung from the thoughtless heat of political controversy. He closed with a quotation from the resolutions of the Tariff Commission association in praise of the tariff board.

ver, whose subject was "The Country Child, vs. the City Child."

A conference of the governors and other representatives of the states was also scheduled for the afternoon session.

"Farm Methods Wrong."

Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri, in an address of welcome to the delegates, said that experts had shown that over 40 per cent of the farm lands of this country are cultivated in a manner tending to decrease, rather than to increase, their productivity. Such a policy must inevitably result, he said, in the impoverishment of the nation.

The continuation of this condition of affairs, he said, would be a reflection upon the American people for their capacity to use in a proper manner the great natural resources with which nature has endowed them, and that "the effective manner in which the people have taken up the important question of conservation under the inspiring leadership of that great American, Theodore Roosevelt, has demonstrated most effectively their capacity for self-government."

The governor spoke in part as follows:

"Up to the present time in this country we have been fortunate in that our production has exceeded consumption and the supply has always been greater than the demand. The result has been that the American people alone of all the people in the world, have eaten the same kind of food. No stronger influence could exist as against the creation of classes and castes in our population than for all the people to eat the same kind of food.

Sees Danger Ahead.

"But the consumption increasing more rapidly than production, and the consequent increase in the cost of the necessities of life, there will come a time when many will not be able to secure the same kind of food that is enjoyed by others. Then will there come a disturbing and dangerous influence that will threaten our society and our institutions.

"Statistics tell us of a constantly decreasing surplus of production. If this tendency continues, in a few years we will consume all the products of our grain and of our livestock. And when this condition is followed by a time when it will be necessary to import the necessities of life, then will exist conditions that will be cause for concern.

"There is no state in the Union which illustrates more completely both the necessity and the value of a practical application of the policy of conversation than Missouri. Of the 44,000,000 acres which constitute the state, little more than one-half has ever been touched by a plow, and of this 20,000,000 acres of uncultivated soil there are 17,500,000 acres of woodland, awaiting the stroke of the woodsman's ax.

Benefits of Conservation.

"Through the proper application of the principles of conservation, this timber can be cleared so as to restore the growth of blue grass and blue-stem, thus making the region the most favorable for dairying and the raising of live stock that the country affords, and preserving enough timber to give the natural commercial advantages to be derived therefrom.

"There are 3,500,000 acres of swamp and overflowed lands to be found in the valleys of our great rivers. If this land were reclaimed, it would produce enough agricultural wealth each year to feed all the people of Missouri and leave the balance of our land for the production of surplus products."

Address By President.

Henry Wallace, president of the congress, a farm editor and also a practical farmer, owning a model farm near Des Moines, Iowa, has been prominent in the conservation movement since its beginning. He spoke today on the "Back to the Land Movement." He said in part:

"The actual prosperity of any city is largely measured by the foresight, the breadth of vision and energy of its Commercial club. A modern city may have vast resources; it may have a form of government almost ideal; and that government may be acceptable to the people and free from any breath of scandal; but if it does not have an organization of its ablest and best business men, who can make a careful study of these resources, who work together—and that, too, often at great personal and pecuniary sacrifice—for the good of the city as a whole, these resources are likely to remain undeveloped."

Back to the Land.

He commended the work of the Kansas City club and of the state of Missouri, and continued:

"Even before the daily press had begun the crusade 'back to the land,' the movement toward the land had already begun. When Oklahoma was opened up to settlement the land seekers stood, serried ranks of horsemen, waiting for the signal gun; and that great state of undulating prairie, heretofore only a great pasture, was converted in a few weeks into a state of farm homes. Congress did not dare to repeat the experiment; but when other Indian reservations were opened up, provided for the distribution of land by lot, giving the prize to the lucky man rather than to the one with the swiftest horse and most accurate knowledge of the country. Every opening since reveals the fact that only one in a few can gain the coveted prize, so great is the land hunger of the American people.

Land Hunger Is General.

"This land hunger is not peculiar to any class of people nor to any state. The merchant, the banker, the railroad official of New York and Boston, each longs for a farm, possibly only as a summer home, but is willing to pay for it in investment, in improvements and cost of management, more than it is worth in dollars or ever will be. He, too, is bitten by land hunger. Many small business men of our cities, who cannot hope to secure a farm and live on it, invest greedily in acreage in the suburbs. The workman in the factory aims to secure two or three acres on which he can build himself a home, have a garden or cow pasture or place for poultry, or at least a playground for his children.

"The growth of large cities has ceased to be in the business or even in the old residence sections, and is entirely in the suburbs.

"As interurbans stretch out from the cities, farm after farm on their lines is divided up into acreage; and thus, while the steam railroads tend to concentrate population, as they have from the beginning, the trolley lines tend to lure the people back toward the country. Even our foreign population, the men who dig our coal, mine our ores and swelter in our furnaces, aim to have a few acres which they can call their own, where they may live cheaply and die in peace and quiet, when the great interests have used up their best days and cast them off.

"In fact, latent in the heart of nearly every man, be he man of business, clerk or other employe, or laboring with his hands, there is a yearning desire to have a piece of land to call his own.

Counter Movement at Work.

"Alongside of this movement, back toward if not always to, the farm, the counter movement from the farm to the town, which has been going on for fifty years, continues with increasing and accelerated force. Farmers all over the older West move in great numbers or retire to the country town. Vast numbers of boys and girls fall prey to the alluring vices of the city; and many of them eventually take their places with "the down and out." Comparatively few succeed and become well-to-do. The city uses up men and families as it uses up horses. And this is true not only in this, but in the older countries as well.

"This movement townward began with the use of improved machinery, or the application of science to the operations of manufacturing and distributing the things necessary for the supply of our ever-increasing human wants. It has increased in proportion to the success of the inventions and discoveries. Large capital was required for the larger plants. The individual gave place to the firm; the firm eventually became a corporation, and finally a trust. At last the workman could no longer own his own tools, and became an employe. Large numbers of employes were soon necessary, and for self-protection they formed the union. The organization of labor followed logically the organization of capital, and gave us one of the greatest and most difficult of modern problems, that of labor unions. And in the factory we no longer aim to supply local demands, but state, interstate, national and even international.

Problem of Distribution.

"Hence we have the problem of distribution, or the problem of the middleman, and all the direct results of the application of science to industry. Since the world began the like has never been seen before. We have gone into this troubled sea without chart or compass. Problems are evolved, for the solution of which we have neither precedent or guide.

"While all this was going on, an empire of virgin soil, the like of which exists in such mass nowhere else in the world, was opened up for immediate settlement, and that settlement was powerfully stimulated by the homestead law and immense railroad grants.

"The farm itself finally began to use improved machinery. The farmer used more horses, better tools, and grew more crops with less than half the labor. All this was natural, logical, inevitable. What then followed? Inevitably, soil impoverishment. The nineteenth century farmer was, speaking generally, no farmer at all, but a miner, a soil robber.

Need Nearly All Our Grains.

"We are now nearing a point where we will need practically all our grains to provide for the wants of our own population. Our export in corn is merely a dribble; in our last census year 100,000,000 bushels less than the average ten years before. Our exports of meats and dairy products have shrunk in ten years over 50 per cent. We sent abroad last year only about one-third the number of cattle we sent ten years ago. There is not the slightest indication that this decline will be checked. If checked at all, it will be but temporarily, due to an industrial crisis. Were it not for over $500,000,000 worth of cotton that we send abroad each year, the country would be drained of its precious metals to settle our foreign obligations, and we would be on the verge of national bankruptcy.

"This condition has been greatly hastened by our statesmen. The gift of an empire of land to railroads to enable them to furnish speedy and cheap transportation for a vast continent, together with the enactment of the homestead law, so excessively stimulated agricultural production that the farmer was often, and in fact generally until about twelve years ago, forced to sell his products at and often under the cost of production. This gave the world cheaper food than it will ever see again, and made possible the wonderful growth of great cities the world over.

"Our Great Problem."

"Our great problem, as I said to this congress a year ago, is how to produce food for our own people at prices which they can afford to pay. But how? Partly by putting more brains into our farming. There is a great deal of agricultural labor wasted simply because many farmers do not have even an elementary knowledge of the forces with which they have to work. It is hard to convince them that the fertility of the soil is not inexhaustible. This is an educational process, and therefore slow, even when there is a disposition to acquire the knowledge. Many farmers hove more faith in moon signs than in agricultural colleges and experimental tsations; more faith in ordinary politicians than in college profesosrs and scientists, more faith in yellow journals than in the agricultural papers.

"For this reason we now grow on an avorage two-thirds of a pound of corn to the hill; whereas the good farmer often grows on no better lund orogin-ally two pounds per hill of three stalks, and three pounds is possible. We grow fourteen bushels of wheat per acre (this year but twelve and a half), while on land no better naturally, and often not as good, England grows thirty-two and Germany twenty-eight bushels. We are now passing through a stage through which English farmers passed when they grew but twelve and a half bushels of wheat per acre. The new agriculture has lifted the English and the Danish farmer out of the rut. It will lift us when we begin to use our brains.

Boys and Girls on the Farm.

The very root and kernel of our modern farm problem is how to retain on the farm all the boys and girls born there, who are fit to be farmers or farmers' wives. This can be done only by making farm life worth living. Making money or owning a farm is not all farm life. We have but one life to live on this earth, and we should get out of it all that is possible. In many sections in the country, with bad roads, poor schools, poor churches and no social life, farm life is not worth living. That proof of this is seen in the fact that farm boys and girls flee from it, and the farmer himself, as soon as he thinks he is able to live in town.

"The farmer himself is to blame for much of this. He has played on the roads under pretense of working them. He has hired the school teacher at the lowest wage and starved the preacher. He has accepted the town ideal of life, rewarding himself as "only a farmer." His school has not been a rural school at all, but a poor kind of city school moved out into the country; and its teacher gaining at his expense the years of experience, while teaching farm children in terms of the town instead of the farm, that will enable her to get a position in the city. His preacher has been hoping he would get a call to a city church. If the farmer has got in in the world, his wife, if she is very foolish indeed, is inclined to boast that her society is not in the country, but the town. He allows the politician in the city to fix up a slate and tell him how he must vote.

Farmers and Peasantry.

"All that is needed to convert the farmers of the West into peasants is to continue this policy for another generation. Fortunately this policy will not continue. All over the country there is the beginning of a great social and industrial awakening. The farmer is beginning to "magnify his office," to cut loose from partisan bias, to do his own thinking and act for himself.

"The conservation of the life of the farmer, using the word in its broadest sense, is essential to the conservation of the fertility of the soil.

"In conclusion, permit me to say that the ultimate prosperity of the city, its ability to govern itself wisely and well, depend on the development of rural manhood. More than that, the very permanence of our republic will depend on the development of the manhood of the farm. Rome ceased to be a republic shortly after the farmers moved to town and left their lands to be tilled by mere hirelings and slaves."

Hillsboro, N. D., Burglary.

Hillsboro, N. D., Sept. 25.—The general merchandise store of L. H. Larsen was entered here Friday night by an unknown man or men and twenty-three watches, five sweaters, four pairs of ladies' shoes, skirts and other merchandise was taken. Two transients, Paddy Flannagan and Harry Lewis, were arrested.

Bodies Fearfully Mutilated.

Several of the bodies were mutilated so badly that identification was possible only by fragments of clothing. Six bodies of the victims were discovered on the engine pilot where they lay until removed by the train crew and passengers. Two others of the persons killed were hurled through a flagman's shanty with such force as to overturn the little structure. One of these was Miss Finn, who was thrown through one of the side walls and was still alive when removed. She died a few hours later. Another of the victims was thrown high over a barn fifty feet from the right-of-way.

Will Ascend From Calhoun.

Minneapolis, Sept. 25.—Hugh Robinson, the aviator who is to make the flight from Minneapolis to New Orleans, starting from here Oct. 11, announced that he has decided to ascend from Lake Calhoun. Mr. Robinson has intimated that he might start from the Mississippi river.

New Fall Hats

MARKED contrasts in trimmings and colors, enormous variety in materials and shapes and startingly smart contours are the characteristic features of the new fall hat.

Among the simpler ones those with narrow brims and prominent crowns take the lead. All the small, medium and large hats that permit of the prominent sugar loaf or flat-topped conical crown are also shown great partiality. Brims that are evenly wide all around and perfectly flat are often shown in connection with the flat-topped crown, while the pointed sugar loaf or beehive crowns are shown in connection with the Spanish brim, which rolls up at one side and droops at the other. Round crowns are seen, but the elongated dome shape is mostly preferred.

The East Indian turban is seen in many different developments. Made of two-toned striped taffeta, the edges finished with fine fringe and the ends crossed and knotted in front, they are particularly smart.

Every style of bonnet is fashionable, and especially the quaint styles that served to complete the costume of the ladies of the first and second French empire. Both styles have the more or less broad and close-fitting poke brim, but, while the 1810 shapes are more picturesque, those worn about the year 1860 and affected by Empress Eugenie are more comfortable to wear and, more practical, having more moderate dimensions. Long, loosely flowing ties are used in both styles.

The large hat shapes are very picturesque. In these the crowns do not always show the new tendency for increased height, though the attempt has been made to combine the tall steeple crown with brims of the largest possible circumference. The medium high moderately broad crown, which looks like an inverted bowl, seems to be the one most in harmony with the gently drooping brim.

In regard to trimming materials, velvet will be prominent for the reason that it may be made up into any and all of the many shapes which will be popular this fall and winter. It is as suitable for the prim hat of rigid outline as for the softly draped turban or the quaint poke, and is always dressy and refined looking. Changeable taffeta silks, satin and surah have come into style again. Entire hats are made of these silks, and quantities of them are required for developing the full ruches, thick twists and drapes, and the closely lapping pleated frills covering the surface of some of the smartest fall hats. Moire and broadcloth are well liked for hat facings and for covering the upper part of velvet hats. Soft, smooth-finished felts are also liked for this purpose.

All the new ribbons are used in great profusion on hats, and the bows seem to be increasing both in height and size as the season advances. Ten yards of No. 150 ribbon are not by any means exaggerated, sometimes even a greater number of yards being used.

Chicken, duck, goose and guinea hen feathers are made up into the most fascinating and most elaborate-looking ornaments, and are shown in such exquisite colorings this season that one is tempted to believe that they grew on tropical birds. Wing effects continue popular. When in solid colors, such as white, black or dark blue, they are frequently lined with plumage in a vivid shade, or else they are curiously spotted in a contrasting color. They are used singly and in pairs, and are always so arranged as to slant up at a daring angle far beyond the crown. Often they are so broad as to encircle the entire crown, the tips meeting above the top of the crown.

STOLE HALF A FARE

And Penitent Offender Sends Traction Company Twenty Cents.

Shelbyville, Ind., Sept. 25.—P. M. Corya, agent at the local traction station of the Indianapolis and Cincinnati Traction company, has received the following communication from Carlinsville, Ill., with 20 cents:

"The Bible teaches that we must, in order to be forgiven of sin by God, make right our wrongs. Inclosed find 20 cents, payment for a stolen half fare from Shelbyville to Indianapolis, the fare several years ago being 41 cents, and I rode on a twenty-three-cent ticket. Jesus saved me and has forgiven me my sins, and I intend by His grace to be different. I humbly ask your pardon for this."

WARREN E. GREENE ON "THE DEATH OF HOMER"

At the request of many of the attorneys who attended the bar banquet Saturday evening, Warren E. Greene today consented to furnish The Herald with a copy of his speech on "the death of Homer." Mr. Greene's was one of six speeches that took the attorneys by storm Saturday night. The others were delivered by Bert Fesler, W. E. Whipple, Homer B. Fulton, C. O. Baldwin and W. G. Bonham. None of the speakers talked from manuscript, but Mr. Greene had committed his paraphrase of Shakespeare to memory, and was able to supply The Herald with a copy of it. It follows:

WARREN E. GREENE.

My gentle friends
(Interruptions)
Lawyers, near-lawyers, and Charlie Mitchell,
Lend me your ears.

I come to bury Homer, not to praise him.
The rotten decisions that judges make
Live after them, the good are generally
Reversed by the supreme court.
So let it be with Homer. The skinny Fesler
Hath told you Homer was ambitious.
If it were so, it were a grievous fault,
And grievously did the state convention
Take the ambish out of him.
He was my friend, Whipple's and Fulton's friend,
And we were all the friends he had,
Yet Fesler says he was anibitious.
But Fesler is attorney for a "trust"
Which hath laid many paving stones in Rome,
And with the proceeds hath its private coffers filled.
And how comes Baldwin, Celibate O. Baldwin,
And makes great moan that Homer was a bachelor.
When that the ladies have cried, Homer hath wept.
Bachelors should be made of sterner stuff.
Yet Baldwin says he was a bachelor,
But Baldwin is a bachelor perforce,
And jealous that he lacks that grace of face
And form which in great Homer was
A constant lure to every maiden
Of whate'er degree.

You all do know that but a year ago,
We all presented him a kingly crown
Which we could not deliver.
Yet he did not refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Fesler says he was ambitious.
I speak not to disprove what Fesler spoke
For his complaints are answers,
And his answers all replies.

You all did love him once, without cause.
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
O judgment, thou art fled to brutish
Investigating committees
And courts have lost their usefulness
—Bear with me:
My heart is in the soup tureen with Homer,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

But yesterday Homer's findings of fact
And conclusions of law, might
Have stood against the world, or till he Himself reversed himself; now is he gone
And none so poor as do him reverence.
Even Bonham, 'slipping like an eel thro' grease,' Claims that he lacked the nerve to

But here's a package, with the seal of Homer.
I found it in his chambers. 'Tis his chromo.
Let but the commons see this photograph—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to show—
And they would go and kick dead Homer's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his judicial gore.
Yea, beg to have this reproduced,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich joke
Unto their issue.
(Cries of "show it," show it.")

Have patience, gentle friends, I must not show it.
'Twas taken many years ago, when he
Was thrashing wheat down on the farm.
It is not meet you know how green our Homer looked.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, and seeing this face of Homer
It will inflame you. It will drive you bughouse.
It will make you "mad."
(More calls to "show it.")

You will compel me then to show the "Mona Lisa?"
Then make a ring about what would have been
The corpse of Homer had he been about,
And let me show you part of him who sat for this.
(Holding aloft a pair of tattered overalls.)

If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
But first, they charge that he was loud
And ostentatious in his dress. 'Tis false.
You all know these trousers; I remember
The first time ever Homer put them on;
'Twas on a summer's morning, in his tent
That day he gave divorce to two-and-twenty
Handsome women, and as he set them free
They each, with covetous eyes gazed first on these
And then on him, and sighed,
With longing infinite.

Look, in this place ran Fesler's dagger thro',
See what a rent the envious Baldwin made,
Thro' this the well-beloved Bonham stabbed
And as he plucked his cursed hoofs away
Mark how the blood of Homer followed them
As rushing out of doors to be resolved
If Bonham so unkindly knocked or no.
For Bonham as you know, was Homer's angel!
This was the most unkindnest kick of all.
Then burst his mighty heart.
And, in this mantle, muffling up his face
Even at the base of the Revised Statutes
Which all the while dripped bad constructions
Great Homer fell.

O, what a fall was there my countrymen,
Then you and I and all of us bumped the bumps
And old Dick Cullen and his mystic satchel
Flourished over us.

But hold, you have forgot the picture that
I told you of. Here it is, and under Homer's seal
I beg that you do rally round this standard.

Don't Need Ears to Hear.

According to scientists, fish can hear, but not with ears. The outside of the ear is not necessary for hearing. It is possible to hear through the teeth. As long as vibration reaches the brain the object hears, for sound is only motion. Put a pencil between the teeth, they assert, and hold it against the sounding board of a piano, with the ears muffled, and the tone is heard through the teeth. Just as sensitive is the sense of taste, when golden grain belt beers are served to connoisseurs—the superb flavor wins friends everywhere. # VERMILION IRON MERGER

Vermilion Steel & Iron and Extension of Same Are Consolidated.

New Company Counts on Shipping When Season Opens Next Spring.

At a meeting of the stockholders of both companies in the Sellwood building today, the Vermilion Steel & Iron company and the Extension of Vermilion Steel & Iron company were consolidated. The Vermilion company was capitalized at $250,000, $1 shares, and Extension at $200,000, $2 shares. The shares of each are selling on the market around $2.50. Stockholders in both companies get share for share in the new company, the Consolidated Vermillion & Extension company, which is capitalized at $500,000, shares having a par value of $2. The new company begins business with $45,000 of cash in its treasury and 67,465 shares of unissued stock having a par value of $134,930.

The merged companies are two of the Walsh group, in none of which has any shares been offered to the public for more than a year and a half. T. J. Walsh was elected president of the consilidated company, and said after the meeting that the sale of the balance of the shares in the treasury of the Amalgamated company was not contemplated. Mr. Walsh said the Consolidated Vermilion & Extension mine as well as the North American, another of the Walsh group, would enter the list of shipping mines on the Vermilion range with the opening of the season next year.

The Vermilion Steel & Iron company was organized in March, 1909, and 36,000 shares of its stock were sold at 50 cents per share. It has since sold as high as $15 per share. Nine drill holes have shown up an immense ore body on this company's property in sections 5, 62-14. Its triple-compartment shaft is down about 300 feet. The material at the bottom and the water have become quite red and it is expected to encounter the ore body at any time, although the management had hoped to remain in the greenstone wall until drifting commenced. The ore formation, proved by drilling, is 430 feet wide and 3,960 feet long. It was the Vermilion Steel & Iron property which awoke the general public to the possibilities of the Vermilion iron range, which had been practically dead, so far as development work was concerned, for fifteen years.

Six months after the successful promotion of Vermilion Steel & Iron, 50,000 shares of Extension of Vermilion Steel & Iron were offered at par, $2 per share. The 50,000 shares were all subscribed for in six days and $28,000 of an over-subscription returned to subscribers. This company holds 240 acres in sections 4 and 5, 62-14, adjoining Vermilion Steel & Iron, and containing, as has been shown by drilling, a continuation of the same high-grade ore body. It also contains a separate and distinct ore body on which little work has been done, but the indications are it will be as productive as the main formation crossing both properties.

Extension has a shaft down 120 feet, which will be sunk to a much greater depth before drifting is commenced. It is finely equipped with everything needed to develop the property and ship ore. The combined acreage of the two companies comprises 400 acres, covering a mile and three-quarters on the ore formation, which lies in a large valley bounded north and south by greenstone walls, a duplicate of the valley containing the great Ely group of mines.

The late Capt. J. J. Durage, the famous mining expert, predicted that this valley would in time produce as much ore as the Ely group. In June last, the Duluth & Iron Range railroad company made a survey from its main line at Armstrong lake across the Extension property and up to the Vermilion shaft, and has promised to have the spur built by the time the properties are ready to ship.

In explaining the reasons for the amalgamation today Mr. Walsh said: "The Vermilion company will soon have to install a heavy plant of machinery and has not the money in the treasury to purchase the same without the sale of considerable more stock, but the Extension company has just the size plant of machinery which the Vermilion will need. Besides, the Extension company has $45,000 in its treasury and the Vermilion has no surplus. As a large stockholder in both companies I consider the consolidation most advantageous and absolutely fair to the shareholders of both companies."

Officers of the Consolidated Vermilion & Extension company elected today were: T. J. Walsh, president and treasurer, and John E. Long, vice-president. George F. Ross and Messrs. Walsh and Long form the board of directors.

EXPONENT OF THE "VELVET GLOVE" RETIRES FROM THE POLICE FORCE

"Billy" O'Neil, one of the oldest men on the police force in point of service, was yesterday presented with a handsome gold watch by the other members of the department as a token of esteem. "Billy" is one of the best known men who has ever patrolled the streets of the city. Big, good natured and tactful, he made friends on every side. His idea was not to make as many arrests as possible or to break into print. He believed in maintaining order on his beat, but he always had the velvet glove, although an iron hand was available should necessity demand it.

Many a late celebrant who had imbibed too freely of the flowing bowl received a kindly word of advice from "Billy" O'Neil. Sometimes, when they were so many "sheets in the wind" that he feared they could not successfully navigate to their home port, he has played the part of a pilot. Occasionally he has practically carried them to a safe haven and put them to bed, if he knew where they lived and he did not have to leave his beat. He never knew the meaning of the word "fear" and was not only recognized as a most capable officer but as a man to be respected. He has been a student and is well read with an exhaustive stock of information upon many subjects.

"Billy" has been on the force almost continually since 1891 and has completed over twenty years of service. He retired the first of the month and was placed on the pension list because of his failing health. "Billy" will be missed in the downtown section by scores of friends and acquaintances, although he will continue to make Duluth his home.

RALLY DAY IN DULUTH

Meetings Held in Interests of Men and Religion Forward Movement.

Duluth Pastors Indorse the Plan—General Secretary Here for Day.

Through the efforts of the committee of one hundred, of the Men and Religion Movement, which was inaugurated in Duluth recently, one of the largest and most important campaigns for the spreading of the Christian religion was launched in this city yesterday. At the many meetings that were held throughout the city, frequent references were made to the fact that this movement is but a repetition of the great religious crusades of the Middle Ages.

Plans had been made by the committee of one hundred to hold mass meetings throughout the city for men and for boys, at which some of the leaders in the movement could speak. Five meetings were held in the afternoon for men, as follows: At the Y. M. C. A.; at the Glen Avon Presbyterian church; at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, Twenty-fourth avenue west and Third street; West Duluth Baptist church, and Lester Park M. E. church. Three meetings for boys were held at Central Baptist church, Twentieth avenue west and First street; Boys' department Y. M. C. A., Sixth avenue east and Fourth street, and at the Westminster Presbyterian church, Fifty-eighth avenue west and Ramsey street.

At the regular services in a number of the churches, the pastors delivered sermons on the subject. A special meeting was held in the evening in the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, where Philop Bevis delivered the principal address. He gave an outline of the work of the movement for the local churches, stating that each church should have an organized general committee, which should be subdivided into the following committees: Membership boys' work, social service, Bible study and missions. Others who addressed the gathering were, J. Wick of Superior, John J. Moe and Rev. Edward Erickson.

Pastors Also Speak.

The following pastors spoke on the subject at the morning services: M. S. Rice, of the First M. E. church; Rev. Robert Yost, First Presbyterian church; Rev. A. W. Ryan, rector of the St. Paul's Episcopal church; Rev. Charles R. Oaten, of the Lester Park M. E. church; Rev. H. B. Sutherland, Glen Avon Presbyterian church.

At the five meetings held in the afternoon, two addresses were particularly selected for the occasion, and these are being discussed at all the large cities where the Men and Religion Movement has been inaugurated. The first topic was "The Significance of the Movement" and the second subject was "The Call of Jesus Christ to Modern Men." Where more than two speakers were scheduled, no particular subject was assigned to those delivering addresses after the first two speakers.

These meetings were held in order to arouse a deeper interest of the laity to the religious work throughout the country, and are one of a series of similar rallies to be held before the great campaign which will be instituted here next March, when a committee of experts from the executive committee of the Men and Religion Movement will be here.

Albert Baldwin was the first speaker at the central mass meeting which was held in the Y. M. C. A., his subject being "The Significance of the Movement."

"It was significant," he said, "that the movement was launched simultaneously in ninety cities, carefully selected for their strategic position; that in each a committee of 100 men has been at work and heartily believe in it; that churches in all parts of the country are interested; that eighty-day campaigns under the direction of experts to prepare for carrying the work into surrounding territory; and that the leading magazines of the country have thought it important enough to devote their columns to it. It is a big challenge to the manhood of America and has already been accepted while the co-operation of the various influences already secured insures its ultimate success."

Similar to Crusades.

In speaking on "The Call of Jesus Christ to Modern Men," Rev. A. W. Ryan stated that this movement is similar in many respects to the crusades, and stating that as in those days the Christian ideals would call forth many thousands of Christians. He said that the religion calls for service, and the new movement made possible many opportunities in a practical way which would bring back the men who had been sliding away from the influence of the church.

Roy B. Guild, executive secretary of the committee of ninety-seven, which is planning the entire campaign, who is in the city to assist the local committee, delivered a most interesting talk, in which he told of the progress of the movement throughout the country and the interest displayed on the part of publishers. He spoke on the vice problem and showed that there are ten times as many murders in the United States as in any other country. He confined a few remarks regarding the "Boy Problem," and how it should be solved.

W. J. McCabe presided at the meeting in the Glen Avon Presbyterian church, at which W. I. Prince spoke on "The Significance of the Movement," and Rev. R. Yost on "The New Crusade."

Men Are Awakening.

Dr. Yost showed that the men of today are just awakening to the realization that religious work is a "man's job," and the fact that the new movement is a crusade. He said in part:

"In preaching I have sometimes felt that there is too much talk of the 'Prince of Peace,' interpreting the title as if it meant that to be his follower, was to live a life of quiet, peace and happiness, and that is what is hurting the church. During the 2,000 years of its history, the members have never worked as a whole with the zeal and earnestness that they should. The times that things have really been accomplished have been when the church was persecuted, and we look with pride upon the good accomplished by the Puritans.

"Women have done more than men in Christian work, and the real purpose of the Men and Religion Movement is to stir up men as they have never been before."

West End Meeting.

At the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, John J. Moe acted as chairman. Rev. J. J. Daniels and Rev. Swenzey Nelson assisted in the devotional services.

R. B. Guild of New York spoke on the "Significance of the Movement," in which he referred to its relation to the crusades and the reformation. It stated that the movement would be a success because there was a co-operation on the part of the churches and their members; and because of the united social efforts of the country. He said that in order to make the work successful, it must be done in the spirit that every man the Christian comes in contact with feels that he needs something and that the Christian has that something to give him. He also said that the small church must not be forgotten.

Dr. M. S. Rice of the First M. E. church spoke of "The Call of Jesus Christ to Men." "The significance of this movement is scarcely understood," he said. "Some editors have been writing on this movement on a long range; it is not a movement to versuade men to come back to the church, but to win men to a personal relation with Christ. Men must see that there is a greater expression than Christian relation. It is the most masculine thing that can challenge a man's attention. But we have failed to present it as a manly business. There never was a time in the Christian world that people looked to the church as in expectant institution. The church has made a tremendous expression and effort to get a place to stand. We are not looking for a place to stand, for we've got foothold room and a place to stand, and the world is now looking toward us for results that can compare with our expression."

The Boy Problem.

In speaking of the boy problem, Dr. Rice read a letter he had just received by Algot Johnson, the young boy bandit, who is serving a thirty-year sentence for murdering a Duluth policeman, in which young Johnson stated that the 'schools and churches do not give the boy the impression of what influence he can exert in the community.' Dr. Rice told the business men to take the young boys into the private offices occasionally and talk to them about their Christian lives.

Following this address the following men expressed their indorsement of the movement: Rev. Edward Erickson, pastor of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church; Rev. Swanzey Nelson, pastor of the Swedish Baptist church; Rev. J. J. Daniels, pastor of the Swedish Mission church; J. J. Moe, Rev. J. A. McGaughey, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, and Rev. Harmann of the Episcopal church.

Before a large meeting in the West Duluth Baptist church, E. M. Morgan and Leonard Young spoke on the subjects assigned for the various meetings.

At the Lester Park M. E. church, Phil Bevis, secretary o fthe Y. M. C. A., gave an interesting talk on the beginning of the movement to the present day, and spoke along the work that is to be done throughout the country. Watson S. Moore gave a short talk.

Boys' Meeting.

At the central meeting for boys, held at the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., the speakers were Julius Nolte, C. R. McLean and Dr. Robert Yost. In the West End chuch, R. R. Forward presided, and Caldwell Harris, Palmer Bevis and N. D. McLeod speaking. At the West Duluth church, Bert N. Wheeler presided, the speakers being Earl Ward, Dr. M. S. Rice and Harvard Rockwell.

At the First M. E. church a special meeting was held last evening, over which Rev. Rice presided, the speaker being Judge Page Morris and Judge William A. Cant. Both speakers gave stirring addresses.

Rev. A. W. Ryan of the St. Paul's Episcopal church at his morning service spoke on the subject, "Two Fold Force in Salvation," being taken from the text, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in you to will and to do after His good pleasure." He said that every man ultimately had to work out his own plans, to do his own thinking, but back of every human life is God, who puts it into man's heart to will and to bring about the man's own salvation.

1911 Fall Girl Is an Expensive Creature to Dress—But the Effect Is Worth It

THE 1911 FALL GIRL.
Posed for The Herald Photographer.

To bring everything right down to cold facts and figures, the 1911 fall girl is an expensive girl to dress, even though she has only a small wardrobe containing just the clothes really necessary for her to be properly dressed for all occasions without more than she really needs for one season. But she is worth it, for never have the styles seemed more attractive than this year.

A few prices have been obtained, but the list is a very conservative one, containing only what one really should have and not what one might have on a purse which was not somewhat limited.

Some of the things which the 1911 girls should have are to commence with the undergarments.

| | |
|---|---|
| Three suits of—well ah—knitted garments | 6.00 |
| Two pairs of corsets | 12.00 |
| Three white petticoats | 10.00 |
| Three princess slips | 15.00 |
| Six each of other fluffy white things with ribbons run in | 33.00 |
| One dozen pairs of hose, at 50 cents a pair | 6.00 |
| Four pair of silk hose | 6.00 |
| One pair of street shoes | 4.00 |
| Dress shoes | 7.00 |
| Evening slippers | 6.00 |
| Two morning dresses | 6.00 |
| One silk negligee | 15.00 |
| Bath robe | 7.50 |
| One street suit | 45.00 |
| Silk petticoat to match suit | 5.00 |
| Hat to match suit | 15.00 |
| Street gloves (three pairs) | 5.00 |
| Long evening gloves (two pairs) | 7.00 |
| Hand bag | 15.00 |
| Umbrella | 7.00 |
| Six plain shirt waists | 21.00 |
| Two fancy waists for afternoon | 20.00 |
| Polo coat, for wear over dresses | 45.00 |
| Two afternoon dresses | 55.00 |
| One evening gown | 50.00 |
| Evening coat | 25.00 |
| Evening hat | 20.00 |
| Furs | 150.00 |
| Two dozen handkerchiefs | 6.00 |
| Neckwear | 15.00 |
| Belts | 3.00 |
| Veil | 1.50 |
| Scarf | 2.00 |
| Total | $665.00 |

And this list is conservative.

It is enough to stagger the young man contemplating matrimony, but there are hundreds of girls and women in Duluth who spend as much or more for their fall wardrobe. There are also several thousand who spend less—much less.

DIBELL IS "RECALLED"

"Duluth Local" Decides That Judge "Violated His Party Pledge."

Bar Banquet Proves Existence of a Gridiron Club in Duluth.

"Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
"I have come to bury Homer; not to praise him.
"The bad decision he has made will live after him;
"The good ones will be repealed by the supreme court."

Just as the Commercial club clock was striking the fateful hour of 12, Saturday night, Judge Homer B. Dibell of the local district court was declared "recalled" by the members of the Bar association of the Eleventh judicial district, and while C. O. Baldwin's graceful figure stood draped in the folds of the huge red banner of "Duluth Local," Warren E. Greene leaped to a table and began his last tribute to the deposed judge a tribute that will go down into history, as the climax of the greatest banquet Duluth ever witnessed.

Duluthians who were fortunate enough to be guests at the banquet Saturday evening, awoke to the fact that they have a Gridiron club in Duluth. "I have attended some Gridiron club banquets in Washington," said Congressman Clarence B. Miller, "but this banquet compared most favorably with the best of them."

William R. Vance, the new dean of the university law school, who was the chief speaker and the guest of honor, admitted he was somewhat dazed after the banquet was over, and "Charlie" Farnham, the secretary of the state association, who came up from St. Paul to attend the dinner, grew so enthusiastic he contracted on the spot to "take the whole darned outfit down to St. Paul to show our bunch what a real banquet is."

The men who were responsible for the banquet were Howard T. Abbott, E. P. Towne, C. E. Adams, F. H. De Groat, E. F. Blu, and A. T. Banning, Jr., who constituted the committee in charge. As accessories after the fact, they had Frank Crassweller as toastmaster, C. O. Baldwin, Bert Fesler, W. E. Whipple, W. G. Bonham, Homer E. Fulton, and Warren E. Greene as speakers, and J. L. Washburn, C. S. Mitchell, John G. Williams, and about 150 others as "rooters."

Given a Hearing.

The banqueters could not have been called orderly at any stage of the proceedings, but Dean Vance was given a respectful hearing. He was the first speaker called upon, and gave a scholarly, able address, urging the need of building up the state university law school. The speech was just the right length for an after dinner address at such a gathering. Dean Vance enlivened it with several good stories, and on the whole created a most favorable impression on the assembled attorneys. There was nothing prosy to his talk, and the banquet guests enjoyed it thoroughly, and at its close gave the guest of honor an ovation that must have warmed his heart.

But after the guest of honor had finished, "friendship ceased." Howard T. Abbott was the next speaker on the program. It took him about three minutes by the clock to secure order, and after about ten words had escaped him, he was greeted with "that's the finest speech we ever heard. Sit down." But "Howdy" continued bravely, until the majestic figure of "Charlie" Baldwin arose and demanded the attention of the toastmaster. "Mr. Toastmaster" said Mr. Baldwin. "We have heard that old chestnut of a speech of Abbott's for ten years. We have heard him hand it out to judges and juries and bar banquets, and I for one don't propose to listen to it again. He is the chairman of this program committee, and he has himself down for a speech on 'The Ideal Lawyer.' He told me it would be in the nature of an autobiography, and I move he be suppressed right now." "Howdy" was suppressed, and sat down.

Elmer F. Blu was the next victim led to the slaughter. By a peculiar coincidence, Mr. Blu was also a member of the program committee, and those who were not "on the inside" began to see light. Mr. Blu said about two sentences, and then drew half a bushel of manuscript from his pocket and prepared to read it. There was a rush of the younger attorneys, led by Hans B. Haroldson, and Mr. Blu was removed, struggling.

Some "Business."

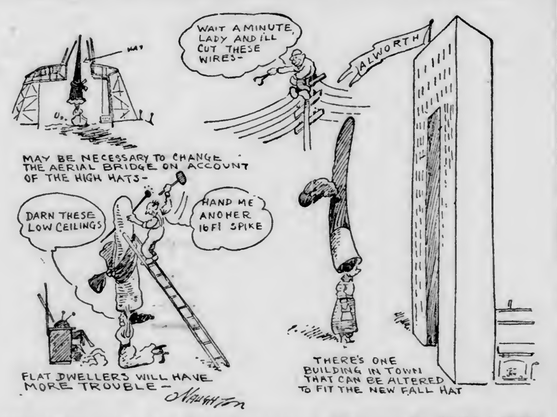
With the two speakers on the program disposed of, the tall, spare figure of Bert Fesler called for the attention of the toastmaster. Mr. Fesler intimated that he had some business to present to the meeting. He secured the permission of the chairman, and then presented an indictment of Judge Homer B. Dibell that will stand as a classic in dry humor and wit, for years to come. The indictment contained about fourteen charges, among them being that Judge Dibell was vain, loquacious, a poseur, a seeker after publicity, and many others along similar lines. Mr. Fesler went back into the early life of Judge Dibell "On Nubbin Ridge in Posey County, Indiana," and he brought him down to the present day. The speaker drawled out his sentences, and every sentence was the signal for a scream from the assembled attorneys. Mr. Fesler closed by saying that Judge Dibell might have the benefit of counsel, who could reply to the charges within the limit of 200 words.

W. E. Whipple followed Mr. Fesler, being the first speaker for the defense. His speech was another gem. He took up the charges one by one. He admitted that his client might be vain, loquacious and a seeker of notoriety, but explained that he had good cause for such. As an example of well rounded sarcasm, irony and invective, the speech will long be remembered by those who heard it.

W. G. Bonham followed with a short, but effective indictment of the accused. "We must not rely on the facts," said the speaker. "We must take into careful consideration all our suspicions. I will dare to say that if we were given access to all the defendant's private correspondence we could bring much more serious charges than these we have heard."

Homer B. Fulton then came to the rescue of the accused. He enumerated the judges of the district court, writing them in the hall of fame in the local courtroom "sacred for its political associations." He paid a neat and much appreciated tribute, serious in its tone, to Judge Ensign, and wound up by a discourse on the purity of the life of Judge Dibell in his early days. "Why he was so pure," said the speaker, "that at times even the family relations were strained." He brought his speech to a close with a peroration on the state supreme court, "which for maturity of judgment, for consistency, for broad grasp of the fundamental principles of American juris-prudence, is the equal of none."



Then Charles O. Baldwin arose in his place, draped gracefully over his arm the folds of the red flag of Socialism, and moved the recall of Judge Dibell "by Duluth local of the Socialist party." He offered as a substitute Richard Cullen. His nomination speech was a stirring one and threatened to stampede the convention, but just as the toastmaster was calling for the vote, Warren E. Greene leaped to the top of the table on the other side of the room, and flinging one arm aloft demanded the attention of all with his opening words, "Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears." It was intensely dramatic; an "entrance" that a Mansfield might have envied, and the speech as worthy of the entrance.

During the progress of Mr. Greene's speech, a messenger boy entered with a telegram. It proved to be from Odin Halden and "Lee" Wilcutts, and it ordered the members of the bar association to put an end to the farce at once. They announced themselves as unalterably opposed to any move that tended to shorten the tenure of office of Republican office-holders, and called upon E. P. Towne and C. E. Adams to have the trial called off. "Tell Towne and Adams that Senator Hawkins thinks as we do on this matter," the telegram continued. The vote was then taken, and Judge Dibell was found to have but two supporters, E. P. Towne and C. E. Adams.

"LOW BRIDGE" IS CRY AS NEW HATS COME DOWN SUPERIOR STREET

THE NEW HATS AS THE HERALD CARTOONIST SEES THEM.

Low bridge!

See the women duck!

Railroad men lose their monopoly on "Low bridge!" this year. The fair sex, accustomed to appropriating anything they need to make them beautiful, especially if mere man happens to have immediate custody, have taken "Low bridge" for their very own and the cry will be used frequently and with vigor this year.

The man who wanted an ordinance passed against long hat pins will probably come to the front with one limiting the height of sky-scrapers—the hat kind. Really, sixteen stories should be enough for any bull—hat, but there is no limit fixed by law and the height has no limit but the bull—wearers' fancy.

One can even conceive of plans being drawn, bids being called for and contracts let for the construction of the new headpieces. They should be fireproof with hardwood floors, electric lights, hat water heat, and all other modern improvements. Perhaps the modern woman will go the Indian woman one better and carry her children in her hat.

There is really no limit to the imagination. The high hats might be used for anywhere. Perhaps their sole use will be to adorn the wearers, but it seems like a waste of good material and space when they might be put to incidental uses.

A NEW CONVENIENCE FOR DRESSING BAG.

Up-to-the-minute traveling bags are now supplied with dainty telescope drinking cups that match the other fittings of the bag. If the various brushes and bottles have backs and stoppers of silver or gold plate, the collapsible cup is made of one of these metals. If the fittings of the dressing bag are of the snowy, fashionable white composition that imitates ivory the collapsible cup is also of this snow white material and these white cups are very clean and inviting in appearance. In these well-informed days when everybody knows the danger of the promiscuous drinking cup, and when even the railroads are putting a ban on such cups, no sensible human being travels without some receptacle for drinking purposes in the handbag. There are aluminum cups which weigh no more than a feather and which collapse and fit into a small metal box, which takes up practically no room at all in the bag.

TO MARRY IN EAST.

Charles Gates and Miss Hopwood Fool Minneapolis Friends.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 25.—Charles Gates, son and heir of the late John W. Gates, and Miss Florence Hopwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Hopwood of Minneapolis, will be married Wednesday in Uniontown, Pa., at the home of Miss Hopwood's uncle, Robert F. Hopwood.

Miss Hopwood, her parents and a small party of friends are en route to Uniontown.

The announcement that the wedding would take place in Uniontown came as a surprise here, as it had been announced that Miss Hopwood was to be married at her home in Minneapolis.

Arrangements for the wedding were quietly made and it was not until Miss Hopwood left that the plans became known.

The bridesmaid will be Miss Margaret Clemens of St. Charles, Minn. Wayne Dogue of Detroit, will be best man. Among the Smith college girl friends of Miss Hopwood who will attend will be Miss Edna Bunnell of St. Cloud, Minn.

Two brothers and three sisters of Mr. Hopwood live in or near Uniontown. Robert F. Hopwood, at whose home the wedding will take place; David J., Margaret E., and Olivia Hopwood and Mrs. Samuel Cooper.

Advices from Port Arthur, Tex., state that Mr. Gates has made arrangements to be there in two weeks, thus making a European trip impossible. After the wedding in Uniontown, the party will leave on their honeymoon on a private car.

A salesman can talk to but one person at a time; an advertisement "talks" to thousands at one time.

Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Poison Oak, Pimples, etc., show that some unhealthy humor or acid impurity is diseasing the circulation, and that a thorough cleansing of this vital fluid is necessary in order to correct the trouble. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., may relieve some of the itching and other discomforts caused by skin diseases, but such treatment has no effect on the blood and therefore cannot do any permanent good. Until the humor is removed from the circulation the cuticle will suffer the effects of an acrid irritation. S.S.S. is the best and quickest remedy because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers. ## THREE BROTHERS,

Each Bearing Christian Name of John, Signed Bond.

Springfield, Ohio, Sept. 25.—A superfluity of Johns was evident when John Burkhardt was placed on trial before Mayor Busbey of South Vienna, for the illegal selling of whisky. Four brothers, each bearing the Christian name of John, answered.

When the bond was signed it was noticed that each of the three bondsmen had signed the same name as the defendant. Asked for an explanation the defendant said:

"There were four of us, and father named each of us John. He gave three of us different names to distinguish us when addressed by him. For instance, my name is John R., but brother has no middle name, father being unable to find one for him, so he's just plain John."

AIRS WAYS OF TRUST

Commissioner Smith Reports on American Tobacco Company.

Shows 20 Per Cent Dividends Paid on Straight Water.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The intricate financial side of the American Tobacco company, familiarly known as the tobacco trust, and which is now in process of dissolution by order of the supreme court because it was a combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, is set forth in a report of the commissioner of corporations, Herbert Knox Smith, which was sent to the president and made public yesterday. It is the second part of a report on the tobacco industry and deals with the earnings, capitalization and investment of the great tobacco combination.

The commissioner points out that the vast earning power which arose from the substantial control of the tobacco industry, was a monopoly resulting from concentration.

Earnings Were Centered.

The capitalization of this monopolistic power was much greater than the actual investment, and by clever arrangement the bulk of the earnings were centered in the hands of a very small group of individuals. The enormous profits resulting from the inflation of the securities and the dividends paid thereon, the report concludes, rested in their ultimate analysis upon the monopolistic advantages obtained in the tobacco industry through concentration of control. In a letter accompanying the report, Mr. Knox says:

"It shows the vast earning power that arises from substantial control of a large industry. The great tobacco combination, which centers round the American Tobacco company, started in 1890 with $25,000,000 capitalization, operating only in cigarettes. By 1908 it controlled about four-fifths of the whole domestic tobacco industry, except cigars, and its net capitalization exceeded $316,000,000. This concentration is the basis of the combination's great earning power. High rates of earnings have gone with monopolistic control of the industry, and the less the degree of control the less the rate.

Earnings as a Whole.

"In 1890 the combination's earnings were over 18 per cent on the actual investment. They rose in 1891 to more than 21 per cent. It was then operating principally, and with a practical monopoly, in cigarettes. In 1895 came expansion into other branches, a keen competitive struggle, and a sharp drop in earnings. But by 1900 the combination's broad domination of the whole industry took effective shape. Its earnings from that date cover the great bulk of the industry. In 1901 they were 13 per cent, in 1903 over 16 per cent, and from 1904 to 1908 the average was 19 per cent, or $31,200,000 yearly.

"This was the earning power of substantial monopoly, the result of the concentration above stated.

Earnings in Particular Branches.

"Here appears, even more strikingly, the earning power of concentrated control. In the snuff business the combination has an almost complete monopoly—96 per cent of the whole business. From a rate of less than 9 per cent in the first year (1901), the earnings rose in 1903 to 15 per cent and in 1906 to over 22 per cent. The common stock of the snuff company, originally all 'water' paid 20 per cent dividends in 1909 and 27 per cent in 1910.

"In the highly controlled 'smoking-tobacco' business the average earnings of its important subsidiaries increased from 17 per cent in 1900 to 55 per cent in 1908.

"Conversely, the subsidiaries engaged in the flat-plug business, with more active competition, in no year earned 19 per cent, in 1906 less than 8 per cent.

"Finally, in the cigar business, of which the combination controls not over 15 per cent, its rate of earnings has never exceeding 9 per cent, and from 1904 to 1908 averaged less than 6 per cent. This business, moreover, showed exceedingly heavy losses in 1902 and 1903. Here were severe competition and low earnings.

Earnings of Independents.

"The combination's rate of earnings has far exceeded that of its competitors. Its rate in 1906, a representative year, was about two and one-half times the average rate for forty-eight of the most important independent manufacturers of smoking and chewing tobacco and snuff. The earnings of those independents, moreover, fairly represent the average rate in the tobacco business before the formation of the combination—roughly speaking, the 'competitive rate.' In other words, the combination has more than doubled the average level of earnings on its share of the business.

Spanish War Tax.

"The result of the Spanish war tax upon tobacco products especially illustrate the monopolistic power of the combination. When that tax was imposed, in 1898, prices were generally raised. In 1901 and 1902 the tax was reduced to its former basis, but the combination was powerful enough to keep its prices on the higher level. It thus absorbed practically all the benefit of the reduction, adding millions yearly to its income. This episode shows the unforeseen results of fiscal legislation affecting monopolistic conditions not fully recognized. The tax reduction, of course, was intended to benefit the consumer. As a matter of fact, it benefited almost solely the controlling interest in the industry.

Valuation of Assets.

"The combination's capitalization (exclusive of intercompany holdings) is much greater than its actual investment. The difference lies in the value attributed to 'good will.' The tangible assets (plant and working capital) have usually been entered on its books at approximately their true valuations. But the 'good will' in its domestic business alone stood on the books in 1908 at, roughly, $148,000,000, whereas the bureau, after careful analysis, has computed its actual cost (not present value) at $64,000,000, or 35 per cent of the entire investment. In this allowance of $64,000,000, the bureau clearly recognizes the great value of 'good will' (chiefly brand value) in the tobacco industry. Over and above this, however, at almost every important step in the expansion of the combination, there have been issued against that good will great blocks of new securities representing nothing but overvaluation, or capitalization of monopolistic power.

Insiders' Profits.

"Through adroit and frequent adjustments of the securities of the combination, a very large part of its great earnings have gone to a small group of insiders, who have throughout retained substantial voting control. These insiders in 1901 induced the common-stock holders of the American and Continental companies to surrender their stocks for 4 per cent bonds of the new Consolidated Tobacco company, thus securing for the common stock of the Consolidated (most of which the insiders held), the great increase in earnings, which they foresaw, from the reduction in the war revenue tax. This increase the rank and file of stockholders of the older concerns did not forsee. In the reorganization in 1904, the advantage of the insiders was perpetuated. Of the book profits of the new American Tobacco company in 1910 (not the 'earnings' as revised by the bureau), namely $35,000,000, only about $5,300,000 went to the holders of the $104,000,000 bonds, $4,700,000 to the holders of the $79,000,000 preferred stock, leaving no less than $25,000,000 for the comparatively small number of holders of the $40,000,000 common stock, which alone has voting power. This was over 60 per cent of the common stock in one year, not including extra dividends of subsidiary companies. In short, the bulk of the earnings of this great combination, increased by monopolistic power, has, by clever arrangement of capitalization, been more and more centered in a very small group of individuals.

Inflation of Securities.

"There must also be considered here the profits arising from the inflation of the combination's securities. For example, one of the constituent businesses was valued in 1885, under competition, at $250,000. Five years later, at the organization of the old American Tobacco company, it formed the basis for the issue of $7,500,000 of stock. By 1908, due to various readjustments, the securities based on this business had increased to $22,000,000. Meantime, cash dividends and interest thereon had amounted to $16,900,000. Thus, the total par value of these securities (the combined market value being substantially the same), plus the dividends and interest paid up to 1908, amounted to nearly $39,000,000, or 156 times the value of this particular business in 1885.

"The combination's history, therefore, shows these foremost facts: The earning power of a monopolistic position in a great industry, excessive capitalization, and remarkable concentration of the resulting wealth in a few hands, through control of the voting security issues."

STORES LOOTED BY SCRUBWOMAN

Took Goods Valued at $4,000 While on Her Knees.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 25.—"Steal while you scrub," is declared to be the motto of more than a hundred scrubwomen employed in down-town office and store buildings, by Mrs. Sarah Besingi, who is accused by the police of having stolen a fortune when on her knees. From information obtained from her the police are making an investigation which they believe will uncover the theft of thousands of dollars' worth of goods from stores and offices.

Mrs. Besingi, who is 40 years of age, was employed as scrubwoman in the Colonial Arcade and other down-town buildings. Watches and jewelry to the value of $118 had disappeared from a jewelry company in the building and Detectives Sammon and Sadler traced the goods to Mrs. Besingi's home. There they arrested her and recovered property valued at more than $4,000. The police say all of this was taken from stores and offices. Perfumery, manicure sets, small jewelry, clothing, silks, dolls and even phonograph records were numbered among the articles recovered.

According to the story told the police by Mrs. Besingi, she took the goods while she was on her knees scrubbing, and never reached higher than her head for anything, as she was afraid of attracting the attention of the watchmen. She declared that hundreds of scrubwomen in Cleveland used the same tactics in stealing, and that it is impossible to detect them while they are pilfering on their knees.

PROGRESS OF UNITED STATES

Growth of Its Material Resources From 1800 to 1911.

Washington, Sept. 25.—"Statistical Record of the Progress of the United States, 1800-1911," is the title of a small document just issued by the bureau of satistics, department of commerce and labor. It pictures in statistical form conditions in the commercial, financial, industrial and transportation systems of the United States at brief intervals since the year 1800, down to, and in many instances including the year 1911. In those cases in which the subjects considered are measured by governmental fiscal year periods, the figures for the fiscal year 1911 are included; in those in which calendar year periods are used, of course, statements can only terminate with the calendar year 1910.

Among the interesting facts shown are that the area of continental United States was 843,255 square miles in 1800, advancing to 1,734,630 square miles in 1810; to 2,995,536 square miles in 1850; and 3,026,789 square miles in 1853, since which date no change in area is shown. The population, which was 5,330,000 in 1800, was 93,750,000 in 1911. Public debt, which was $83,000,000 in 1800, reached $2,675,000, less cash in treasury in 1865, the figures of 1911 being $1,015,000. The per capita debt, which was $15.63 in 1800, and in 1865, $76.98, is in 1911 $10.83. The interest charge per capita, which amounted to 64 cents in 1800, and $4.12 in 1866, was in 1911, 23 cents, and the total annual interest charge, which was in 1866, $146,000,000 was in 1911, $21,330,000. Money in circulation, stated as $26,500,000 in 1800, was in 1911, $3,228,627,002, and the per capita circulation, which was in 1800, $4.99, was in 1911, $34.35. Depostts in all banks in the country cannot be shown earlier than in 1875, at which date they are set down as a little over $2,000,000,000, and in 1910, over $15,000,000,000. The number of depositors in saving banks in 1820, the earliest year for which the figures can be shown, was a little less than 9,000; and in 1910, over 9,000,000. Government receipts, which amounted to $2.04 per capita in 1800, were in 1866, $14.65, and in 1911, $7.45, or about one-half what they were in 1866. Exports of domestic merchandise which amounted to $32,000,000 in value in 1800, were over $2,000,000,000 in 1911; and imports, which amounted to $31,000,000 in 1800, were $1,500,000,000 in 1911.

Many other subjects of this character stated by the document in question include details of imports and exports by great groups and grand divisions, and principal ports through which shipped; the production of principal articles, such as wheat, corn, cotton, coal, sugar, copper, etc., from 1800 to 1910; the attendance in public schools, and sums expended for that work; postal receipts and expenditures; and a few pages devoted to monetary and commercial conditions in the principal countries of the world.

COUNTESS OF YARMOUTH

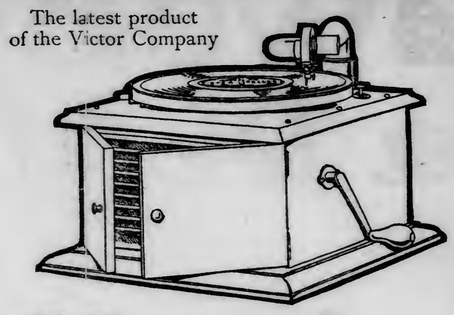
Plans Big Fetes in Her New Home in Washington.



Washington, Sept. 25.—Mrs. Alice Copley Thaw, the former Countess of Yarmouth, has returned to Washington after eight years' absence, to make new conquests in the social world. After a brilliant career in England, which terminated three years ago by the annulment of the marriage, Mrs. Thaw has been living quietly at Ashmead, L. I. She will entertain lavishly at the former residence of the late Chief Justice Fuller, 1801 F street, which she has purchased.

Large boxes of tapestry and furniture which adorned the English home arrived today. Mrs. Thaw's guests will see a magnificent display of old English and Flemish tapestry. Several pieces of antique furniture, also from the English home, will be placed in the hallway.

Yarmouth came to this country a year before his marriage in search of a fortune. In New York he met Harry K. Thaw, and the two became inseparable.

IRON AND STEEL REVIEW

New York, Sept. 25.—The commotion in Wall street that attended the campaign against the steel corporation securities last week had some influence in decreasing the volume of current orders for miscellaneous finished products—more particularly in building contracts, which called for only about half of the tonnage of the previous week but the farther away from the storm certer the less was the disturbance.

Wire products which are distributed mainly in the agricultural districts were active and even stronger in tone.

Finished steel products have suffered a decline of $2 to $6 per ton since January 1, bringing the level to the lowest point in ten years. Taken as a whole, prices have dropped twenty-five per cent since the steel corporation was organized. There were no further declines last week.

The principle building contract last week was for the new open-hearth plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, requiring 7,000 tons of steel shapes. The largest rail contract was 10,000 tons for the Chilean State railway. Car orders aggregated 5,000. One encouraging feature is the appearance of rail inquiries for 1912.

TEST VALIDITY OF POPULAR VOTES

Initiative and Referendum at Stake Before Supreme Court.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The initiative and referendum probably will be the subject of a decision with far-reaching consequences by the supreme court of the United States during the approaching term. The question of the constitutionality of these expendients of government forms the basis of a suit between the state of Oregon, where they are in use, and the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph company

The case originated in the company's challenge of a law enacted by the Oregon legislature under the initiative plan, by which a tax of 2 per cent was placed on the gross earnings of telegraph and telephone companies. Taking the position that the initiative and referendum, which are coupled in the Oregon law, are inconsistent with the republican form of government guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, the company refused for four years to pay the assessments. The state thereupon brought suit, and the company, unsatisfied by two adverse decisions, carried the case to the highest tribunal on a writ of error.

As the constitutionality of the law is squarely presented, it will be incumbent upon the court to deal primarily with the fundamental principles involved in a system which is coming into vogue in many states. It is estimated that eight or nine millions of people will be affected by the result.

TOO MUCH ENERGY

Put Into Yawn By Youth and He Dislocates Jaw.

Hamilton, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Charles Mahler, 20 years old, a teamster for the Champion Coated Paper company, sat down to eat his lunch.

He yawned just as he was going to bite into a sandwich, but got no further with his "eats," because the yawn dislocated Mahler's jaw.

Two physicians were unable to force the jaw in place, and they found it necessary to chloroform the powerful youth before they could replace the jaw and relieve him from his intense suffering.

It will be soft food for the teamster the next week or so.

VILLAGE BLACKSMITH

Seized By Mule By His Pants and Badly Injured.

Linton, Ind., Sept. 25.—E. B. Martindale's estate, incorporated, is made defendant in a suit for damages brought by James B. Dillon, on a charge that is not of the ordinary.

Clayton Baker, who is employed on the Martindale farm of 1,200 acres, said to be the best farm in Greene county, located southeast of Linton, took a mule to Dillon, who is a blacksmith, to be shod. Baker knew the animal was vicious, according to the allegations of the complaint, but said nothing to Dillon about it. Dillon proceeded with his work, and while stooping over shoeing a fore foot, the animal seized him by the pants with its teeth and threw him twenty feet. He alighted on an iron floor with such violence that the tendons of one leg were torn loose and his left knee was fractured so that he is still compelled to walk on crutches, though the injuries were sustained last May.

He alleges he will be a cripple for life and asks damages in the sum of $6,000. The defendant is the estate of the late Elijah B. Martindale of Indianapolis.

WOMAN'S REALM.

"Think good and do good things." This text from St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians was the text chosen by Dr. A. W. Dr. Ryan gave the address at the request of the graduates and he spoke of their training which they had received from their instructors, saying thy had received the professional information necessary to complete a good course, and that their work must have been satisfactory to have them presented for graduation, so he would speak to them on lines which might help them to a broader more helpful womanhood.

French Woman Writer Challenged Editor to Duel

ARRIA LY.

Arria Ly is the pen name of a well-known French writer who has come into prominence recently through a quarrel with the editor of a paper at Toulouse. Prudent Massat, the editor, wrote an editorial on the subject of Arria Ly's feminist sentiments which she regarded as insulting. She promptly challenged him to a duel. He told her seconds he could not fight with a woman. Thereupon Arria Ly attended a meeting at which Massat was presiding and slapped his face. She and her mother were arrested. But the matter was compromised by the writing of a letter in which Massat admitted that if he had seen in his editorial the offense which Mlle. Ly found there, he would not have written it.

Mlle. Ly claims that M. Massat agreed in writing to meet her in a duel and did not withdraw until he learned that she was clever with the pistol.

The Kitchen

Seed Loaf.

Ingredients: Three-quarters of a pound of flour, two ounces of butter, an ounce of candied peel, half a teaspoonful of salt, about a quarter of a pint of milk, a teaspoonful of carraway seeds, two ounces of lard, six ounces of sugar, a pinch of nutmeg, an egg (creamed), and one and a half teaspoonsfuls of baking powder.

Method: Rub the lard and butter into the flour, add the candied peel, cut into short thin strips, add the remaining dry ingredients, beat the egg, add with the milk, and beat all together with a wooden spoon for ten minutes; add the baking powder, mix well, and pour into a greased tin. Bake about one hour in a slow oven.

* * *

A Substitute for Cream.

When cream required for fruit, coffee, etc., cannot be obtained, a very good substitute can be prepared thus: Stir a dessert spoonful of flour into a pint of new milk, and simmer it to take off the rawness of the flour; then stir in the beaten yolk of a new-laid egg. Strain the mixture through coarse muslin. The flour must be first mixed smooth into a little cold milk, or it will form into lumps.

MERMAID GOWN IS "THE LATEST"

THE "MERMAID GOWN."

A mermaid gown.

This is the season's sensation. It takes the place of the harem skirt and is really much prettier but is rather an unusual and elaborate affair and costs a great deal to prepare it.

It was tried out on models in Chicago the other day and there were varied opinions expressed on it. However it will be rather an impractical style and will probably follow the other silly extreme styles to their early death.

The gown is made of soft supple green satin with an over drapery of flesh colored chiffon. The skirt is finished with a footing of chiffon velvet trimmed with a dark band of fur. The particular mark of the skirt is the "scooped out" front hem which reveals the trim little red kid boots and silk stockings which are a very necessary part of the costume. It would not be complete without the red boots and stockings. Then over the chiffon and silk green chiffon embroidered in irridescent beads and spangles is draped making the design as near the shape of a fish as possible. The bodice is trimmed with lace and other garnishings, keeping the coloring in green and pale flesh shades.

The report is that it is "terribly fetching."

The Eyes and Ears

Blue eyes are the weakest.

Wide open eyes indicate rashness.

Side glancing eyes must be distrusted.

Downcast eyes typify modesty.

Eyes with long, shary corners are seen only of those of keen discernment.

Unsteady eyes indicate an unsettled mind.

If the white of the eyes shows beneath the iris, that person has a bad temper.

Eyes that are far apart indicate great intelligence and tenacious memory.

Ears that are fleshy and red show coarseness of nature and sensuality.

Ears close to the head indicate refinement and susceptibility.

If the ears stand forward, they denote rapacity and cruelty.

Long but small ears indicate refinement. If close to the head, timidity, delicacy and perception.

THE EVENING STORY

A GYPSY FORECAST

By C. Richards.

It was the golden month of August, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and along the sunlit country road of one of the most beautiful parts of the country of Daunton rode a solitary cyclist.

Ralph Herrick, for he was this "solitary cyclist," was without doubt in a very meditative mood. He was reflecting back upon the time just four months ago when he was a medical student with a world of great promise before him and confort and luxury a mere by-word. Then came his father's death, the almost immediate result of shock through ruin occasioned by over speculation.

Luckily, however, through the help of money that he had managed to save out of a handsome yearly allowance, coupled with what little remained of his father's estate, he had been able to finish his studies at the hospital, and afterwards pass his final examination.

Now that he had passed, his thoughts turned in the direction of securing some post. But what a difficulty. No capital or influence to back him up, he had soon begun to realise with a bitter heart the obstacle that beset a young man's progress nowadays, when competition is so keen that each individual person is, as it were, a wolf midst a mighty pack, each vieing with the other to secure one little morsel.

He had ridden all the way from Beeston, his home and birthplace, to Lonemere in answer to an advertisement. But the little glimmer of hope that had been kindled had soon been extinguished, for on arriving at Lonemere he found that the post had already been filled.

And now he was making his way slowly back with a keen sense of disappointment and chagrin. He had but a very little money left and unless something shortly turned up he would be absolutely penniless. A voice broke in upon his soliloquy. "Have you a match you can let me have, young sir?"

Ralph looked in the direction of the speaker, and saw sitting by the roadside an old man of rather rugged appearance, whose face was swarthy; a man whom any keen observer would immediately have put down to be a mere wandering gipsy. Ralph, notwithstanding the bitterness of his thoughts, was of kindly nature and ever willing to do any little action of courtesy.

Dismounting from his machine, he fumbled in his pocket and produced an old worn silver box. Taking out half a dozen or so matches he handed them to the man. "There you are," he said. "You're quite welcome." And he then proceeded to remount his cycle.

The gypsy again spoke, and somehow his voice seemed strangely pleasant, emanating as it did from one so uncouth and wild. "Young sir," he was saying, "you have done me a little kindly action, it is now my turn. We gypsies both give and take," he added. Ralph turned round. "Your mood was a sad one as you rode towards me," said the gypsy looking at Ralph intently. Ralph started but said nothing.

"Your thoughts were broken rudely when I made my request. It was no easy matter for you to assume at once a cloak of good nature and dismount as you did." Ralph began to think that he was in the presence of someone bordering on the uncanny.

"Never mind, young sir. I see that soon a ray of sunlight will enter into your life. It will scorch up all that is bitter, and leave a bright patch of happiness. It will be borne by a pair of blue eyes—yes, sir just a pair of blue eyes." Ralph felt in his pocket.

"Thank God if what you say should come true," he answered, putting a small coin in the hand of the gypsy.

"Thank you, young sir. Don't forget, 'twill soon be a little sunshine."

By now Ralph had covered about fifteen miles, and but a mile further on was the small town of Vinetown, where he intended to stay the night before going to Daunton. Looking back he slowed down slightly and rang his bell as he approached what appeared to be a very sharp bend in the road. Hardly had he done so when another cyclist, without warning and with more than ordinary speed, rode around the corner from the opposite direction. The next moment the inevitable happened. There was a smash and Ralph felt his machine swerve from under him, and the next moment he was on the ground.

Jumping up unhurt, however, he was about to remonstrate with the person who had so carelessly been the cause of the accident, when his anger gave way to alarm, for he saw the other machine had been ridden by a girl, and that she was now lying in the road and had not attempted to rise.

The girl was quite conscious, however for as he approached she looked up at him and tried to smile feebly. "I trust you are not hurt," he said, as a slight twinge of pain flitted across her face.

"It seems as if my ankle is sprained," she answered. "I can't move my foot at all."

"Well, let me see what I can do," said Ralph. "I am a doctor." Lifting the girl tenderly, he helped her to the bank. "I must see if I can temporarily bind up the ankle," he said after a short examination. "I'm afraid my handkerchief will be insufficient for the purpose," he added, looking around unconsciously as if in search of some material which might assist him. "Still, I'll see what can de done." And taking out a pocket knife he cut the handkerchief into strips and then commenced the task of bandaging.

During the process Ralph gained from the girl the information that her name was Leonard—Gwen Leonard—and that her father was a doctor, practicing in Southberry.

"I suppose your father has a carriage of some sort?" said Ralph.

"Oh, yes," said the girl. "He has a motor."

"Well there is only one thing to be done. I must ride into Southberry and get him to come at once with the car." A grateful look appeared in the girl's eyes. "I am so sorry to have caused so much trouble," she said.

Ralph seized his machine, which fortunately had escaped danger, and very soon had reached Dr. Leonard's house. Not long after, through the medium of a fast car, both the doctors arrived on the scene of the accident. Jumping down, they lifted Gwen into the car and placed her machine in too. Arriving at the doctor's house they assisted her into the drawing room and there placed her in a comfortable position. Ralph turned as if to make his departure.

"Oh, I can't hear of you going yet," said the doctor, who had just been looking in professional admiration at the clever manner in which Ralph had bound Gwen's ankle. "You really must stop and dine with us, unless you have other arrangements."

"Thank you very much, doctor," replied Ralph. "I should like to stay immensely. I am a stranger in the town, and it was my intention to put up somewhere for the night before going on to Daunton tomorrow."

"My dear fellow, I insist on your remaining my guest until tomorrow, or longer if you wish."

"Many thanks again, doctor; it's very kind of you." And as Ralph spoke these words he turned toward Gwen, and as he did so a stray little sunbeam from the evening sun wandered over her face. Ralph saw and marveled at her dazzling beauty. Then, as their eyes met, he saw for the first time that their color was blue.

Dinner had just come to an end, and Dr. Leonard and young Herrick, whose face wore a look of extreme satisfaction, entered the drawing room where Gwen, dressed all in white, was sitting in a chair with her injured foot placed in a comfortable position.

Ralph, looking at her, felt his heart palpitate very much indeed as he realized what an adorable specimen of girlhood she presented, and how lovely she was. And on the girl's face as she returned the young doctor's gaze, there appeared a slight blush, which, mounting her cheeks like a rosy shade of dawn creeping slowly o'er the surface of a white sky, made her look more beautiful than ever.

"Well, Gwen, dear," said Dr. Leonard, walking slowly over to his daughter's side, "Do you remember not long ago I told you that I thought I should have to take a 'second in command?'"

"Yes, father dear, of course I remember."

"Well, little girlie, behold the 'second in command,' has turned up in flying colors." Gwen appeared mystified for a moment, then she understood, and looked at Dr. Herrick who was standing by her father's side his eyes lit up with a smile—a smile of gladness.

A HUMAN CRUET STAND.

Tid-Bits: Several villagers were discussing a departed sister who had been given to good deeds but was rather too fond of dispensing sharp spoken advice.

"She was an excellent woman," said one deceased lady's pastor. "She was constantly in the homes of the poor and afflicted. In fact, she was the salt of the earth."

"She was more than that," remarked a villager. "She was the vinegar, the pepper and the mustard as well. She was a perfect cruet stand of virtues."

THE HERALD'S FALL FASHION NUMBER.

Today's is the fall fashion issue of The Herald, to which wearers of good clothes in The Herald's constituency have come to look forward as a complete display of what is offered by the geniuses of the world that are engaged in devising new and tasteful garb, and by the enterprising merchants of Duluth who devote vast trouble and expense to the work of gathering from all parts of the world the dainty fabrics, ingenious designs and cunning workmanship that are needed properly to deck forth the ladies fair of the community.

A complete and comprehensive mirror of the fashions of the hour, telling what good taste and the mandates of style say one should wear and where to buy it, there will be found in The Herald tonight an interesting exposition of a vast variety of things to wear that will suit all tastes and all purses, be they fat or lean—referring, of course, to purses.

One important thing—two important things—this issue shows: that never before has there been in Duluth such a splendid profusion of fall goods to select from, and that nowhere on earth can the Duluth buyer buy to better advantage than in Duluth.

EBERHART IS NOT INTERESTED.

When the governors of the states, in convention in New Jersey, took a strong stand against the Sanborn decision which left Minnesota bound and helpless at the mercy of the railroads, the governor of Minnesota was not present. Though a great traveler, he did not travel to New Jersey on this occasion. Though an amazingly prolific speechmaker, he has uttered no single word of protest against the shameful situation in which Minnesota is left, condemned to pay a 3-cent passenger rate while every state around it enjoys lower rates, and to content itself with a miserably low railroad tax while all the property of its own citizens is heavily taxed.

Not only was the governor of Minnesota not at the governors' meeting, but he gave out interviews in St. Paul strongly condemning the action of the governors in protesting against the Sanborn decision.

It was left for the governors of other states to protest against the humiliation to which this state has been subjected by the malfeasance of its own governor, who has nothing but condemnation for such defiance of railroad arrogance.

Saturday at St. Louis President Taft voluntarily referred in terms of approval to the action of the governors at their meeting. We quote from the Associated Press report, published in The Herald Saturday evening: "The president then referred to the recent governors' conference at Spring Lake, N. J., which named a committee to follow the decision of Judge Sanborn through the United States supreme court. He said the governors of the states have a right to take an interest in the affairs of their states."

This right, which the president concedes as will all other citizens, Governor Eberhart appears not to be interested in at all. At any rate he appears not to be disposed to use it, preferring to talk of innocuous matters not subjects of dispute, and to let the state lose millions of dollars in railroad taxes—which the people of the state must pay if the railroads do not—rather than subject himself to the political peril of an extra session of the legislature.

Yet in failing to call that extra session, in failing to heed the hot discontent of the people because of the shameful and humiliating situation in which his malfeasance leaves them, Governor Eberhart is exposing himself to a political peril far greater than any that could possibly be involved in doing his duty by summoning the legislature to grapple with the situation.

THE STRUGGLE IN ATLANTA.

Atlanta, the Chicago of the South, will vote Wednesday on a new city charter which, while not the commission form full fledged, is a compromise coming so close to it that the politicians and the vested interests are fighting it as they fight everywhere all attempts to put government on a clean, simple business basis, subject to the control of the people.

Instead of the commission of five members with legislative and executive powers combined, the Atlanta plan provides for an administrative body and a legislative body. The legislative body is to consist of ten councilmen, one from each ward but to be elected by the city at large—a compromise between the ward plan and the commission plan. The administrative body consists of five councilmen elected from the city at large without reference to ward lines. This is the true commission plan, so the legislative body is an innovation carried over from the old plan.

The administrative body is exactly similar to the commission that governs Des Moines, though in Des Moines there is no separate legislative body. Each of the five members is responsible for a specific department of the city government. The mayor is designated as a member of the administrative board with a salary of $6,000 a year, and the other four members are to get $5,000 each.

The ten councilmen of the legislative body have no administrative powers, and their duties are limited to passing ordinances. They are to get $500 a year each.

There is no provision for the initiative or the referendum. There is a sort of a recall provision, but the people cannot initiate the recall of a public officer except by bringing pressure to bear on the legislative body, which has this matter in charge. When seven out of the ten members of the legislative body believe it necessary for the good of the public service that a member of the administrative body should be recalled, they are to publish their reasons as an official document for a certain number of days and call an election to choose a successor.

Franchise grants must be published for ten days before a vote is taken on their final passage, and they must have a majority vote of both branches of the council. Apparently no vote of the people is provided for at all on franchises.

This is a decidedly conservative step toward the commission form of government, and it is unfortunate in that its omissions give its opponents ample grounds on which to base an effective campaign. Apparently its chief advantages lie in simplifying somewhat the form of government, in fixing definite responsibility for various branches of public work, and in making members of both bodies responsible to all the people while still giving ward representation in the legislative body. The omission of the initiative and the referendum and the practical omission of the principle of the recall weaken it very materially, and give its opponents the opportunity to say that while centralizing power it fails to give the people proper check over that centralized power.

While the proposed plan is a step ahead, it seems such a short step that it ought to prove no killing matter if the people of Atlanta fail to approve it.

MAKING FORTUNES OVER NIGHT.

The second installment of the report of the commissioner of corporations on the tobacco trust illustrates most vividly some of the more familiar means by which the American public has been robbed of vast riches by the financial geniuses who understand the game.

The process is something like this: First get hold of as many business enterprises in an industry as possible; then capitalize the combination at many times the price paid for it; then force the people to pay dividends on the watered capital; and then rig the securities so that a few insiders get most of the profits while the common or garden variety of stockholder must content himself with a modest return. You vary this, whenever you feel in the mood, by starting something that will depress the stock and selling short. When you have the stock as low as you want it, buy heavily and then start something more that will put its price up again. Thus the insiders catch both the public and the minority stockholders both coming and going, and it's no trouble at all to pile up vast fortunes for the insiders in a very short time.

The commissioner reports that the tobacco trust has earned excessive dividends on excessively watered stock; that the greater part of these earnings have been diverted to insiders by deft financial manipulations; that wherever there is a high degree of control there is a correspondingly high rate of profits; and that the trust reaped enormous profits on top of profits already enormous by keeping for itself the war revenues on tobacco when the government repealed them.

One of the tobacco concerns that went into the trust was doing a satisfactory business and making money in 1885 on a valuation and capitalization of $250,000.

Five years later, when the old American Tobacco company was organized, this one concern formed the basis for the issuance of securities amounting to $7,500,000—thirty times its worth before it went into the trust. Eight years later, in 1908, the securities based on this $250,000 business amounted to $22,000,000, and in the meantime cash dividends and interest on these securities had amounted to $16,900,000 more.

Thus a modestly rich business worth $250,000 has been made the basis for wealth to the tobacco trust stockholders—principally the insiders—amounting to $38,900,000, or more than one hundred and fifty times its original value.

That wealth was not charmed out of the air. It was wrung from the tobacco consumers of the country by the power of an unregulated monopoly.

This is but one example, and there are hundreds, even thousands, of others. There was nothing to prevent this process. Men consolidating business enterprises could capitalize them for what they pleased, and if their control of the industry was firm enough they could make the American people give substance to every dollar of the watered stock by forcing them to pay prices for the commodity or service handled high enough to yield dividends on the inflated capital.

It was easy, ridiculously easy, and a few years ago it was being done right and left. On a relatively small foundation of property a prodigious edifice of capital has been erected. Unsubstantial at first, because most of it was based on nothing, it was made substantial by the power to compel the people to pay dividends on it.

And yet some people profess to find it a mystery that egregious wealth and sickening poverty exist side by side in this country!

SPLENDID WORK.

An article in The Herald Saturday evening gave an interesting review of a very interesting subject—the splendid work that is being done by the public nurses of this city and by the organizations which support them.

This work shows the charitable side of Duluth—always one of its most conspicuous virtues—in a strong light, and cannot fail to make every observer think better of his fellows and of his community.

The Scottish Rite Masons are doing a noble work for infant welfare, and are supporting a nurse whose duty it is to see that the disinherited babes of the community are given a fair chance of life and health. The Associated Charities supports a visiting nurse who does good work in a wider field. The Anti-tuberculosis society employs a skilled nurse who looks after cases of consumption in the homes of the poor. The Methodist deaconesses do good work along charitable lines. The Bethel Home, one of the finest institutions in Duluth, is a refuge for the waifs of the city. Nor should anybody overlook the noble and unselfish public service of the Catholic Sisters of Charity, whose tender ministrations soothe the sick and smoothe the pillow of the dying.

It is heart-warming to consider these many evidences of the noble generosity of the city, and it is particularly encouraging to note the practicality and splendid efficiency of most of this work of mercy.

LAURIER WILL STICK.

Every lover of freedom and democracy will rejoice that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, defeated chief of the Canadian government, has reconsidered his announced decision to retire from public life, and that he will return to parliament to lead the opposition.

"I should be a deserter of my party if I should run away now," he told the newspaper men Saturday; and he would almost be a deserter of his people and his country. For Canada, in linking her fortunes with the special interests which have brought the United States face to face with the most critical period in its history, needs such leadership as that of Laurier as it never needed it before; and its freemen will look to him to represent them in the struggle now to come between people and privilege.

THE STATE PRESS AND THE EXTRA SESSION

Like Crockett's Coon.

Cass Lake Tribune: The Duluth Herald is getting lots of praise on account of its attitude in regard to the calling of a special session of the legislature. One or two pig-headed quill-pushers bewail the necessity of combatting such a clear-cut hearesy and condemn The Herald for its recreancy to principles that should be kept clear of all defilement. Others, and their number is away up among the hundreds, commend The Herald for its energy, ability and determination to bring the mooted question squarely before the people. It's nearly four months to January, the usual time of convening such bodies, and we will wager a chew of tobacco that before the holidays are past our perambulating governor will have seen, clearly, that there are no more plums on the Minnesota pie tree for him and will abandon the contest and make the call to save even a little of a badly sequestered reputation.

The Facts in Few Words.

Red Wing Free Press: Enough members of the two branches of legislature have signed pledges to increase the railroad gross earnings tax, if called together, to insure this being done, provided the governor affords the opportunity by calling an extra session. This means that it is up to the governor to add two million dollars to the income of the state by simply saying the word. An extra session would place the subject before the people in the election of 1912. Avoiding the extra session means a delay until 1914—a delay of two years. And since every year of delay means a loss to the state of at least one million dollars in deficient railroad taxes, the governor's refusal to call a special session is equal to a loss to Minnesota of two million dollars.

Eberhart's Opportunity.

Hallock Enterprise: Never in the history of the state has a governor had a better opportunity to favor the masses as against the classes than Governor Eberhart has in this instance. The farmers and business people all over the state want the governor to call the legislature in extra session for the purpose of raising the gross earnings tax in order that the railroads of the state may bear their just share of the burden of taxation.

The railroads, of course, are against the calling of an extra session, so the matter now rests with the governor—he must show his hand. If he calls the legislature in extra session, he is for the people. If he refuses to, he is for the railroad interests and against the people who elected him to his high office. His action will be watched with interest.

The Governor's Choice.

Hill City News: The agitation for a special session of the state legislature this winter is becoming stronger every day and it begins to look as if the governor would have to take a decided stand on the matter pretty soon. Whether an increase in the gross earnings tax would be the proper thing or not, we are not prepared to say, but if Mr. Eberhart wishes to succeed himself as governor he should be more heedful of the call of the people.

The call for an extra session is now being heard from all parts of the state, and it seems as though the governor will have to yield to the popular demand or classed as a tool of the railroads.

Still it may be that Mr. Eberhart having in mind the fate of Sam Van Sant and the last special session, hesitates for fear that the result of a special session would find no more favor with the people than did the last special session.

It Rests With Him.

Sandstone Courier: The Duluth Herald is making a bold stand for an extra session of the legislature to readjust railroad taxation. It has put it up to the governor so strong it is thought that he will be compelled to call the session or lose political prestige.

Legislature Would Act.

Wasica Radical: The Duluth Herald wants a special session of the legislature called for the purpose of passings tax of railroads. It has been urgings tax of railroads. It has been urging this move for many weeks and it claims to have written pledges from enough members of both branches of the legislature to pass such a bill.

At the present time the only tax railroads pay in this state is a 4 per cent gross earnings tax. This low rate enables them to escape by paying a less tax proportionately than any other state property. There is no sane reason why they should be thus favored. They should be required to pay their share of the taxes along with the rest of the property owners. If the people were sure—reasonably sure—an extra session of the legislature would result in the passage of a bill providing for an increase in the railroad tax we believe they would cry loudly for it. But the fact is still fresh in their minds that a bill was introduced in the last session for an increase of this tax from 4 to 5 per cent and it was overwhelmingly defeated. Why have we any strong reason to believe that an extra session made up of the same members that defeated the measure at the last session is going to pass it or one similar to it at an extra session? There exists a doubt on this point that is hard to overcome.

As The Herald states, to wait until the next regular session of the legislature for action on this matter means a delay of more than two years, as it is necessary for the measure to go to the people for their consideration, which could not be before 1914, making a loss in revenue to the state, The Herald estimates at nearly two million dollars. The extra session would not cost to exceed $100,000—probably not near that amount—and if it was certain that it would pass the measure, it would mean a big saving to the state to have it called. The matter rests entirely with the governor as to whether or not the extra session shall be called.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, but these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

TIME TO FIGURE ON NEW CITY HALL.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Within a few years this city will be planning on the purchase of the site upon which the present government building now stands, and upon the erection thereon of a substantial building to complete the grouping plan of public buildings.

I have been informed that to date no provision has been made for the raising of money for such a purchase. By the time the government is ready to put up its new building and wishes to dispose of the property, the price will have advanced considerably, and if the city is not ready then to purchase, it will have to be held off several more years, during which time the increase in value is continually being made.

I think that some provision should be made for the establishment of some kind of a fund, and that it shall be maintained by a small levy on each year's taxation, whereby about $50,000 could be raised each year. Then ten years from now, when the government is ready to sell, the city will have $500,000 with which to make the purchase and build.

The necessity of such a provision is emphasized by the fact that the city is bonded to its limit at this time, and officials see no way to raise money for the purchase of a site. Respectfully,

A READER.

"Big-Business" Methods in Religion.

New York World: The institution of a national revival movement under the auspices of prominent financiers marks a application of "big-business" methods to religion which is in keeping with American development in other lines.

The movement was appropriately launched at a dinner at the Metropolitan club quite after the manner of the Gary dinners to the heads of Steel trust subsidiaries, and given by James G. Cannon of the Fourth National bank to the thirty trained church workers who are to direct the evangelical campaign. These will serve as its responsible heads, and under the plan contemplated will proceed to organize committees of 100 in 76 principal and 1,500 minor cities of the United States and Canada. By this systematic organization it is expected that 25,000,000 church-going people will be reached and religious influences extended as never before. In addition to Mr. Cannon, the movement will be financed by J. Pierpont Morgan, Cleveland H. Dodge, James H. Post, R. Fulton Cutting and Cyrus T. McCormick. It is assumed that, also following recent corporation and industrial development, it will be made international.

The movement contains great possibilities of good. One aspect of it that will specially meet popular approval is the devotion to the promotion of revivalism of "big-business" energies formerly engaged in influencing political movements. They will be more beneficially employed in financing religion than in financing politics.

Let Mr. Taft Take the Lead.

New York World: Mr. Taft is nettled by the charge that he has used patronage to accomplish certain things. At Detroit he mildly resented it and challenged the men who made the charge to join him in legislation putting all local officers of the revenue, customs and postoffice service in the classified civil service. "But they won't do it," he said; "at least they won't do it now."

Unfortunately, there exists a letter made public by Mr. Taft's private secretary telling how the president had withheld patronage from Insurgent Republican senators who opposed his policies and expressing his readiness to recognize them. The letter caused much comment at the time it was published.

Federal patronage is the life-blood of the Republican party in the South. Federal employes operate the local and state machines; control the conventions and elect themselves delegates to national conventions. As a candidate for renomination, of course Mr. Taft knows the facts.

It is conditions such as these that make the public suspicious of the use of Federal patronage. Mr. Taft may have done only what his predecessors did—perhaps in a less degree than they—but he is now president, he is seeking a renomination, and people judge by appearances.

If Mr. Taft wants to see civil service reform extended to cover the entire internal revenue system and other branches of the government service, there is a better way than to challenge on the stump the sincerity of unnamed critics. Let him take the lead in a message to congress. Let him make himself the champion of civil service reform and fix it firmly among the leading policies of the administration.

The Man of Men.

Ralph Waldo Emerson: Shakespeare, Homer, Dante, Chaucer, saw the splendor of meaning that plays over the visible world; knew that a tree had another use than for apples, and corn another than for meal, and the ball of the earth, than for tillage and roads; that these things made a second and finer harvest to the mind, being emblems of its thoughts, and conveying in all their natural history a certain mute commentary on human life. Shakespeare employed them as colors to compose his picture. He rested in their beauty; and never took the step which seemed invitable to such genius, namely to explore the virtue which resides in these symbols and impart their power—what is that which they themselves say? He converted the elements which waited on his command, into entertainments. He was master of the revels to mankind.

Is it not as if one should have, through majestic powers of science, the comets given into his hand, or the planets and their moons, and should draw them from their orbits to glare with the municipal fireworks on a holiday night, and advertise in all towns, "Very superior pyrotechny this evening?" Are the agents of nature, and the power to understand them, worth no more than a street serenade, or the breath of a cigar? One remembers again the trumpet-text in the Koran—"The heavens and the earth and all that is between them, think ye we have created them in jest?"

As long as the question is of talent and mental power, the world of men has not his equal to show. But when the question is, to life and its materials and its auxiliaries, how does he profit me. What does it signify? It is but a Twelfth Night, or Midsummer Night's Dream, or Winter Evening's Tale, what signifies another picture more or less? The Egyptian verdict of the Shakespeare societies comes to mind; that he was a jovial actor and manager. I cannot marry this fact to his verse. Other admirable men led lives in some sort of keeping with their thought; but this man, in wide contrast. Had he been less, had he reached only the common measure of great authors, of Bacon, Milton, Tasso, Cervantes, we might leave the fact in the twilight of human fate; but that this man of men, he who gave to the science of mind a new and larger subject than had ever existed, and planted the standard of humanity some furlongs forward into Chaos; that he should not be wise for himself; —it must even go into the world's history that the best poet led an obscure and profane life, using his genius for the public amusement.

Old Goodbyes and Howdy-do's.

The old goodbyes and howdy-do's!
Now there's a theme to tax your muse
An' make it switch from tears t' smiles
An' back again to tears, the whiles:
No polished rhyme but jist a strain
As soft an' low as Apurl rain,
That sings "goodbye" to kith an' kin—
Then change your tune t' Home Agin!

O who can dream the sort o' rhyme
That sheds the tears of leavin time?—
Goodbye t' mother, smutched with dough!—
The stanchest friend you'll ever know!

To home, to trees, the huntin' pup
An' crimson ramblers climbin' up
To twist around the heart of you,
An' tighter than they ever do!

An' sing it soft an' low to fit
The partin' an' the pain of it!— —
To fit the way a feller feels
When ol' familiar places steals
Apast him on the wagon road—
The boyhood spots he's allus knowed!
An' make the tear that's in his eye
To rhyme a feller's last "goodbye."

Then chuck a faster tempo in
To sing a feller Home Agin!—
Back home agin where he was riz
An' orter staid, as sayin' is!
His mother's greetin', father's too,
An' friends an' naybors' "Howdy-do!"
The extry chair an' table set
That mother's keepin' for him yet!

You post chaps! You set an' dream,
An' seem t' think the only theme
That people like is in the skies!
Set down by me an' drop your eyes—
Ease off a while an' git your tine
In perfeck pitch an' tune with mine,
Then try a sort o' keerless muse
On "Ol' Goodbyes An' Howdy-do's."
—John D. Wells in Buffalo News.

A Dubious Record.

Scotland Citizen-Republican: According to the registration records South Dakota has one automobile for every fifty-eight people in the state. This is a record that we believe cannot be beaten by any state in the Union, but we hardly know whether it is a record to be viewed with pride or alarm.

Men have been fighting fire for three days continuously and are so exhausted that they are almost ready to drop dead.

At the Minneapolis harvest festival the Duluth band got sixth prize in the band contest, which is regarded by almost every one as an insult, as it believed the band should have had first prize. A meeting has been called to reconsider the awards.

John L. Dodge, the well-known capitalist and banker of Great Barrington, Mass., is here on his annual visit. Mr. Dodge has been coming to Duluth for twenty years. He is a large stockholder in the Imperial mill.

Nels Paulson, an employe of the Mitchell-McClure mill, was badly injured by the breaking of a log chain, the end of which hit him on the head, breaking his nose and cutting a big gash across the forehead.

The case of the Ebel brothers, one of whom was general agent of the American Express company here until recently, to secure title to fifty-one acres of land just outside of the city limits of Chicago, is progressing very favorably. One of the best title lawyers of Chicago is handling the case for the Abels and expresses confidence in a successful outcome.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Magazine club will be held Oct 6 at the residence of the president, Mrs. George Rupley. Mrs. John C. Robinson is secretary.

Supervising Architect W. J. Edbrooke of Washington is here to see whether the quality of Lake Superior brownstone is good enough to allow its use in the Duluth government building.

There is considerable talk of candidates for the next mayoralty election. It is generally believed that Mayor Davis will run again. J. B. Sutphin and H. C. Kendall are being discussed for the Republican nomination, and Simon Clark for the Democratic nomination. The opponents of Mayor Davis claim that his administration is too strict and puritanical.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Judge's Library: Suburb—I tell you there is nothing like a trip to the country!

Avenue—Yes; it certainly makes one appreciate the city the better.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "If I buy you a seat in the Stock Exchange will you agree to go to work?"

"I ain't crazy to work, dad. Make it a seat in the senate."

Baltimore American: "Doctor, do you really think all the operations you perform are absolutely necessary?"

"Absolutely. I couldn't take my family to Europe without them."

Atlanta Constitution: "I was charmed with the oratory of the lecturer. That man ought to be in congress."

"Why, that's just where he is."

"Well, he deserves to get out of it!"

Birmingham Age-Herald: "How wuz de feed in de last jall you wuz in, Dusty?"

"Just so-so, my boy."

"How wuz dat?"

"Dejeunner wuz bread an' water. Repeat t'ree times an' you have de daily menu."

Master—Best 'oss we've got; find 'is way 'ome alone anywhere, 'e will, like a dog.

Pittsburg Post: "Have you spoken of our love to your mother as yet?"

"Not yet," murmered the dear girl. "Mother has noticed that I've been acting queer of late, but she thinks it's just biliousness."

Puck: Prospective Boarder—Do you set a good table here?

Rural Landlady—Good table? Great Scott, man! Look at the size of those flies!

Boston Transcript: Customer (in bake shop)—Is this bread today's?

Counter Girl—Yes'm.

Customer—The reason I ask is because the bread I got here yesterday wasn't.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The littler the girl the bigger charge of dynamite she can be for some man.

A man who is able to help support a lot of his relations always gets the chance.

What we mostly object to about a great talker is that we aren't doing it ourselves.

It discourages a woman to have her husband go shopping with her because he wants to buy something.

A man can sit up all night in a poker game and never feel it, but being kept awake one hour by the baby will break down his health.

A Hard-Working Congress.

Kansas City Star: Summed up to date, the results of the extra session of congress are:

Clothes at Cost.

Mary N. Vorst in Success Magazine: The one place in which we can find with any accuracy how much clothes actually cost is in the reports of the United States government, in which it is told how much the soldiers have to pay for their clothes. Here alone our feet are upon solid earth concerning the price of clothes.

The soldiers of the United States army wear good clothes—that is, clothes suitable for the purpose for which they are designed, and clothes that with ordinary protection will stand a great deal of wear and yet continue to look good.

The new olive-drab woolen uniform consisting of breeches and tunic costs the soldier $8.46; $5.28 for his coat and $3.18 for his breeches. His linen collar costs him 4 cents. His woolen olive-drab gloves cost 37 cents. His canvas puttees cost him 66 cents and he can buy woolen mittens for 30 cents and overalls for 57 cents. His stockings cost him as follows: Cotton, 8 cents; heavy woolen, 24 cents; light woolen, 14 cents. His dress trousers of 22-ounce kersey, the material of which is sold to officers at $2.30 a yard, cost $3.03, and his dress coat of the same material is $5.76. He pays for his khaki breeches $1.87 and for his khaki service coat $1.58. His chambray shirt is 52 cents, the olive-drab flannel shirt $2.94 and the muslin one only 31 cents.

The most expensive item of all his equipment is his olive-drab overcoat, which costs him $15.11. These clothes are sold to the soldier at cost plus a very tiny additional price which the government has to pay for storage, and in the case of the organized militia with the cost of packing added.

More Speed Victims.

New York Globe: When our motor boats take to jumping out of the water and running amuck in the crowds of spectators on dry land, it seems almost time to call a halt in the prevailing speed mania. At Buffalo on Saturday Dixie IV., the latest aqueous speed marvel, climbed the terrestrial bank at one of the turns, in emulation apparently of her automobile cousins, and before the crowd could get out of the way two boys were so severely crushed that they are not expected to live. This accident is apparently entirely unique.

On the same day at Syracuse an automobile crashed through a fence on the turn into the home stretch and ploughed its way into a dense crowd, killing ten persons before it stopped and injuring a number of others. There seems little excuse for permitting conditions under which such a catastrophe could occur. The Dixie's murderous runaway could not have been foreseen, but it is obvious to the merest tyro in automobile racing that the outer edge of all turns on a motor speedway are points of danger.

Any failure in the tires or mechanism of a car running at high speed on a curve is likely to throw the latter like a catapult off the track. The Syracuse accident is the worst in the history of motor car racing, and it is to be hoped that it will stimulate police authorities to the enforcement of precautions that will prevent any such horror in the future. Reasonable care for the safety of the spectators would provide two fences with considerable space between them at least on the outside of all turns if not entirely around the tracks.

One on Bill Nye.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Whenever a member of congress has a story to tell about that famous humorist, "Bill" Nye, he hunts up Representative Frank M. Nye of Minnesota, his brother. Representative Edwin C. Gould of Maine cornered Nye in the lobby of the capitol the other day and said that while most of the stories that are told have been jokes which "Bill" Nye turned on the other fellow, yet he remembered an incident where the joke was on the humorist.

"Your brother was living in New York at the time," said Gould, "and a neighbor from Shirley, Me., where you both were born, dropped in to see him.

"'You know the old house is about all that is left of the town,' remarked the visitor.

"'Yes, I suppose that's so,' said Nye.

"'They think a great deal of you there. The old house stands on the corner, and they have put a tablet in front of it.'

"'Bill' was all attention. He leaned forward and inquired:

"'What was on the tablet?'

"'Eight miles to Readville,' said the visitor."

Worked Two Ways.

New York Mail: He had sung several times during the evening, and his friends had murmured words of praise, then escaped as quickly as possible.

But as he was going homeward he managed to catch one of these self-same friends, and he insisted on the truthful opinion.

"You see," he explained, "I don't quite know how to take Miss Cuteon's comment on my performances tonight."

"No—really! Why—what did she say?" asked the friend hopefully.

"Well, she said she'd heard Caruso several times and thought his voice was excellent, but she was quite certain that mine was better still."

No Hope.

Chicago Record-Herald: "I'm afraid," she said, "that I never can learn to be a real bohemian."

"Why?" he asked.

FIGHT HARD FOR KIMBALL

Friends of Virginia Fourth Ward Alderman Working to Save Him.

Question of Immediate City Ownership Said to Hang on Outcome.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Progressive league is making a hard fight in the Fourth ward to defeat Alderman J. L. Kimball in the recall election to be held tomorrow, but friends of the alderman are confident of his election, while the immediate municipal ownership advocates are apparently as confident of his defeat. A victory for Alderman Kimball will prove a dampener on the efforts of those favoring almost immediate municipal ownership of the water and light plant, while it will encourage those who favor waiting till 1913 before buying or establishing a sinking fund with which to purchase or establish a plant without issuing bonds to meet the expense of either proposition.

Progressives to Get Busy.

It is expected that in case Alderman Kimball is defeated, the Progressive league and those in sympathy with that organization will at once proceed to organize for the municipal election to take place next February with the hope of electing a council favoring municipal ownership in 1913, the earliest year in which it is possible under the terms of the franchise of the Virginia Electric Light, Power & Water company to purchase the plant, as commonly understood by immediate municipal ownership advocates.

No matter how the election results, the petition providing for the appointment of a special water and light commission will come before the council for its consideration, either through the passage of the proposed ordinance, or the submission of the proposition to the voters at a special election soon, according to the provisions of the city charter, so that the municipal ownership issue will be before the entire city, whether Alderman Kimball retains his seat in the council or is defeated.

SAM Y. GORDON IS VISITING ON RANGE

Lieutenant Governor Meeting Old Friends and Sizing Up Things.

Chisholm, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Denying there is any political significance in his visit Lieutenant Governor Sam Y. Gordon of Browns Valley, Minn., is renewing old acquaintances in this section. He is the guest of J. S. Arneson, a local editor and former private secretary, and Representative Knapp.

The trio motored to Eveleth to meet Senator Boyle and spent part of Sunday at the Oliver club on Sturgeon lake. He will also look over mines today and tomorrow before leaving for home.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES WILL HAVE ELECTION.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A meeting of the board of directors of the Associated Charities will be held tomorrow to make final arrangements for the annual election of the organization next month. The present board of directors was appointed by Mayor Jacob S. Saari who is serving as chairman.

The finance committee is making an active membership campaign and all contributors donating from $5 to $10 will be allowed at next month's election. Many demands for clothes and other wearables have been made by the poor of this city and Secretary Dr. N. C. Bulkley is endeavoring to supply their needs. It is desired that those who are able contribute clothes or other goods on hand.

HIBBING ELKS TO ENTERTAIN

Will Give Concert Tuesday With Noted Musicians on Hand.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Local Elks are working hard to insure the success of the entertainment to be given at the Healy theater tomorrow evening.

The star event of the evening will be the Schubert Symphony club and Lady uartet of Milwaukee, who are noted as entertainers.

A large number of tickets has already been sold and it is expected the theater will be packed.

James McIlhargey of Duluth, who has been visiting with his brother, Chief McIlhargey of the fire department, left today for San Diego, Cal., to make his future home. Mr. McIlhargey was formerly in the real estate business in Duluth.

DELAY RESULTS.

Buhl Not Certain About Site for Proposed School Building.

Buhl, Minn., Sept. 25.—Delay in calling for bids for the construction of the basement of the new school has been caused by failure of the mining company interested to give its decision as to donating the ground upon which the school is to be erected.

The board will effect a saving of about $4,000 by discarding the sites voted upon at a recent election and it is loath to do anything definite until such time as the mining company decides as to its action.

The bid of Supt. Savage of the Shenango Furnace company, for supplying water and light to the village of Kinney, has been placed in the hands of Recorder Turppa and will be submitted for consideration at the next regular monthly meeting of the council.

EVIDENCE LACKING.

Alleged Chisholm Blind - Piggers Are Given Freedom.

Chisholm, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unable to produce the necessary evidence the charges of blind-pigging against Milo Stockish, Mrs. Martin Shuss, Toney Stanisha and Toney Musikoff, who were brought here from Kinney and Lucknow and placed in jail, were dismissed for lack of evidence. Mrs. Shuss was released on bail furnished by Chisholm friends, as she had a small baby in her arms when brought to the lock-up and also two children at her side. The officer, John Jarvey of Kinney, who caused the arrest of the defendants, could not produce the witnesses nor furnish evidence sufficient to make a case and Judge Masters accordingly dismissed the actions.

HIGHER NECESSARIES.

Virginia Feeling Effect of Defeat of Reciprocity.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Consumers of bread are feeling the effect of the Canadian election in the advance in the price of flour up to today of 30 cents a barrel, with the indications that there will be a further rise this week.

TWO HARBORS GETS SHOCK

By Arrest of P. J. McAlpin, Water and Light Clerk.

Old City Employe Is Alleged to Be Short About $12,000.

Two Harbors, Minn., Sept. 25—(Special to The Herald.)—The biggest kind of a sensation was sprung here late Saturday night when P. J. McAlpine, aged 33, single, for sixteen years a resident of Two Harbors, who has been water and light collector since 1902, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mayor Alex Halliday, charging embezzlement of $12,000 of city funds. As it was late at night and the next day was Sunday the accused spent Sunday in the county jail but expects to get bonds. He had not been released at 1 p. m. today.

The accused was popular and had the confidence of everybody and his friends are at a loss to understand what could have happened that resulted in his arrest.

It is reported there will be later and more senastional developments.

Council Hires Auditors.

Last March the old council hired August Omtvedt with H. H. Seitz to assist in auditing the books of the water and light collector up to the first of the year. When the new council took its seat it ordered that the books be audited up to date. Many people have suspected heretofore that McAlpine was short, but no proof could be had until the books were properly audited. Some think that the deficiency was due to negligence but that such a large amount could be deficient seems impossible.

It is said that McAlpine was in the habit of dating his receipt stubs from two to four months ahead. Thus he was always able to keep about three months' collections out. Omtvedt Saturday afternoon found a shortage. Mayor Alex Halliday immediately swore out the warrant. It was rumored that McAlpine had left town, but there was no truth in this. He was arrested late Saturday night.

McAlpine was under $3,000 bonds. He has a number of influential friends here, and is is reported they may come forward and settle the alleged shortage. It is said also that the accused has been spending considerable money of late for automobiles and other luxuries, and that if it is proven that he is short in his accounts, as claimed, he will not be able to make up the deficiency.

It is said there is no politics back of McAlpine's arrest, and that the affair is not overstated in its sensational features.

ATTACKS OFFICERS.

Brooklyn Man Alleged to Have Drawn Weapons.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Steve Furn, who lives in the Brooklyn addition, is in jail awaiting hearing on the charge of drawing weapons on an officer. It is alleged that last evening while the worse for liquor Furn drew a knife on Officer Corey then backed this up with a pistol when the officer sought to arrest him for being drunk on the street. He will have a hearing Thursday afternoon.

MOHAMIS BEAT FITWELLS.

Virginia Ball Club Has Ended Winning Season.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the last game of baseball of the season here Sunday, the Mohami club team defeated the Fitwells of Duluth by the score of 6 to 2 in a well played contest. The Mohami team lost only two games during the entire season and won a dozen, making the best showing in years. As the Mohamis are amateurs and are representatives of the Oliver club, the showing is remarkably good and Manager Clark has reason to be proud of his work of the season.

EVELETH WORK BEING RUSHED

Duluth and Superior Contractors Are Hustling on Their Jobs.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pastoret & Lawrence of Duluth have commenced work on their contract installing sewers on Cleveland, Hayes and Harrison streets. Large crews are being employed and work will be rushed rapidly to assure the completion of the contract before cold weather sets in. A small shop has been erected by the contractors on Harrison street. The laborers are at present working on Hayes street.

The Duluth firm also has the contract for installing a sewer and water main on Elba avenue. Material for the improvement has arrived and the work will be done this fall. It is undecided whether the outlet of the Elba avenue sewer will be built this fall. This improvement will likely be let in a separate contract.

Contractor Donlin of Superior is rushing the work on the new $60,000 Fayal school. Steel has been placed on the ground and the masons are now doing much work. Interior work will start as soon as possible, it being the desire of the school board and the contractor to have the building ready for occupancy by the latter part of January.

W. J. Sullivan of the firm of Sullivan, Round & Elleby, Duluth, architects for the new $15,000 fire hall, was here yesterday to arrange the final details for the building. Bids for the erection of the new hall have been advertised for, and according to present plans the badly needed fire hall will be built this fall.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Failing health and the need for a rest has compelled Rev. Father Clement Gomache to resign his charge as pastor of the Blessed Sacrament church here. He will leave in a few weeks for the south in the hope the change in climate will bring relief.

Father Gomache surprised his congregation yesterday by making the announcement. He has been pastor of the local parish for sixteen years and has endeared himself to the entire parish and to non-Catholics. It is expected Bishop McGolrick will announce Father Gomache's successor in a few days.

KELLY FACING SERIOUS CHARGE

Arrested for Killing Partridge, Is Charged With Horse Theft.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. J. Kelly arrested yesterday with Matt Mattson and Andrew Roberts for killing partridges out of season and released on $50 bail pending a hearing tomorrow afternoon, was not out of jail long as he was rearrested charged with horse stealing. It is alleged he stole a village fire horse. Bail on the more serious charge was fixed at $275, the value of the animal and up to 2 this afternoon Kelly had not been able to secure bonds. His hearing on the horse theft charge was fixed for Thursday at 3 p. m.

Kelly has been sought for several days for the horse theft. Four days ago Dexter, a horse belonging to the fire department and temporarily in pasture, where it was recovering from a lame shoulder, disappeared. Kelly is claimed to have left the animal at the barn of Jackson McHardy, a farmer near Stingey lake. Later he came and led it to Andrew Johnson's barn near by and there it was recovered Saturday by Policeman Bolange and Chief Charles McIlargey of the fire department, who were notified by Mr. Johnson.

Both Johnson and McIlargey will be called to testify against Kelly Thursday.

BATTLESHIP BLOWS UP IN THE TOULON HARBOR; MAY BE OVER 500 DEAD

ly despatched men and fire apparatus to the aid of their sister ship.

Presently minor explosions began within the Liberte and many seamen flung themselves overboard.

Cries of "Save yourselves; fire near magazine!" could be heard ringing across the water in the stillness of the clear morning.

Many Leaped Overboard.

From every side scores of sailors leaped overboard and swam frantically for safety, but scarcely more than 100 had plunged into the water before the series of detonations culminated in a terrific explosion that seemed to tear out the side of the great steel vessel.

In a moment bodies and debris were floating about in the disturbed waters which splashed around the upper works. In a wide circle around the spot where the craft had floated so proudly minutes before the seamen who escaped death were struggling desperately and small boats were picking up as many as they could reach.

Was at New York.

The Liberte, with the battleship Verite and the flagship Justice, represented the French government at the Hudson-Fulton celebration at New York two years ago.

The battleship Liberte was the type of ship of the so-called Liberte class in the French navy—a boat of 14,900 tons displacement, and an over-all length of 462 feet. She carried a crew of 793 men and bore four 12-inch guns and ten guns of the French 7.6-inch type. She also had twenty-three small guns and four torpedo tubes. She was completed in 1907 at a cost of about $7,000,000.

The Liberte class battleships include the Democratie, the Justice, the Verite and the Liberte, all 18 knot vessels of the most modern type. They correspond approximately to the five American battleships of the New Jersey class, including the Virginia, Georgia, Nebraska, Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Shock to Government.

Paris, Sept. 25.—The news of the explosion of the magazines of the battleship Liberte came as a stunning blow to the French public and to naval officials. It is the climax of a long series of disasters which have marked the history of the French navy since the blowing up of the battleship Iena on March 3, 1907.

The accounts of the disaster, as received here during the morning hours, varied widely. The most authentic dispatches stated that the sinking came nearly two hours after the discovery of fire in the forward hold. Another account said that the ship broke in half from the force of the explosion and sank twenty minutes later. According to this version, the battleship afterwards reappeared at the surface for a time, a grim carcass of iron surrounded by a tangled mass of wreckage.

Series of Disasters.

The recent history of the French navy contains a series of disastrous accidents, most of them caused by explosions, and several occurring at Toulon, the scene of today's catastrophe.

March 12, 1907, the battleship Iena was almost destroyed by the explosion of her magazine and 107 officers and men lost their lives. Until today the Iena disaster stood as the greatest recent calamity suffered by the French navy in times of peace. Like the Liberte, the Iena was bdown up in the harbor of Toulon, but the loss of life was less, mainly because the Iena remained afloat.

An investigation of the Iena explosion resulted in an official report that it was due to spontaneous combustion of powder in a magazine where the temperature was too high on account of the proximity of the dynamo compartment.

Censured Navy Organization.

The report severely censured the organization of the navy, and said:

"The real cause of the disaster was the absence of accord, as well as the divisions and antagonisms existing in the different branches of the service. The distressing weakness of the central power explains the progressive weakening of our naval forces. Where will it lead us?"

A parliamentary committee appointed in 1907 presented a report scathingly condemning the naval administration of the preceding ten years, and recommending a complete reorganization with special attention to the elimination of red tape and the distribution of responsibility.

Some Recent Losses.

Other notable French naval disasters of recent years were:

Oct. 16, 1906—Submarine Lutin lost off Bizertai, 13 dead.

Feb. 8, 1907—Explosion on torpedo boat No. 339, 9 dead.

Feb. 19, 1907—Cruiser Jean Bart lost off the northwestern coast of Africa; no deaths.

Aug. 13, 1908—Gun exploded aboard school ship Couronne, at Toulon; 6 deaths.

Sept. 23, 1908—Gun exploded aboard cruiser Latouche Treville at Toulon; 13 dead.

May 27, 1910—Submarine Pluviose remained submerged after diving in the harbor of Calais; 27 dead.

Sept. 16, 1911—Gun exploded, aboard cruiser Gloire at Toulon; 1 man killed and 13 injured, 5 fatally.

"Ham and Sunny Side Up."

Newton, N. J., Sept. 25.—A passing train Sunday frightened a horse pulling a load of eggs and driven by Roy Ham. The horse bolted, the wagon tipped over and Ham and eggs were both precipitated into the street. When Ham scrambled from the eggs he resembled an animated omelet.

CASCARETS INSURE INSIDE CLEANLINESS

The Millions of Cascaret users never have Headache, Constipation, Biliousness or Sick Stomach.

It is more necessary that you keep your Bowels, Liver and Stomach clean, pure and fresh than it is to keep the sewers and drainage of a large city free from obstruction.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

No odds how badly and upset you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Have you noticed the growing importance in daily life of "Day Letters" and "Night Letters"?

They were an expedient yesterday. They are a prime necessity today.

CONSTABLE'S ASSAILANT ESCAPES FROM JAIL.

Carrington, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Deere, held in the Foster county jail on a charge of stabbing Constable Fred Beier, Jr., of this city, made his escape. Deere had been served supper and made his escape as a result of the failure of the turnkey to properly lock the cell door. Bud Floyd, another prisoner, could also have escaped, but instead of doing so, notified the officials of Deere's departure, as soon as he was able to do so.

Cloquet Postal Bank Popular.

Cloquet, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The postal savings bank which was established a short time time ago, is proving very popular, and it is surprising the number of children who are saving their small funds by entrusting them to Uncle Sam. There is at present deposited about $3,500.

How Is Your Weight?

While is is true that too much weight is not to be desired, yet the fact remains that many men and women are thin to the point of danger. This danger lies in their having no reserve force or nerve power to combat deadly diseases. A little extra flesh is needed by all to feel well and to look well, and this calls up the question of how best to increase the weight. Physicians and chemists, by experiments have solved the problem of increasing the white and red corpuscles of the blood, by the administration of 3 grain hypo-nuclane tablets, and this is always followed by an increase of weight. Obtain in sealed packages, and take for a period of several months according to directions with package.

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. Harriet E. Wampler, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

CLOQUET Y. M. C. A. HAS BOYS' RALLY

Program Given, Games Played and Sunday Addresses Heard.

Cloquet, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fall opening of the boys' department of the Cloquet Y. M. C. A., took place Saturday and on Sunday a rally was held in the rooms in response to the religious forward movement in other sections of the country. Saturday morning there was a phonograph concert in the club rooms, followed by a basket ball game in the gym between teams one and two.

There were various other programs of amusement carried out during the day, and in the evening, several of the boys presented a home talent play entitled, "The Millionaire Janitor." In the cast were Leo Gilbert, Walter Olin, J. Lyman Sheean, George Hoyt, Loren Sheean, Gilmore Sorenson, James Lightfoot. The play was followed by a basketball game between the working boys of the association and the high school boys, the latter winning by a score of 12 to 11. The boys proved themselves very good hosts, serving in a fine manner an appetizing lunch after the game to about 150 guests.

Sunday afternoon in the gymnasium, Sherman L. Coy of Cloquet, addressed the boys. Carl Bruno rendered a solo, and J. Lyman Sheean and Loren Sheean gave a piano duet. The management of the boys' department of the boys' department feels that the opening was by far the most successful held since the inauguration of the Junior Y in Cloquet.

CLOQUET PUBLIC MARKET.

Matter Is Being Agitated in the Sawmill City.

Cloquet, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is possible that Cloquet will establish a public market similar to that in Duluth, or erect a warehouse for the convenience of farmers and gardeners in the vicinity. The necessity for such a place is very apparent this fall, as there has been a record crop on all the farms and gardens, and for the first time in the history of the city, a far greater amount has been raised that can be disposed of or consumed locally, and systematic shipping has become a problem.

Other years local farmers could always dispose of all the potatoes they raised to the outfitters of logging camps, but logging the coming winter will not be nearly as heavy as in former years, and there will be a consequently smaller demand for tubers and other vegetables at the logging camps. There is an excellent opening here for some one acquainted with the business of buying and shipping produce, and a committee has been appointed to look up a location for warehouse or market, as may seem advisable, and investigate how best to supply a very apparent need of the Carlton county farmers. The committee consists of B. J. Summerfield, Oscar Anderson, Olaus Johnson and L. A. Fish.

EXPRESS RATES HELD TOO HIGH

North Dakota Railroad Commission Does Not Mince Words in Saying So.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Declaration that all express rates in North Dakota are too high is made by the state railroad commission in turning down the application of the state launderers for lower rates.

The commission states that the granting of the plea of the laundry men for a lower rate on laundry consignments would be discriminatory and in order to effect it, it would be necessary to order reductions of rates on other classifications. The board also holds that the plea that is made for the placing dry cleaning articles in the same class as laundry is not well founded, and cannot be granted.

"The commission is convinced that all express rates in this state are too high," says the board, "and it is the aim and intention of this commission ultimately to secure and enforce a substantial reduction of intra-state rates of all classifications, and to this end has for more than a year past and is now earnestly engaged in an investigation of this subject. We believe that the rates for the different classifications are evenly balanced, though uniformly too high, and that the remedy to the petitioners should come in a horizontal reduction of all express rates, and not by a discriminatory reduction of this commodity alone."

EXPOSITION TO OPEN TUESDAY

CANNOT REVOKE FRANCHISE.

North Dakota Supreme Court Rules Against State Law.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Under the decision of the supreme court of North Dakota the secretary of state is without power to revoke the franchise of a corporation, such power being judicial in its nature and the law that makes provision for such course of proceedure is unconstitutional and of no effect.

The decision is made in the case of the Standard Oil company, ex rel of the State of North Dakota vs. Alfred Hjalmarson, former secretary of state. The action involved a hearing ordered by the secretary of state on the question of whether or not the Standard Oil company's right to transact business in North Dakota should be abolished on the ground of unfair discrimination. The Standard Oil company applied for a writ of certiorari in the district court of Burleigh county directed against the state, but was unsuccessful. An appeal to the supreme court has now resulted in the reversal of the lower court and the declaration that the law on which the original steps were taken is invalid.

WANT UNIFORM LAWS.

North Dakota Clerks of Court So Decide.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Establishment of uniformity in the laws governing the duties of the county clerks of court will be sought by a committee of the State association which met here last week. This committee will prosecute an investigation into the general laws that cover the office duties and will make a report at the next meeting in which remedies will be suggested.

The election of officers resulted: President, W. M. Spaulding, Grand Forks; vice-president, George T. Richmond, Stutsman; secretary, Herman Stenseth, Ramsey; treasurer, August Bergman, Richland. Wahpeton was selected as the place for the 1912 convention.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the results of the visit to this state of Lieutenant Governor Nichols of Ohio in the interest of Governor Harmon's candidacy for the presidency will be a Woodrow Wilson club which is being organized here by those who advocate the nomination of the New Jersey governor rather than the Ohio executive.

REFUSED "COFFIN NAILS."

Anti-Cigarette Lid Is Clamped Down in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 25.—It required gumshoes and a long standing acquaintanceship to get a package of cigarettes in Minneapolis Sunday.

In most tobacco stores even these credentials were unavailing. The clamping down of the "lid" followed the arrest late Saturday night of three clerks in cigar stores under the anti-cigarette law passed by the state legislature in 1909. A test case will be made.

CLOQUET SAWMILL IS PLANNING TO RESUME.

Cloquet, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Repair work on the Northern Lumber company's upper mill is being completed as rapidly as possible, with a view to starting up the mill the first of October. It may be possible that the mill will run all winter, but however, it will run until the freeze-up. A considerable amount of concrete work has been put in the foundations of the mill, and a new sand pump, operated by electric power, has been purchased. This will be used all along the river banks, wherever the power can be transmitted, and will be a great assistance in cleaning out the sand and debris that accumulates. The waste material will be run through pipes and dumped on Posey island.

Now Nature Makes New Complexions

(From The Family Physician.)

It is well known that the human skin is constantly undergoing a tearing down and building up process. With advancing years or waning vitality this tissue-change lags; the lifeless, soiled surface skin stays on so long that its owner gets a "poor complexion."

Common sense tells us this dead skin cannot be enlivened or beautified by any cosmetic, lotion or powder. The natural thing to do is to remove the offensive skin—remove the bad complexion. It has been found that ordinary mercolized wax completely absorbs the devitalized skin, in minute particles, so gently, gradually, as to cause no inconvenience. Mercolized wax, which any druggist can supply, is put on at night like cold cream, only not rubbed in, and washed off in the morning. If you would have a brilliantly beautiful complexion, just use this simple treatment.

ONE OF DULUTH'S BEST LOVED CITIZENS IS CALLED

B. G. SEGOG.

All Duluth mourns the loss of Byron G. Segog, who passed away at 7:35 o'clock Saturday evening at Rochester of Bright's disease, from which he had been suffering for many months.

"By" Segog was beloved by all who knew him. Big-hearted, loyal, open-handed, always an optimist, he radiated an atmosphere of cheerfulness which lightened any gathering in which he happened to be.

Since he came to the Head of the Lakes twenty-six years ago he has been in the front rank of Duluth's prominent citizens. His unbounded faith in the city was never shaken.

His many acts of charity and kindness will never all be known. His purse was always wide open to the needy and unfortunate, and many men down on their luck have been given new confidence in themselves and started on the road to success by his ever-ready assistance and wise counsel. Families too numerous to mention have had real Thanksgivings and merry Christmases through his generosity. But he did not confine his good deeds to special days. It was the same week in and week out, year after year, as was always the same "By" Segog, and no needy person ever left "By" empty-handed.

Political honors he did not seek, though they might have been his for the asking. He took a deep interest in the affairs of the city and the state, but material rewards in the way of office were not what he desired.

His home life was ideal.

He was one of the successful business men of the city and was general agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, with offices at 201 New Jersey building. His son, Ray Segog, has been associated with him in the insurance business.

Mr. Segog was 53 years of age, having been born in Jackson, Mich., in 1858, coming to Duluth shortly after it had outgrown its swaddling village clothes. Since that time he has been one of the most enthusiastic and consistent "boosters" residing in the Zenith City. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Elks and Knights of Pythias lodges of this city.

Mr. Segog is survived by his widow and four children, Ray, Gladys, Dorothy and Dwight, residing at the family home, 124 East Third street.

Although it was recognized that Mr. Segog was seriously ill, his death was not expected so soon. He had consulted several local physicians of high standing. Last Wednesday he left for Rochester to see if he could be given any relief there. Thursday his condition became worse and he went into a state of coma from which he never rallied. His brother, John Segog, was at his bedside when the end came.

The body will be taken to the Masonic temple tomorrow at 11 o'clock. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the temple, Lake avenue and Second street. The services will be under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity and the ritual of the order will be observed. The members of the other lodges of which he was a member will attend in a body. Interment will be at Forest Hill cemetery.

Will Be Missed.

"No man on the streets of Duluth will be missed as much as 'By' Segog."

That expression, heard on Superior street this morning, typifies the universal esteem in which the late Mr. Segog was held. It exemplifies his popularity and the feeling towards him throughout the city.

Scores of incidents could be told of his generosity. "What he put in his pocket with one hand he was constantly taking out with the other," said an intimate friend today. "I have known him to borrow money in order to help out a fellow with a worthy cause. 'The poor devil was handed a package,' was his excuse, when giving away really more than he could afford."

Louis Dworshak, photographer and prominent in local musical circles, told of one case of assistance of which he knew personally. A young woman with musical talent was sent to Chicago by him to complete her musical education and she is now in a position to give lessons so that she can support herself and earn sufficient funds to continue that education if she so desires. "He was always deeply interested in musical matters and did much to forward them in Duluth," said Mr. Dworshak. "He always declared that music was beyond him, but that he enjoyed it and knew that it was good for the city. Duluth lost one of her most valuable citizens in the death of Mr. Segog."

A Diamond Polished.

"I heard a man remark yesterday that 'By' Segog was a diamond in the rough," said L. P. Totman. "He was a diamond, polished. He was one of the finest men that ever lived and I never expect to meet another like him. His charity was unbounded and he did a vast amount of good of which no one except his beneficiaries will ever know. I know of at least half a dozen cases where some family in unfortunate circumstances has been afflicted by death and he has come forward with all the funeral expenses."

Another told of an incident some time ago when he saved a number of young men from probable disgrace and possible imprisonment. They were employes of a large railroad running through the city and through too fast living had become short in their accounts. "By" Segog learned of their straits and loaned them enough money to make up the differences.

Time and again it is stated that he has kept up the premiums of insurance policies when the holders, through sickness or some other good reason, were unable to meet them. One instance was cited this morning where he paid a premium of $900. Had this not been done the family would have been unable to collect on a policy of $20,000, which was paid to them upon the death of the man who had taken it out.

Not so long ago an old man whom he had known in his better days, was sent to the poor farm. He railed against the fate which had been so unkind to him. But "By" proved his good angel. He brought him into the city, found a home for him, and paid his board until his death, two years later.

The late Fred Reynolds, who was suffering from a disease similar to his were great friends. Mr. Segog remarked that he would be satisfied to die, if he could out-live Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds died about a month ago, and Mr. Segog took his death much to heart.

The remarkable character of the man is shown by his fortitude and cheerfulness in the face of the knowledge that he knew that his time on this earth was limited. About a year ago physicians he had consulted told him that he had but a year or eighteen months to live. But he did not go into seclusion; he continued to go about his business as usual. He had the same warm smile and happy greeting for everybody, and was at his desk regularly until a few days ago.

Members of the fire department know of much good that he has done, and the men at the various stations particularly in the downtown districts, could tell many incidents of his life.
